HOOVER WINS POLL; ISSUES ECONOMIC

EPISCOPALIANS ASK CHURCH TO BANISH DIVORCE

Proposed Canon Change Would Remove All Legal Causes.

RIGHT TO REMARRY IS KEPT IN NEW ACT

Committee Seeks Laity's Opinions Before Final Vote in Denver.

REVISION IS RESULT OF CAREFUL STUDY

Report Now Given Publicity Is Work of Commission Appointed in 1925.

Sweeping changes in the canon law of the Episcopal Church which will remove all causes for divorce from its canons and yet enable the remarriage of divorced persons under certain circumstances by ministers of that church are contained in a tentative new canon on divorce which will be presented to the general convention meeting in Denver, Col., September 16 next.

News of this tentative canon was made public in Washington last night by the Rev. Dr. D. Wellington Curran, executive secretary of the Diocese of Washington, in a desire to acquaint the people and clergy of Washington Diocese as quickly as possible with the terms of the proposal which would revolutionize the entire handling of marriage and divorce by the Episcopal Church.

The Right Rev. Herman Page, Bishop of Michigan, who is chairman of the joint commission on divorce, in a statement declared that "since the Washington general convention in 1928 the commission has given its chief attention to a revision of the church's canon on matrimony. A careful study has been made of the ancient canon law of the church, under the direction of Prof. Beale and the other lawyers who are members of the commission with the result that the commission is now presenting for discussion an entire revision of canon 43, entitled 'Of Matrimony.' The commission, however, considers this proposed canon as only tentative, and desires to give it the widest possible publicity for the purpose of invoking discussion and criticism. There are certain matters in the canon on which the commission feels that it needs much light from the church itself. On the basis of criticism received the commission will hold another meeting and consider further amendment of the canon before making its final report to the convention, which will be held in Denver in September."

Features in Proposal.

The features of the proposed new canon are these:

Section V. That the bishop of ecclesiastic court of the diocese or district where a petitioner is domiciled may declare a marriage null for one of the following reasons, existing at the time of the marriage.

1. Lack of free consent.
2. Failure of either party to have reached the age of puberty.
3. Impotence of either party.
4. Mental deficiency of either party sufficient to prevent the exercise of intelligent choice.
5. Insanity of either party.
6. Consanguinity (whether of the whole or of the half blood) within the following degrees:
   (a) One may not marry his ascendant or descendant.
   (b) One may not marry his sister.
   (c) One may not marry the sister or brother of his ascendant or the descendant of his sister or brother.
7. Mistake as to the other party to the marriage.
8. The existence of venereal disease.
9. Previous marriage, unless the other spouse has died or the previous marriage has been declared null or a divorce has been granted by a civil court.

A person whose former marriage has been annulled by a bishop or an ecclesiosrical court and dissolved by a civil court may be married as if he had never precioubly been married..

Man, 55, to Attempt Sea Hop to Denmark

Buys Plane, Hires Pilot to Fullfil Dream; Here Today.

For several years Otto Hillig, Liberty, N. Y., photographer, has dreamed of a flight across the ocean. Once he almost attained his goal and made history—but not the kind of history in his dreams. That was the time he plastered a $125,000 attachment on the Graf Zeppelin after he had been refused passage on the famous world flight.

Now, Mr. Hillig, tired of waiting for a chance to cross the ocean in somebody else's plane, is going to attempt his own personally conducted flight across the Atlantic. To that end he has purchased a single-motored Bellanca plane at a price of $25,000 and will fly to Washington today from Wilmington to arrange details of the trip.

No flier himself, he has engaged the services of a competent pilot in the person of Holgar Hoiriis, of Danish extraction, and the two men have projected a flight from Roosevelt Field to Copenhagen, Denmark.

U. S. ATTORNEY TO REOPEN QUIZ IN HUFF KILLING

Father of Pistol Victim Claims New Evidence Against Dulaney.

CONDUCTOR, FAMILY PAINED BY DECISION

Hume Spring Man Refuses to Discuss His Case; Will Not Ask Death.

The case of Hurtha Ira Dulaney, released by a District grand jury after he shot to death William L. Huff, of Hume Spring, Va., whom he found in his wife's apartment, will be reopened before the new grand jury, opening its sessions May 4.

United States Attorney Leo A. Rover yesterday announced that "new evidence" uncovered by Albert A. Huff, of Hume Spring, father of the dead man, will be presented to the jury at that time. He declined to disclose the nature of the evidence.

Dulaney, a street car conductor, returned to his apartment on H street near Thirteenth northeast with a policeman on the night of March 9, left the officer to cover a rear exit under the impression there was a burglar in the house and then surprised Huff with his wife.

Decision Shocks Family.

Grasping a revolver from beneath a pillow in the bedroom, police said, Dulaney fired three shots into Huff as he fled the apartment, one bullet entering his head.

Word of the district attorney's decision came as something of a shock to the Dulaneys, now reunited and living with Mrs. Dulaney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Johnson, in a little house on L street, near Nineteenth street northeast.

Dulaney was "lying down" when a reporter from The Post called last night, but his father-in-law, a motorman on the same street car line, painted a word picture of the keen disappointment they all felt at the decision to reopen the case.

Mrs. Dulaney expressed confidence that her husband would again be released.

Thinks Husband Justified.

"I think Hurtha was entirely justified in what he did," she said, calmly. Dulaney said he preferred not to make a statement, referring the newspapermen to his attorney, James A. O'Shea.

"We have all been very happy since we moved out here together," Johnson told The Post reporter. "We thought that it had all just about blown over, and so we were surprised and disappointed when we read Mr. Rover's decision in the papers. I'm not greatly worried. No jury in the world would convict that boy."

Mrs. Johnson said she and her daughter had just about succeeded in nursing all of their children back to health. The Dulaneys have four. Mrs. Johnson said that only the youngest

BENJAMIN SEEN AS ORGANIZING HOOVER FORCES

Californian Is Regarded as Heading Movement for Renomination.

(Associated Press.)

Organization of the Hoover forces looking to the renomination of the President by the Republicans next year is under way with Raymond Benjamin, of San Francisco, a personal friend of Mr. Hoover, taking a prominent role.

Mr. Benjamin came to Washington last winter and has established a law office here. He has no direct relation with the Republican national committee.

However, his recent activity and conversations with Republican leaders close to the administration have given these party chieftains the understanding that Benjamin is looking after the political fences of the President.

Politics Is His Pastime.

Mr. Benjamin, a veteran in politics, declined to discuss the subject other than to say he was interested in politics as a pastime and has no ambitions whatever for public office of any kind for himself.

As for his relations with the President, Mr. Benjamin concedes he is certainly friendly to Mr. Hoover, but he insists his coming to Washington to establish a law office in a building near Republican national committee headquarters was of his own volition.

Mr. Benjamin came to the Capital in 1928 to assist in the Hoover election campaign. Because of his close relationship with the President his present activity is regarded by Republicans as indication of an intention on the part of Mr. Hoover to follow the age-old custom of standing for a second term.

However, Mr. Benjamin says he has received no indication whatever from

BUTLER SLUR NOT INTENDED, ENVOY CLAIMS

Haitian Minister Declares He Was Misquoted in Protested Story.

STATE DEPARTMENT INQUIRY IS BEGUN

Bellegarde May Be Asked to Explain Remark on Capture of Fort.

A tall, dark-skinned diplomat, Dantes Bellegarde, Minister to the United States from Haiti, was just about the most surprised man in Washington yesterday.

Besieged by reporters, who wanted to know if it were true that he had slurred Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler by casting doubt on the Marine's heroic exploit in Haiti, Minister Bellegarde, in exquisite French, exclaimed:

"Mais, non!"

To a Washington Post reporter who called on him, he asked:

"Parlez vous francais?"

"Oui, A. E. F. French," the reporter replied.

Interpreter Is Called In.

This evidently went over the Minister's head, so he called in an interpreter—Lucien Hibbert, who is professor of French at Howard University.

Through Dr. Hibbert, Minister Bellegarde explained that, in talking to a Washington Herald reporter on April 12, he merely stated that ne had never seen the fort that Gen. Butler captured in Haiti. Moreover, he said he did not know any other Haitian who had ever seen it or read of it outside of American newspapers and magazines.

"But," said Minister Bellegarde through his interpreter, "I did not contend that no such fort existed. I merely contended that I did not know of its existence."

Denies He Meant Slur.

Asserting that the Herald reporter misquoted him in certain instances, the Minister added:

"I certainly did not mean to slur

(Copyright, 1931, By The Washington Post.)

A poll conducted by The Washington Post among the delegates and the alternates to the Republican national convention of 1928 shows an overwhelming, an almost unanimous, sentiment in favor of nominating Herbert Hoover for a second term as President.

From every section of the country—the Northeast, the South, the Central West, the Rocky Mountain area, and the Far West—came predictions that President Hoover would again be his party's choice in 1932.

This bears out the conviction of political experts, who have pointed out that in the last 60 years only three Presidents have been denied the nomination for a second term—Johnson, Hayes and Arthur.

Of the delegates and alternates who ventured an opinion, 492 predicted that President Hoover would be renominated, while only 29 dissented from this view. Four said it was "doubtful" whether the President would be renominated. There were some who withheld an expression.

Curtis "If He Wants It."

With regard to the Vice Presidential nomination, the poll revealed a vast amount of uncertainty among those who responded to The Post's questionnaire. While a majority, or 247, thought the nomination would again go to Vice President Charles Curtis "if he wants it," 162 of them suggested somebody else.

On the question of issues, there was a wide variance of opinion, but the consensus was that economic conditions—business, unemployment and collateral matters—would be in the forefront in 1932.

Prohibition, according to the consensus, would be a close secbnd, with farm relief, the tariff, electric power, Tammany and the world court trailing in the order named. As some delegates pointed out, the tariff and farm relief might very well be placed under the head of economic conditions.

Scope of Post Poll.

The character of The Post poll may be judged from this excerpt from the questionnaire:

Will you, as one of those who participated in the deliberations at Kansas City, be good enough to indicate your viewpoint on the following questions:

Who will be the Republican nominee for President?

Who will be the Republican nominee for Vice President?

Please indicate by number—in the order which you think they will rank as campaign issues—the following subjects:

Prohibition.
Economic issues.
Farm relief.
Tammany corruption.
Power control.
The World Court.
Tariff.

The 1928 delegates also were asked to make any comment they wished to make in connection with the 1932 campaign.

In their general comment, the delegates and alternates of 1928—many of whom will be at the 1932 convention—seemed agreed that the most formidable nominee the Democrats could put up is Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York.

While the delegates generally were hopeful that the Republican party

WAGNER TO REENTER JOBLESS PROPOSAL

Criticizes Hoover for Veto and Foresees Passage, Despite Opposition.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Wagner announced last night he will reintroduce in the next Congress his bill to provide a nation-wide system of employment offices which was vetoed by President Hoover at the end of the last session.

Speaking over the Columbia Broadcasting system, the New York Democrat criticized the President for vetoeing the bill and predicted it would be passed despite Presidential opposition.

"There is not an authority on the subject upon whom Mr. Hoover can lean to sustain his veto," Mr. Wagner said.

He added the bill had been indorsed by President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and other labor leaders, outstanding economists and Secretary of Labor Doak, before he became a member of the cabinet.

"In fact," Mr. Wagner said, "it is common knowledge that the members of Mr. Hoover's own emergency commission, headed by Col. Woods indorsed the bill and urged the President to sign it."

Mr. Wagner also contended the measure corresponded with the recommendations of the President's conference of 1921 of which Mr. Hoover was chairman. He added:

"I am certain of this, the President's veto has only delayed the achievement of the purpose embraced in the employment service bill. We shall yet have an employment service of which the United States will be proud, if not with the President's approval, then without it."

COUZENS ASKS TAX RAISE FOR WEALTHY

Senator Also Favors Revival of "Gift Levy" on Property Transfers.

(Associated Press.)

Higher taxes on the rich were advocated yesterday by Senator Couzens to help meet Government expenses.

The Michigan Republican, a wealthy man himself, also proposed revival of the levy on transfers of property and money before death, known as the gift tax, and relief from community property laws in several States under which husbands and wives are permitted to file separate income tax returns.

At the same time, Chairman Wood, of the House appropriations committee, urged elimination of all extraordinary Federal expenditures to prevent a tax increase. The Government faces a prospective $700,000,000 deficit at the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

Commenting on President Hoover's estimate Friday that expenditures in the next fiscal year would drop $315,000,000 below this year's estimate, Mr. Wood said: "It is up to every individual congressman to hold down expenditures."

Under Senator Couzens' plan, the fourth advanced for tax increases in recent weeks by regular and independent Republicans, the normal tax rates, or those affecting the small taxpayer, would be left alone.

President Hoover has said higher taxes could be avoided if the next Congress adhered to budget recommendations of the administration.

Like Couzens, Senators Borah, Idaho, and Norris, Nebraska, Republican Independents, have suggested

Police Chief Slays Thief but Is Killed

Fatal Gun Battle Ends Hunt for Pair Halted by Traffic Light.

Winchester, Ind., April 25 (A.P.).—Troy Clevenger, Winchester chief of police, and an unidentified bandit shot each other to death in a gun battle here tonight. Two other men riding in the bandit automobile sped away after shoving their companion's body out of the car.

Chief Clevenger had been asked by Richmond police to watch for two bandits who robbed a store there. The officer went to the edge of the city and stationed himself near a stop light. When the bandit automobile stopped at the traffic signal Chief Clevenger approached and began to question the men. The bandit riding at the side of the driver opened fire, a bullet striking the police chief.

Clevenger fell, but as he did so he fired one shot from his own automatic. Police said there was nothing on the dead bandit's person to establish his identity. He appeared to be about 35 years old, they said. The police chief was 28 years old.

Byrd Defended by Noville As Savior of Flight Crew

Aid, Replying to Fokker's Criticism, Asserts Plane's Commander Was Never to His Knowledge Confused or Lost Any of His Men.

Los Angeles, April 25 (A.P.).—A cry of the crew of a transatlantic plane on the shoreline of France was quoted today in refutation of Anthony Fokker's autobiographical criticism of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

Lieut. Comdr. George Noville, one of the four with the explorer on his flight to Europe, said when the plane landed the men shouted: "Thank God and Byrd we are alive tonight!"

"I had been with Byrd five years at that time," he said, "and neither before, during nor since, have I seen him confused. He is one of the greatest fliers and navigators I have ever met. Byrd commanded, and the rest of us, including Bernt Balchen, took orders," Noville said.

"Bert Acosta was the best flier aboard and he piloted the ship over the ocean.

"I wonder," Noville said, "whether Mr. Fokker remembers that seven weeks before Lindbergh arrived at Roosevelt Field he (Fokker) took us up in the plane in which we eventually crossed the ocean and crashed us, putting us all in the hospital.

"As to the thoroughness of Byrd's preparations, it is significant that in all his flights he has never lost a man."

International Court Advocated by Hughes

Chief Justice Tells Dinner Group Establishment of Tribunal Is Best Hope for Development of Law Between Nations.

(Associated Press.)

Chief Justice Hughes said last night the best hope for the development of international law lay in the establishment of a permanent court of international justice.

The former Secretary of State told members of the American Society of International Law, at a dinner celebrating the society's twenty-fifth anniversary, that the province of the court was not to legislate, but that "the accepted principles which govern the nations must be expounded and applied."

"A vast and steadily increasing number of international agreements," he said, "give rise to questions of interpretation, which are questions of law requiring judicial determination. Beyond these there lies the broad field of conciliation and adjustment of disputes which may not be of a justiciable sort.

"It is in the development of agencies for these purposes, giving greater play to the processes of reason, and in the disposition to utilize them, that we find the most notable progress."

The Chief Justice scanned the quarter century of the society's existence, a period during which he was Secretary of State and a justice of the World Court and said progress toward extending formally the content of international law, or "even of recording agreement as to what the content now is" had been slow.

He gave as an instance the failure of the recent Hague conference to reach agreement on codification of internationality, territorial waters and responsibility of states.

"You have a task for which a period of 25 years is altogether too short to yield gratifying results," he said.

"Instead of attempting to record the progress of international law, I should prefer to dwell upon the progress of international lawyers. Perhaps, I should say, the progress of the students of international law. They multiply, and increase in learning and avidity. * * * All this activity holds the greatest promise.

"If little has been achieved in promoting the development of international law, as a definite body of law," he continued, "we have abundant reason for gratification in the promotion of institutions for the peaceful settlement of international disputes."

Secretary Stimson was among the guests of honor, as was Ambassador Tellez of Mexico.

The guests included the diplomatic representatives of several foreign countries.

4 Mexicans Are Killed, 7 Hurt in Mine Blast

Mexico City, April 25 (A.P.).—Four Mexican employes of the Providencia mine operated by the Compania de Penoles, in the state of Zacatecas, were killed and seven others, including E. A. Manderfield, the American superintendent, were injured in an explosion of an auxiliary powder magazine yesterday.

Company officials here today denied reports that Manderfield had been killed. His injuries were slight, they said. The superintendent's home is at Houghton, Mich.

State's Attorney, Fined $10 On Contempt Charge, Pays

Montgomery County Prosecutor, Accused of Advising Defendant to Appeal Conviction on Promise of Nolle Prosse, Quickly Produces Money.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Montgomery County was fined $10 in County Police Court at Rockville yesterday on contempt proceedings by Judge Charles W. Woodward. Prescott is alleged to have told a defendant who had been convicted on a charge of assault to appeal his case and he would nol-pros it.

The proceedings climaxed a three-cornered assault charge trial involving a man and wife and an outsider, in which the husband was acquitted on two charges while the outsider was sentenced to serve six months in jail.

George W. Schaeffer, of Bethesda, had been charged with assault by his estranged wife, Mrs. Maude Schaeffer, also of Bethesda, who claimed that he had struck her last Monday. Schaeffer and Boyd Gayle, L street near Third street northeast, had sworn out warrants for each other, charging assault.

Gayle was used as a witness by Prescott in prosecuting Schaeffer. Mrs. Schaeffer failed to bring witnesses to court to substantiate her charges and they were dismissed. The charges brought by Gayle also were dismissed and Judge Woodward then sentenced Gayle to serve six months in jail.

Prescott turned to him and whispered: "Appeal your case," the court alleged. The judge turned to Prescott and said: "Mr. Prescott, you are fined $10 for contempt of court."

Prescott replied: "Ten dollars, your honor. I thought it was $5."

"Do you want to appeal the case," the judge dryly remarked. "No, thanks," Prescott replied, as he handed over the bill.

Gayle appealed the case and posted bond of $500 for his appearance before the next term of the circuit court.

41 Philippine Fanatics Sentenced for Massacre

Manila, April 25 (A.P.).—Forty-one religious fanatics, charged with murder in connection with the killing of two constabulary officers and three soldiers during the uprising at Tayug January 11, were convicted today in the court of first instance at Lingayen.

Cesareo Abe and Pedro Kalosa, alleged ringleaders, were sentenced to life imprisonment. Thirty-seven were sentenced to terms of seventeen years and four months each. The other two were minors and were sentenced to fourteen years each. Three were acquitted.

RUM RANKED SECOND AS G. O. P. ISSUE IN 1932

would remain in control of the Government, there were a few who were frankly pessimistic. This pessimism was to be found particularly in replies from the Northeast and the Central West.

The man who got the highest number of "votes" next to President Hoover in The Post poll was Senator Dwight Morrow, wet, of New Jersey. Thirteen of the delegates favored him for the presidential nomination.

Former President Calvin Coolidge, who, in 1928, did not "choose to run," got 12 votes. One each went to former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Charles Gates Dawes, former Vice President, now Ambassador to Great Britain; Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, and Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana. All of these have been boomed for President at one time or another.

Senator Morrow hero of the Republican wets, was not suggested entirely by delegates living in wet States. One of those who boomed him, for example, was a Republican politician in Iowa, home of the desert-dry Senator Brookhart. The States represented by the other ten delegates who favor Senator Morrow are Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts (2), New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin.

Some Choose Coolidge.

The sponsors of another nomination for Calvin Coolidge represented these eight States: Ohio, Utah, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi (3), and Nebraska.

However, in all save one of the States where sentiment for Morrow and Coolidge was evidenced, the majority of the delegates favored another nomination for President Hoover.

One of the surprises of The Post poll was the strength of young Col. Theodore Roosevelt, the Governor of Porto Rico.

Gov. Roosevelt was the runner-up in the canvass for Vice President, 60 delegates suggesting him as President Hoover's running mate in 1932.

Quite a number declined to commit themselves with regard to a vice presidential nominee. Of those who did express an opinion, 247 came out directly for Vice President Curtis, while 37 said he could have the nomination "if he wants it." One who put it this way was William Allen White, the Emporia editor.

A total of 154 delegates and alternates suggested somebody else, the "votes," being distributed as follows: Gov. Roosevelt, 60; Senator Morrow, 34; Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, 13; Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, 10; Hanford MacNider, 9; Charles G. Dawes, 4; Senator Borah, 3; Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, 5; Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, 2.

Among others suggested for the vice presidential nomination were Postmaster General Walter Brown, 6; Secretary of Agriculture Arthur Hyde, Gov. Fred Emmerson, of Illinois, 3; Gov. Harry G. Leslie, of Indiana, Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, 2; Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, Gen. James G. Harbord and Gen. John J. Pershing.

That the World War veterans, growing in power within the party all the time, will attempt to put a veteran on the ticket in case Mr. Curtis declines is evidenced by the letters received by The Post.

The booms for Gov. Roosevelt and Col. MacNider are sponsored to a great extent by veterans, although, in Roosevelt's case, the magic of a name has a lot to do with it. Quite a few of the delegates, in answering the question of who will receive the vice presidential nomination, suggest that it be given to "a Legion man." MacNider was once the Legion's national commander.

Curtis' Plans Not Known.

Thus far, Vice President Curtis has not made known his plans for 1932. He will do one of two things—seek to recapture his seat in the Senate, or seek renomination as Vice President.

Friends of the Vice President say that his first consideration is to remain in public office. He is pretty sure that he can wrest his seat in the Senate from the present holder thereof, young Senator McGill, a Democrat, but not quite so sure that he can be reelected as Vice President. Of the two posts, his intimates say the Vice Presidency is by far the most desirable.

It has been stated that, in the opinion of the delegates who responded to The Post questionnaire, economic conditions will constitute the prime issue in 1932. That is looking at it from a national standpoint.

Of course, in some regions the delegates are convinced that prohibition will be the issue. Thus, in Texas, we find 10 delegates, or alternates, who think that prohibition will be the dominant issue, as against seven who believe that business and unemployment will stand out.

In eleven other States a majority of the delegates who responded to The Post questionnaire felt that prohibition would be the leading issue. These were Maine, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Maryland, Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Kentucky, Florida, Vermont and Illinois. As can be seen, some of these States (Alabama, for example) are politically dry and others (Maryland, for example) are politically wet.

In three States—Virginia Massachusetts and West Virginia—the delegates who responded in the poll were evenly divided on which of the two, prohibition or the economic situation, would be the prime issue.

Those States whose delegates and alternates placed economic conditions first on the list of probable issues were:

New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, North Carolina, Arizona, Georgia, Oklahoma, Indiana, Missouri, Tennessee, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Delaware, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, Colorado, Iowa, Wyoming, Wisconsin, Washington, Oregon, California and Utah.

The opinion of most of those who expressed themselves on the question was that farm relief will not be nearly as important an issue next year as it was in 1928. A study of the table accompanying this article will show that not even the delegates in the agricultural regions placed farm relief at the head of the list of issues.

Whether the power question will stand out in 1932, many of the delegates said, depends a great deal on whether Franklin D. Roosevelt is the Democratic nominee. The same condition, they said, applies to Tammany.

The World Court, it appears, arouses but little interest.

Nearly all the party leaders who responded to The Post questionnaire—men like Senator George Moses, of New Hampshire, and Representative Will Wood, of Indiana,—agreed that economic conditions would be the foremost issue.

Quite a few of the delegates and alternates point out that it is as yet too early to say what will be the foremost issue. A clearing up of the business situation, they say, would undoubtedly serve to focus more attention on the prohibition problem.

Prohibition Viewpoints.

As to what the Republican party should do about prohibition, there are, among the delegates, three schools of thought. One holds that the party should readopt its dry platform of 1928, another insists on a wet, or, at least, a moderation plank, while the third counsels a side-stepping policy.

William G. Albrecht, a city councilman of Baltimore, thinks that the main issue will be prohibition.

"We must offer the people of this country a modification of the Volstead Act," he writes. "Millions of dollars are being spent to enforce prohibition, and millions of people are violating the law. Eventually there will be no respect for law; enforcement of prohibition must fail."

J. Rolf Searles, a lawyer in St. Johnsbury, Vt., ordinarily a Republican stronghold, said that he was for a Hoover-Curtis ticket again in 1932, "However, he said, "if business conditions do not greatly improve, I am afraid."

"I believe," continued Mr. Searles, "that the question of prohibition is the outstanding one among the people of this country today, and that the two great parties must squarely face the issue."

Opposed to this view is that of Carl F. Marsh, a real estate man in McCook, Nebr. At the outset, Mr. Marsh says that he expects President Hoover to be nominated for a second term, but that the prospect is that Mr. Curtis will be "replaced by some good man from the East."

"My belief is," continues Mr. March, "that the party which goes on record either one way or the other on the prohibition issue will find itself torn into so many conflicting factions that it will fail of success."

L. S. Hall, of Colorado, wrote that "The Republican party must stand by the Constitution, including the eighteenth amendment, or be hopelessly defeated." And to show how strong he felt about it, Mr. Hall wrote the word "must" in red letters.

Smith Easy to Beat.

A delegate in Wisconsin, in answer to the question, "Who will be the Republican nominee for President?" made this reply, "Hoover."

"I'll bet on the Democrats," he added, "unless Al Smith tries to run again."

Noble H. Getchell, of Reno, Nev., chairman of the Republican State central committee, said that he was for President Hoover, but added that "business conditions will have to improve in order for him to be strong in this State." Much, he said, will depend on the identity of the Democratic nominee.

George W. Greene, of Albany, one of the 90 New York delegates to the Kansas City convention in 1928, said that any attempt to change the Hoover-Curtis slate would "ruin our chances for victory." He felt that economic conditions would take first rank in the list of 1932 issues, with prohibition second.

Significantly, the New Yorker said that "Tammany corruption, insofar as New York voters are concerned, may as well be relegated to the morgue."

"I believe," Mr. Greene said, "that the people in this section of the State are looking for candidates with color, and a very definite, forward-looking program. As much as I dislike to concede it, I feel that a real, spirited Democratic candidate for President will cause us no little trouble in this State in 1932, irrespective of our plan to return Herbert Hoover."

New York is the grand prize of the electoral college, possessing 45 electoral votes.

A Southern delegate said that "religion" would be the issue in 1932. In this connection, John J. Sullivan, an attorney of Seattle, Wash, advanced a new thought for the Republican platform makers. Said he:

"I believe the Republican party should go on record with an out and out expression of tolerance so that the people of this great Nation may understand once and for all time that religion is an individual and personal right and not a test of a man's fitness for office and citizenship, and that if we are to exist as a great democracy we must keep alive the principles of the founders of our Government, who enunciated the principle of the inalienable right of every man to worship his Creator according to the dictates of his conscience.

"The undersigned is a Republican and a Catholic, who feels that the experiences and disclosures brought out through the activities of so-called leaders of both parties during the last presidential campaign was a blot upon the decency of good Government and upon the record of the two great parties, whose histories are replete with the records of great men who have given loyal and unselfish devotion to their respective parties and to their common country."

Tariff Must Be Stressed.

Joshua Clayton, an Elkton, Md., attorney, said the Republicans would have to keep the tariff question to the fore.

"It is the one live question which is the answer to why the Republican party exists," he said. "A protective tariff is just as essential to the life of this country as is the maintenance of the gold standard."

"Mr. Hoover will be dry in 1932," Mr. Clayton said. "He was not dry in 1928. His stand on prohibition will cause a great defection in the Republican ranks, and it may not be made up by a like defection in Democratic ranks for the reason that some of the larger States east of the Mississippi River may swing away from prohibition.

"Economic conditions and farm relief are bound to make dents in the Republican ranks. The Democratic party, however, does not offer any constructive plans and the losses occasioned by these conditions will be more or less minimized.

"Tammany corruption, power control and the world court will not make a ripple."

From Illinois, a State which promises to be a real battleground in the 1932 campaign, The Post received replies from 22 delegates and alternates. All but three said that they expected President Hoover to head the ticket again. The dissenter said that Hoover was "weak" in Illinois. Two others said the same thing, but added that they expected the President to be named. Coolidge and Morrow both got a vote in this delegation.

Prohibition Is Dominant.

"Herbert Hoover will be the Republican nominee, but Calvin Coolidge should be," said Edward Brundage, of Chicago. "Vice President Curtis will probably be renominated. Prohibition and economic conditions will be the dominant issues. Farm relief will be agitated, but the Farm Board has demonstrated that legislation can only accomplish grief and not relief."

Chester R. Denson, publisher of the Minonk, Ill., News-Dispatch, predicted that President Hoover will be renominated.

Mr. Denson added, however, that the most logical Republican candidate for 1932 would be Senator Morrow. Popular with the "moists," he said, Morrow is also aided by the fact that he is Col. Lindbergh's father-in-law.

"If there is not a change for the better in the economic situation real quick," Mr. Denson said, "we will lose the State ticket here next year. It's 'in the air.' Everybody wants a change, and they are getting it every time they get a chance to vote."

From Iowa came replies from 23 of the 1928 delegates and alternates, 20 of whom expect President Hoover to be renominated. One suggested Senator Morrow. On the vice presidential nomination they are greatly divided, some suggesting Mr. Curtis, some Hanford MacNider and others Col. Roosevelt and Senator Morrow. Col. MacNider, a native of Iowa, got five votes, the same number polled by Curtis.

From the tall corn State, the heart of farm relief agitation in the past, comes a letter that must certainly interest the politicians. It is from F. E. Sheldon, president of the State Bank of Mount Ayr Iowa. He says "As to farm relief, that is an issue that has ever been worn threadbare, and I think the farmers have given up hope of getting any particular relief from either party."

Mr. Sheldon thinks that economic conditions will constitute the foremost issue in 1932, with power control and prohibition next, and then the tariff and farm relief.

He expects that President Hoover will be renominated. Vice President Curtis, he said, would not add anything to the strength of the ticket, and he proposed that a progressive Republican be named in his stead.

And here is another surprising letter from the State of the dry Brookhart. It is from I. R. Meltzer of Sibley, Iowa. He favors President Hoover for another term, but suggests that a "wet" be placed on the other end of the ticket if Mr. Curtis is not renominated.

"Although I have placed prohibition fourth," he writes, "such may not be altogether correct. It is a steadily increasing opinion that prohibition has not only deprived the agricultural region of an excellent market for grain, but that it has greatly increased the taxes which the members thereof must pay. The benefits of prohibition, if any, are therefore a liability as a political issue in this district at the present time."

Mrs. Charles H Tye, of Sioux City, Iowa, praised President Hoover for his work under the trying conditions of the last two years, and said he stood for the best interests of all instead of the few.

Hoover Kentucky Choice.

Eight 1928 delegates and alternates in Kentucky answered the questionnaires. While all suggested Hoover and Curtis for the 1932 ticket, two of them put forward the names of alternate candidates, S J Roberts, of Lexington, put it "Hoover or Coolidge," while F. J Pentecost, of Henderson, named Secretary Hurley as an alternate to Vice President Curtis.

From Massachusetts, which was captured by Gov. Smith in 1928, replies from 26 1928 delegates and alternates, half of whom believe that prohibition will be the dominant issue in 1932. Twenty-three think that President Hoover will be the next presidential nominee. Two suggest Morrow and one Coolidge. On the question of a vice presidential nominee, the Massachusetts people are divided. Most of them think it will be Mr. Curtis, but others leave the question unanswered or else suggest another man. Three men are mentioned as possibilities—Gen. Harbord, Secretary Hurley and Senator Morrow.

Not to nominate President Hoover, says a Boston delegate, would be to repudiate the party administration. At that, he adds, the party "would have a better chance of winning by boldly turning him down and drafting Coolidge. * * *."

Divided on Vice President.

Of the 18 delegates and alternates in Michigan who replied, 12 were in favor of renominating President Hoover. They were divided on the vice presidential nomination. Most of them said they expect Mr. Curtis to run again, and one suggested Col. Roosevelt as an alternate candidate.

M. J. Fox, a manufacturer, of Iron Mountain, Mich., placed economic conditions as the dominant issue, and so did most of his colleagues. There were two, however, that thought prohibition would stand out.

"Tariff, as I understand it," wrote Mr. Fox, "is in an adjustable form today, and my thought is to get back of it and move quick. Don't wait until they build all the automobile plants over in Canada and close the doors of the world against us. My thought is that we have already made too much noise about our imports.

"We have heard a lot of noise about the safety razor blade, jack knives, pocket knives and that kind of stuff coming out of Europe, but we have forgotten that we have been exporting locomotives, automobiles, steel rails, standard oils and every other big commodity that amounted to a lot of money. I fear that our recent tariff muddling had a lot to do with our present economic conditions, which are not so hot.

Backs Up Administration.

"I am for and with the administration, first, last and always, but I believe that we have got to wake up or we will have somebody else at the head."

Of the 14 Minnesota delegates who responded, 12 said they expected that President Hoover again would be named the nominee. One suggested Coolidge. Two of them suggested Col. Roosevelt for the President's running mate.

Charles W. Sterling, of St. Paul, said that the general outlook for the party was not as good as it should be, particularly because of the policy of the Farm Board.

From Mississippi, one of the solid South States—that is, one of the States that has remained Democratic since the Civil War—came three replies. All three delegates suggested Calvin Coolidge as the next nominee.

Missouri for Hoover.

From Missouri, a border State that supported President Hoover in 1928, came 20 replies. Nineteen delegates suggested President Hoover for another nomination. One named Lowden. In response to the second question, a majority said, "Curtis if he wants it." One delegate suggested Secretary Hyde for the vice presidential nomination, another boomed former Senator Allen, of Kansas, and two others put forth the names of Col. Roosevelt and Secretary Hurley.

"I believe," said Howard Gray, an attorney, of Carthage, Mo., "that the paramount issue in 1932 will be Herbert Hoover.

"In my judgment, 'power control' begins and ends with Norris, and no details have ever been given as to just what he means.

"We have in this city a municipal plant for water and electricity. It is city owned, economically managed and pays no taxes, and yet our people pay as much for water and lights as the 'power-controlled' cities are paying.

"As for prohibition, this country is overwhelmingly in favor of the eighteenth amendment. There is much talk about wets, but when the campaign is on the marching women and school children will exert an influence that will simply chase the wets out of the line."

Eleven Montana delegates suggested President Hoover as the 1932 standard bearer, with one of them adding a footnote recording some decline in his popularity.

Ten Nebraska delegates were heard from, and all agreed that the President would be nominated for a second term. With regard to the vice presidential nomination, five suggested Curtis "if he wants it;" two suggested Col. Roosevelt, one suggested "an Eastern man," another suggested "an American Legion man." There was one vote each for Senator Morrow and Representative Tilson.

Economic Issue Seen.

The Kansans who replied agreed with William Allen White that the ticket would be Hoover-Curtis, providing the Vice President wants to be nominated for a second term. Most of them agreed that economic conditions would constitute the issue.

D. E. Dunne, a broker, of Wichita, Kans., who says he has been interested in the Republican organization for more than 30 years, declares that "the outlook is very bad."

All the delegates in Minnesota who responded favored President Hoover for the 1932 nomination except one. He liked Ambassador Dawes. Two delegates suggested Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, for the vice presidential nomination, while a third suggested "a man from Missouri."

A score or more of the Ohio delegates of 1928 came out for President Hoover, but divided on the Vice Presidency. Postmaster General Brown and Senator Fess, both native sons, were boomed.

S. H. Eagle, a banker, of Gallipolis, Ohio, thinks that religion will be the foremost issue in 1932, although why he thinks so is not made clear.

L. B. McKelvey, of Youngstown, Ohio, thinks that if Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, is the Democratic nominee, he will win over President Hoover. His pessimism, however, is not shared by all the Ohio delegates. He suggests that the Republican party advocate a referendum on prohibition. A little beer, he says, "would not hurt the country."

Ohio, with 24 electoral votes, is expected to be another battleground in the 1932 campaign. In the last off-year election the State sent a wet Democrat—Robert Bulkley—to the Senate.

One Pinchot Vote.

Pennsylvania's delegates who answered the questionnaire were all for President Hoover, and with the exception of one man who boomed Gov. Pinchot and another who suggested Senator Charles McNary, of Oregon, all looked forward to another nomination for Vice President Curtis.

Dr. J. R. Gillette, a Pennsylvania alternate in 1928, predicted that "Hoover will go over big when the second sober though of the Nation realizes his difficulties, difficulties not of his own creation."

John R. Sproul, of Philadelphia, placed prohibition at the head of the list of probable issues.

"Possibly on account of the dynamite in the prohibition question," Mr. Sproul said, "it may through politics be kept in the background. However, I feel that there are too many people on both sides of this question who have very strong opinions regarding it to possibly evade the issue at this time."

Joseph Brobston, of Nazareth, Pa., predicted that both parties would "duck" prohibition to the greatest extent, and predicted that economic conditions would serve as an issue for Democratic attack. If Gov. Roosevelt or former Gov. Smith is the Democratic nominee, he said, Tammany corruption will become issue No. 1 for the Republicans.

From Virginia, one of the erstwhile solid South States that bolted to Herbert Hoover in 1928, came nine replies, all of them from delegates who expect to see the President nominated for a second term. Five look for Vice President Curtis to share the ticket with him, while one foresees Gov. Theodore Roosevelt taking Curtis' place.

Some of the Virginians think that economic conditions will stand out as the issue, while a like number see prohibition as the burning question. One of them says that prohibition and "Raskobism" will constitute the issue.

From Tennessee, another of the border States that went to President Hoover in 1928, came ten replies, eight of them stating that the President would be renominated. One delegate boomed Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, for the vice presidential nomination. Mr. Tilson was born in Tennessee.

No Opposition to Hoover.

From Oklahoma, another border State, came seven responses to The Post questionnaire. All the delegates look for another nomination for President Hoover.

"Inasmuch as the great majority of Republicans here have confidence in the President, and do not hold him responsible for present conditions," said T. H. Dubos, lawyer, of Talihina, Okla., "there will be no organized opposition to his nomination, unless the sentiment should change. And should such opposition develop, three powerful factors—precedent, patronage and policy—make his renomination almost a certainty.

"As to the Vice President, one guess is as good as another, and as an Oklahoman, I guess Hurley."

Seven men in Vermont who went to the Kansas City convention concede President Hoover's nomination, but only two commit themselves on the vice presidential nomination. Four suggest Mr. Curtis. Senator Morrow and Gov. Roosevelt also are suggested.

The West Virginia delegates also agreed on President Hoover. With regard to the vice presidential nomination, one remained silent and another suggested Secretary of War Hurley. They agreed that economic conditions would form the big issue.

The Wisconsin delegates were somewhat chary about naming the 1932 nominees, one of them stating that it was "ridiculous" to be asking the question at this time, and another pleading that he was no prophet. Four of them, however, predicted renomination for the President. One suggested Senator Morrow.

Of the Alabama delegates who responded — nine in number — eight foresaw another nomination for President Hoover, while the ninth declined to commit himself. Curtis, Roosevelt and Watson are suggested as a running mate.

"We hope prohibition will split the Democratic party," wrote John McEniry, of Bessemer, Ala.

Fourteen 1928 delegates in Colorado agreed that Herbert Hoover would be renominated. Seven chose Curtis for renomination, three suggested Senator Morrow, two Representative Tilson and one Senator Borah.

The 1928 delegates in the State of Washington are for the most part agreed that President Hoover will be renominated. Quite a few, however, do not commit themselves on this. Fewer still are willing to name a vice presidential nominee. Five like Curtis, one picks Gov. Roosevelt and another suggests Senator Borah.

On issues, there is considerable difference of opinion among the Washington delegates and alternates, although most of them agree that economic conditions and prohibition will stand out.

Fred Brown, a Seattle attorney, says that unless some change in the prohibition law is recommended, "you can kiss your party good-by." He places prohibition first and economic conditions second.

A delegate in Longview, Wash., says that unless "the Republican party can get rid of the Farm Board and stop spending so much money foolishly, this country is going to be experimenting with a Democratic President after the next election."

How Republican Delegates to 1928 Convention View Issues for 1932

NOTE—The tables below show the relative importance placed by the Republican delegates to the 1928 convention on national issues for 1932. Each delegate was asked to rank the seven issues listed in the order of their importance in his viewpoint. In Alabama, for instance, three delegates regarded economic conditions as the most important; three gave it second place; one third. On prohibition four Alabama delegates ranked the issue first, two second, and one third.

Mrs. Longworth Given Boom for Vice President

A boom to make Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth the Republican nominee for Vice President in 1932 has been launched by one of the women politicians who took part in The Post poll.

The vote for Mrs. Longworth was cast by Miss Elizabeth McCormick, who, as an alternate delegate, represented Wisconsin at the Kansas City convention in 1928. In answering the question, "Who will be the Republican nominee for Vice President?" Miss McCormick replied, "Alice Roosevelt Longworth or Theodore Roosevelt."

Miss McCormick is a Progressive Republican, one who sympathized with the Bull Moose movement in 1912, and evidently she thinks that the daughter of the Bull Moose leader and the widow of the late Speaker of the House is also a Progressive.

TWO HORSE SHOWS PLANNED FOR MAY

Foxcroft School and Union-Bloomfield Events Are on Calendar.

Special to The Washington Post.

Middleburg, Va., April 25.—Two horse shows are scheduled for Loudoun County next month. First on the program is the annual Foxcroft show, sponsored by the Foxcroft School, to be held on the school grounds, near Middleburg, Monday, May 11.

Sixteen show classes and one race for hunters is on the program for the Foxcroft event. Silver cups will be awarded as prizes, four of the classes on the program being open. Autoists Halted in Fairfax In War on Japanese Beetle

Inspector Charles G. Raymond, of the United States Department of Agriculture, stopping a motorist on the Lee highway at the Fairfax County line in the war against the Japanese beetle. Plants and soil can not be taken into the county without a Government permit.

Federal Inspectors Stop Cars to Prevent Spread of Infestation.

Motorists traveling the highways out of Washington in Virginia find that on leaving Arlington County and the City of Alexandria into Fairfax County they are stopped by a uniformed inspector of the United States Department of Agriculture who courteously inquires whether or not they are carrying flowers, plants, shrubs or any plants with soil or fertilizer on the roots. A small sign nearby will inform the motorist that they are entering quarantined territory.

This is part of the fight in this section against the dreaded Japanese beetle. Washington, Alexandria and Arlington County are listed as heavily infested territory, while Fairfax County is lightly infested. If the motorist is carrying flowers, plants, soil or fertilizer they are requested to drive to the side of the highway and exhibit a permit from the florist where they purchased the plant. These permits are issued to florists who have been inspected and approved by the Department of Agriculture. They are authorized to issue permits to purchasers so that plants can be carried into noninfested areas. Failing to have a permit the motorist is informed that there are three courses open to him: Plants can be returned to the dealer for a permit, the plants can be discarded or they can be taken within the infested area.

The inspectors are stationed on all roads leading into the lightly infested area by the Baltimore office of the department for preventing the spread of the Japanese beetle and any person failing to obey the regulations or failing to stop for inspection is subject to a fine of $300 or imprisonment for one year or both fine and imprisonment. These regulations also prohibit plants grown at home from being taken into the lightly infested area. A number of persons having summer homes in Fairfax County have been turned down by the inspectors when they attempted to transplant flowers and shrubs raised at their Washington homes.

The quarantine now applies only to growing plants and soils and fertilizers. After June 14 the quarantine will apply to cut flowers and farm products as well until October 16. Flowers, plants and fertilizers can be carried from the lightly-infested areas at all times. The fight at the present time is being against the eggs of the beetle in soils and the roots of the plants. After June 14, the egg will be hatched, which causes the ban to be tightened.

U. S. Envoy's Son Weds in Denmark

Winifred Wessel, Daughter of Chilean Minister, Married to Ralph Booth.

Copenhagen, Denmark, April 25 (A. P.).—The civil marriage of Winifred May Wessel, daughter of the Chilean Minister to Denmark, and John Lord Booth, son of the American Minister, was solemnized in a religious ceremony today before royalty.

It was the second wedding in the family of Ralph Harmon Booth, of Detroit, within six weeks. His daughter Virginia was married to William D. Vogel, of New York and Milwaukee, in a brilliant social setting on March 4.

The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Dr. Jesson, chaplain of the British Legation. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Charles Cramer, of Detroit, was the best man. The bridesmaids were the Misses Freddie and Barbara Wessel, cousins of the bride; Miss Louise Huitfeldt, daughter of the Norwegian Minister; Baroness Cecilie Schilling and Miss Winifred Scarf. King Christian was represented by his brother, Prince Gustave; his sister, Princess Thyra, and his nephews, Princes Axel, Eric and Viggo, with their wives.

GAS LEADERS MEET IN ARLINGTON CLUB

35 Prominent Industrialists Interest Young Chemists in Philadelphia Session.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Thirty-five prominent men in the gas industry assembled last night at a regional meeting of the chemical committee of the American Gas Association at the Army and Navy Country Club, in Arlington County, Va. The meeting was arranged particularly to stimulate interest among the younger gas chemists and engineers in preparation for a record attendance at the chemical conference to be held in Philadelphia this summer.

Among those present at the meeting last night were George A. G. Wood, president of the Washington Gas Light Co.; Dr. W. J. Huff, professor of gas engineering at John's Hopkins University and chairman of the chemical committee; K. H. Cree, secretary of the technical section, American Gas Association; George B. Fraser, financial vice president of the Washington Gas Light Co.; E. R. Wheeler, representative of the Bureau of Standards; Frank A. Woodhead, operating vice president of the Washington Gas Light Co., and nine representatives of Johns Hopkins University, including several members of the faculty. Divisions from Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore also were represented.

Before going to the Army and Navy Club, visiting engineers were conducted through the plants of the Washington Gas Light Co. by Walter M. Russell, chief engineer.

Despite the threatening weather yesterday afternoon, several hundred citizens assembled in the park opposite the Clarendon Firemen's Hall to witness the official presentation of the new $9,000 hook-and-ladder truck to the Clarendon department as a part of the equipment. The presentation was made by State Senator Frank L. Ball on behalf of the County Board of Supervisors.

Congratulating the firemen for the wonderful progress which thay heve made during the last few years, Senator Ball said: "The service of the volunteer firemen can not be measured in dollars and cents, unless you fix the value of human life in dollars, and that can not be done."

Sergt. Banganio, of the Washington Fire Department, said: "I have watched the volunteer firemen for a radius of more than 50 miles of the District of Columbia, and I want to say that Washington is proud of the firemen of Arlington County. They have on more than one occasion proven their efficiency. The volunteer firemen of Arlington County are looked upon by the District of Columbia department as its second line of defense."

He stated that the equipment now provided for the firemen of Arlington County is just what is needed.

The equipment was accepted by Chief Herbert F. Smith, of the Clarendon department, who assured the County Board of Supervisors that the department would take the best of care of the apparatus and that it would be ready for service at every call.

Among other speakers were Louis C. Carl, president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce; Harry A. Fellows, president of the Arlington County Civic Federation, and G. Frank Allwine, president of the Arlington-Fairfax Firemen's Association. Music was furnished by the Washington-Lee High School Band.

A check for $100 for Edward Duncan to the Firemen's Relief Association was accepted by G. Frank Allwine, president of the association.

Walter U. Varney, president of the Clarendon Fire Department, presided and introduced the speakers. The program concluded with refreshments served at the firehouse by the members of the ladies' auxiliary.

Elwood Street, director of the Washington Community Chest, speaking at the meeting of the investigating committee of the Arlington County Civic Committee at Clarendon, on the feasibility of a community chest for Arlington County, advocated the county's entrance into the Washington Community Chest.

Stressing the fact that Arlington County, being a part of the metropolitan area of Washington, Mr. Street stated that the collection of funds for local charitable purposes could be handled in a far more satisfactory and economical way through the Washington organization. He stated that he did not believe that Arlington County had a sufficient population to justify the large expenditure that would result by the formation of a separate chest for the county.

It was pointed out that there is much dissatisfication among the residents of the county, due to the fact that a large majority employed in Washington contribute annually to the Washington Chest, and then must also contribute in the county to aid the poor and needy of the county.

Mr. Street declared that the counties of Maryland and Virginia adjacent to the District of Columbia are not entirely deprived of the benefits of the contributions of their citizens, since their charitable cases are handled in most of the Washington hospitals on the same basis as those originating in the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare in Arlington County, declared that even if Arlington County did join the Washing-Chest, there were many organizations whose assistance is needed in the county that would refuse to extend their work into the area because of divisions of their own. Principaal among these, she said, are the religious bodies that have their fixed boundaries and which could not be extended without a general reorganization of their entire system of operation.

The meeting was called by the Community Chest Committee of the Civic Federation, of which Grover E. Payne is chairman.

Delegates moved toward the formation of an organization of their own with the election of John G. Gall as temporary chairman and George F. Collier as temporary secretary. A resolution was adopted calling upon all organizations in the county disbursing charity funds to make a report of their expenditures for a comparative period, and that the chairman call another meeting.

Among the organizations represented at last night's meeting were: Arlington County Chapter American Red Cross, board of public welfare, Arlington Post, No. 139 American Legion, Business and Professional Woman's Club of Arlington County, Monarch Club, Civic Federation and the Rosslyn Business Men's Association.

Through an error, it appeared in The Post yesterday that Attorney Emery N. Hosmer was counsel for the county in the condemnation proceedings which have been instituted by the Virginia State Highway Department to gain a right-of-way for Lee boulevard through the property of Mrs. Virginia Van Every. Attorney Hosmer is attorney for Mrs. Van Every, and has associated with him Attorney Thomas Patterson, of Washington. Attorney F. S. McCandlish, of Fairfax, represents the State Highway Department.

The Lyon Village Citizens Association will hold its April meeting tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Groome Eareckson, 211 Oak street, Lyon Village.

Funeral services for Harold E. Stelle, of Lyon Village, who died Friday afternoon at a hospital in Jamestown, N. Y., will be conducted from his home in New Brunswick, N. J., tomorrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, by the Rev. F. G. Merriwell, pastor of the Baptist Church.

The monthly meeting of the Ballston Citizens Association will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Ballston Firemen's Hall.

A delegation from the Daughters of the American Revolution, of Clarendon, consisting of the regent, Mrs. A. J. Webb; vice regent, Mrs. C. D. Crist, Mrs. William E. Williams, Mrs. Luther C. Dodd and Mrs. Carl E. Edwards, attended the State luncheon conference of the Virginia State Society, held at the Willard Hotel, in Washington during the recent congress.

The regent, Mrs. Webb, presented the resolution which was unanimously adopted, that the Virginia State Society honor Thomas Nelson, jr., by placing a bronze tablet in the old Nelson house which is being fully restored in Yorktown. This tablet is to be designed by Miss Beaman, daughter of the State regent, Mrs. Nathaniel Beaman, and will be placed with appropriate ceremonies during the Yorktown Centennial in October of this year.

Plans for the bicentennial celebration next year, and the county election will be the principal business to come before the monthly meeting of the Arlington Citizens Association to be held tomorrow evening. The meeting will be held at the Arlington Library Hall, on Bingham road, adjacent to the Patrick Henry School Building, at 8 o'clock.

Visiting the James Monroe School Friday afternoon Mrs. Jessie T. Dean, president of the Clarendon Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with Mrs. Ida Fiske, director of the scientific temperance department, awarded medals for the essay contest sponsored by the union.

In the sixth grade, first prize went to Lois M. Mason, her subject being, "Whose Fault Was the Accident?" Second prize, with same subject, to Bernard Parnell, and third prize to Betty Marshall.

Fifth grade: First prize, Marjorie Stockett, and second to Grace Porter. The subject was the same as in the sixth grade.

Fourth grade: First prize, Betty Bennett; second, Carol Lewis. The subject was, "The Man Who Wanted to Run a Race."

Third grade: First prize, Wallace Leeth. The subject was "Three White Glasses."

Mrs. William Wolff Smith, of Washington, past president of the League of American Pen Women, is announced as the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Ashton Heights Woman's Club to be held Tuesday night at the clubhouse at 8 o'clock.

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Arlington Volunteer Fire Department, will give a benefit bingo party Wednesday night at the firehouse at 8 o'clock.

Pollard Party Will Meet President at Little Creek

Governor's Special Train Will Pick Up Hoover and Guests En Route to Cape Henry Landing Celebration This Afternoon.

Richmond, Va., April 25 (A.P.).—Members of his family, staff and a few friends will compose Gov. Pollard's official party attending the ceremonies commemorating the 324th anniversary of the landing of the English at Cape Henry there tomorrow.

Among those in the party will be Gov. Pollard, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lee Boatright, jr., of Washington; Charles Pollard, Miss V. E. McDougall, Col. and Mrs. John L. Williams and Commander and Mrs. W. H. Cardwell.

The party will leave the executive mansion at 9 a. m. tomorrow, arriving at Newport News in time to take the 11:30 ferry. They will have luncheon in Norfolk, and board the special train for Cape Henry at the Union Depot at 1:30. The train will stop at Little Creek for President and Mrs. Hoover, who will be welcomed by Gov. Pollard there.

Neither President Hoover nor Gov. Pollard will speak during the ceremonies, which are to be of a religious nature. Both will leave immediately after the services, the presidential party returning to the government vessel at Little Creek, and the governor's party returning to Richmond, by way of Norfolk and Newport News.

Members of the Virginia Cape Henry Commission, also expected to be present, are:

Mrs. Frank Naylor, of Norfolk; Mrs. R. Cornelius Taylor, of Norfolk; Mrs. J. Taylor Ellyson, of Richmond; Mrs. E. E. Holland, of Suffolk; Mrs. E. B. Hodges, of Norfolk; W. R. Auto Victim's Body Sent to Michigan University Student Killed Instantly in Crash Near Amherst.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 25.—The body of W. B. Stevens, 22, University of Virginia student, instantly killed last night in an automobile accident near Amherst, today was sent to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Stevens, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Stevens was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity at the University of North Carolina, where he attended school before coming here.

Two other students with Stevens when the car skidded off the highway received minor injuries. W. M. Felsenstein, New York City, sustained a fractured jaw, and Dwight Todd, of Little Rock, Ark., suffered lacerations about the head.

Eight Man Tapped At William-Mary

Five Virginians in Class Receiving Highest Fraternity Honor.

Williamsburg, Va., April 25 (A.P.).—Eight men were included in the tap class of the William and Mary Chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary fraternity, this spring. Seven students and one alumnus received the honor.

Robert M. Hughes, of Norfolk, and a William and Mary graduate of 1876; Brooks George, of Stuart, Va.; Dwight Brown, Vienna, Va.; Wallace Smith, Norfolk; Nash Lindsay, Helena, Ark.; Frank Mozeleski, Camden, N. J.; Lawrence Shaffer, Cumberland, Md.; and Robert Pannill, of Martinsville, Va., were the eight men elected this year.

The tap of this fraternity is considered the highest honorary distinction available at William and Mary. The basis for membership is leadership in campus activities, character and scholarship.

HOOVER TAKES BOAT TRIP TO CAPE HENRY

President and Party to Help Celebrate Landing of English Colonists.

(Associated Press.)

President and Mrs. Hoover were en route to Cape Henry, Va., last night on the Commerce Department boat Sequoia, to take part today in a celebration of the 324th anniversary of the landing of English colonists who later founded Jamestown.

They expected to arrive at Little Creek Inlet shortly after noon today and go immediately to Cape Henry. The five-mile trip from Little Creek will be made on a special train which also will carry Gov. Pollard and other prominent Virginians.

The Chief Executive and Mrs. Hoover embarked on the Sequoia at the Seventh street fish wharf. The departure was entirely informal.

With Mr. and Mrs. Hoover on the 140-foot boat were Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, Dr. R. A. Millikan, of Pasadena, Calif.; Lawrence Richey, one of the President's secretaries; Capt. Joel Boone, White House physician; Capt. Russell Train, naval aid, and Col. Campbell B. Hodges, military aid.

Plans to Return Tomorrow.

Immediately after church services at Cape Henry today Mr. Hoover will return to Little Creek Inlet and reembark on the Sequoia for the return trip to the Capital. He expects to arrive early tomorrow morning.

Mr. Hoover will be welcomed to Cape Henry by Gov. Pollard and members of the Cape Henry Memorial Association. The short church services will be conducted by Bishop A. C. Thompson, of Norfolk.

The English landed first at Cape Henry, journeyed to Jamestown a few days later and there established the first permanent English colony in North America. The landing at Cape Henry was made April 26, 1607.

The waters of the Potomac and the Chesapeake Bay over which the President traveled were not unfamiliar to him. While Secretary of Commerce he often fished for bass in the lower Potomac and for Norfolk spots in the bay.

Spent Last Week-End Fishing.

Unlike former President Coolidge, however, Mr. Hoover has not taken any trips down the Potomac since becoming President. Soon after taking office he ordered the presidential yacht Mayflower decommissioned and sold. The Navy Department was unable to get a reasonable bid on her at the time and she later burned while tied up at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

This was the third week-end which President Hoover has spent outside Washington. Two weeks ago he attended the funeral of the late Speaker Longworth at Cincinnati and last week he made his first trip to the Rapidan camp in Virginia, where he rested and fished.

He will go into the Old Dominion State again on May 1 to turn the first shovel of dirt starting construction of the Lee boulevard link connecting Washington with the Shenandoah National Park. This ceremony will take place at Fort Buffalo.

SESSIONS OF D.A.R. END WITH BANQUET

Vice Presidents Are Installed With Ceremony; $23,000 Given Hall Fund.

The fortieth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which has been in session all week at Constitution Hall, came to a close last night with a banquet at the Willard Hotel.

Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general, declared the congress officially adjourned at 2:30 p. m. immediately after the installation of the seven newly elected vice presidents general and one honorary vice president general. Each one of the new officers took the oath of office and had her ribbon insignia placed about her shoulders by one of the retiring officers.

Mrs. Russell William Magna announced at the morning session that since Tuesday $23,000 has been contributed by State delegations and individuals toward the Constitution Hall fund, making a grand total of cash and pledges $1,166,000.

District Chapter Presents Gifts.

The District of Columbia chapter gave some valuable gifts to the museum in Memorial Continental Hall yesterday during the period set aside for the presentation of gifts. Among these were a green silk folding fan presented by Miss Sarah E. Cushing, of the Army and Navy Chapter in memory of her aunt, Miss Anne Cook Cushing, of Rhode Island. Mrs. Albert N. Baggs, regent of the Major L'Enfant Chapter of the District of Columbia, presented to the library a copy of "Ancestors in Silhouette," compiled an autographed by the donor, Mrs. F. Meville Jackson, of London, England.

This book contains a valuable collection of silhouettes of many Americans. A cluster light for the main lobby of Constitution Hall is the gift made through Mrs. Marshall B. Clarke, regent of the Martha Washington Chapter of the District of Columbia in honor of the State regent, Miss Helen Harman.

Other interesting gifts presented were a woden chest, the property of Mary Musgrove, heroine of Musgrove Mill, presented by Mrs. J. S. Bailey, of South Carolina. A hurricane shade of early American glass, owned by Mary Rees Cherry, Real Daughter, was presented by her granddaughter, Mary Cherry Doyle, of South Carolina. The New Jersey State delegation presented a piece of leaf from the arch under which Washington passed at Trenton on his way to his inauguration; a pitcher of early American glass used in the family of Capt. John Caldwell, presented by Mrs. I. Hampton Williams, of the Ann Whitall Chapter; Continental money presented by Mrs. Joseph A. Reid, and a child's knife and fork used during the Revolution presented by Jane Clement Bee, Olde Newton Chapter.

Drinking Cup Given.

Maryland D. A. R. gave a horn drinking cup used during the Revolution by Maj. John Morrison, presented by Mrs. Letitia P. Wilson, Mrs. Lucy Wilson Debert Williams and Mrs. Dorothy Wilson Debert Conrodt, of the Carter Braxton Chapter; a Masonic pitcher from England presented by Alice Leakin Welsh.

A neckerchief stained with the blood of a British officer was presented by the New York delegation

The knitting needles once used by Martha Washington were presented by Miss Carrie Maloney, of the Anne Gridley Chapter, Michigan

A chair in honor of President General Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart was presented by Mrs. George Washington Holland, of the Blue Worth Chapter, Minnesota.

Many of the members of the D. A. R. Congress accompanied the Children of the American Revolution on their annual pilgrimage to place wreaths on the tombs of George and Martha Washington at Mount Vernon yesterday afternoon.

Procession Is Formed.

At the foot of the hill they formed a procession, headed by the color bearers Matthew Trimble Sawtelle, of Capital Society, and Robert Wilson, of Gov. Welles Society. The wreath for George Washington's tomb was furnished by the New York State societies and that for Martha was given by the Old Glory Society and laid by Anne Tennant. Taps were sounded by Hamilton Colt, after which the assemblege made their way to the C. A. R. Tree, planted by the first members 35 years ago.

Mr. Julian Washington Washington told the story of the tree which the attendants have always given special care. Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, the last living child born at Mount Vernon, told the story of Washington's youth as it is known in the Washington family. She said she could not vouch for the cherry tree story, but she did know the story of the colt was true. To show off his horsemanship to some 15-year-old companions, George mounted the spirited but unbroken horse, which immediately fell dead. This he admitted to his mother in the same way the story of the cherry tree has it.

Three members of the Washington family took part in this ceremony while several others were in the audience.

Oath of Office Given.

The oath of office was then administered to the newly elected national board. They were Mrs. Samuel Shaw Arentz, president; Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, vice president, presiding; Mrs. Frank Ray, recording secretary; Miss Aimee Powell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Percy Baily, chaplain; Mrs. Gwynn Gardiner, registrar, Mrs. John Groves, librarian; Mrs. Theodore Uhler, organizing secretary. The vice presidents are Mrs. Violet Blair Janin, Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. John Mosher, Mrs. Robinson Downey, Mrs. Rose Mulcare, Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Mrs. Lawrence Quirello, Mrs. Frederic Menges, Mrs. John Cable.

The past national presidents are Mrs. Frederick Dubois, Mrs. Frank Mondell, Mrs. Josiah Van Orsdel and Mrs. Percy Quin. List of pages includes Barbara Fries, Mary Darnby Scott and Margaret Van Horn, personal pages to the president.

At the banquet at the Willard last night Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general, presided and Mrs Walter L. Tobey, State regent of Ohio was the toastmistress. The only speaker was Judge Harold B. Wells, of New Jersey, who spoke on the patriotic ideals and work of the D A. R. Greetings were given by national and State officers and distinguished guests.

Mrs. Frank Hight was chairman of the banquet committee, assisted by Mrs. George Hillyer, jr., Miss Margaret Withers, Mrs. Richard Claughton, vice chairman; Mrs A. S. Gardiner, Mrs. Frederick T. F. Johnson, Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, Mrs. Edward A. Keys and Mrs. Frederick D Reynolds.

ROLLICKING RENO

By J. F. McDONALD

Reno's Lawyer-Mayor Has Lost One Divorce

Even Then, Defendant Won Her Freedom; Chief Executive Open Advocate of Gambling and Has Ideas on Prohibition.

Reno, Nev., April 25.—Reno's mayor is a divorce attorney, appropriately enough. He boasts that in 2,000 cases he has tried before the bar he lost just one.

"The plaintiff," he explains, "discovered that his wife was also in the city and didn't show up for the hearing."

And the wife, as things turned out, got the decree herself, which makes the one lost case a kind of left-hand victory.

Mayor E. E. Roberts also is, quite naturally, the foremost advocate of open gambling, legalized by the Legislature March 19, and he has ideas on prohibition.

Believes In Temperance.

"I believe in temperance" he said last month—and it was from the pulpit of a church—"but I know prohibition is a failure.

"If the Federal Government would give me authority I would close up every bootlegging place within twenty-four hours. I would place a barrel of good corn whisky manufactured in a municipal still, on every street corner. A dipper would be attached to each barrel and a sign reading, 'Help yourself to all you want but don't take any away.' That would soon drive the customers out of the speakeasies into the street, and when you take the profit out of bootlegging you can stop it."

For the wide-open city is the best selling point of the divorce mill. With Mexico and Paris gunning for the trade, Reno must create attractions, the cosmopolitan environment, amusements, life that moves with speed and color. Rich men and lovely ladies will not sit down in the the sagebrush along the Truckee's banks and wait six weeks in boredom for decrees.

Personal Liberty Respected.

Mayor Roberts, therefore, leads the the big parade to advertise the "only city in the United States where personal liberty is respected"—beats the loudest on the bass drum.

This 6-foot Westerner, 40 years a resident of Nevada, looks the part of an old-fashioned alderman. He affects wing collars and plush ties that run to diamond patterns of fierce colors. An Elk's tooth dangles from a watch chain built along the lines of ship's cable, over a majestic paunch.

His appearance is a contradictory thing, for Mr. Roberts is, by choice, a sportsman. The sights of a new gun will interest him more than the $500 check his latest client handed him and which came back—"no funds."

He has owned gamecocks, and at his country home supports a private duck preserve for hunting. He follows baseball closely, for his daughter, who died a year ago, was the wife of Walter Johnson and the great pitcher spends much of his spare time shooting on the Roberts ranch.

Frieze of Playing Cards.

The Mayor's private office is something you would find probably in no other seat of government than Rollicking Reno.

Round the wall, between the molding and the ceiling, then runs a frieze of playing cards. Playing cards, tacked to the wall, surround the framed commission, admitting E. E. Roberts to legal practice before the Supreme Court of the United States.

A stuffed hawk graces the official desk. An elk's head gazes down upon a bright brass cuspidor of barroom size.

The mayor, in fact, is a collector. As you enter you will fall, likely as not, over an ancient ox yoke that lies beside the desk. Stuffed rattlesnakes glare at you from corners of the room. A gun rack runs half way around the walls. It is filled with rusty muzzle loaders that saw service during the early Indian wars, long before Nevada dreamed of Statehood. There are bowie knives and derringers, old-fashioned plains style side-winders, guns with notches on their handles, five-shooters taken from buried desperadoes and guns with no handles at all. The Mayor knows the history of each one. It is his hobby.

It was 1923 when he took office, after an earlier defeat as candidate for the United States Senate and a period of retirement into private life, and probably the $75 monthly salary he draws is the least attraction of the job. As a lawyer, he was prosperous.

They credit him with a real love of politics, and certainly the Roberts machine has functioned smoothly. In his two previous campaigns he made no public speeches, issued no statements to the press, but sat in his fantastically decorated quarters and rolled up the votes.

This year there is a different situation. Clarence True Wilson, head of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, opened a Mayoralty race that promises to be much livelier than the usual, when he compared Nevada to a combination of "Sodom, Gomorrah and Perdition."

That stepped on Mr. Roberts' toes and opened up an opportunity for hot political debate.

Taking the pulpit of the Methodist Church as his rostrum, the mayor opened his drive for votes with a short sermon on the text: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal."

Calls Wilson "Longhair."

He excoriated Dr. Wilson as a seeker of publicity, as a critic ignorant of his subject matter and as a "longhair," a word he coined for the occasion. A "longhair," said the mayor, "is a seeker of evil rather than good in life, who would tear down his brother rather than help him."

For a week after that opening gun, Mayor Roberts spoke at every gathering, to defend "the fair name of the city," he said.

But it was a challenge that his opponents for the mayoralty did not take up and, with the election a week off, he again has lapsed into silence, relying on his well-oiled machine.

The two other candidates for office have steered clear of gambling and divorce as issues of their campaigns. They are Howard S. Doyle, Democrat, former member of the board of county commissioners, Ford agent in Reno, and as president of the chamber of commerce, one of the city's best known business men, and Milburn R. Gregory, real estate dealer and war veteran.

Faces Political Difficulty.

Both nonchalantly ignored Mayor Roberts' "issue" and refused to debate the closed against the open city.

The fact is that this year Mayor Roberts, the high priest of "personal liberty," faces a political difficulty. In 1923 he was elected without difficulty and again in 1927, but since his first election he has created opposition. In 1926 he contended the Republican nomination for Senator with Tasker L. Oddie, and last year he opposed Gov. Alfred B. Balzar for the gubernatorial designation of the party.

His machine still is in good running order, but this year friends of Oddie and of Balzar are less enthusiastic for his cause.

The argument that Reno, whether closed or open, must be run on business, not on circus lines to meet the current nationwide depression may have hurt him somewhat, though the betting still is five to four that he will win.

Whichever way it goes, open gambling and the six-weeks divorce law will not be affected, evidently. But, should Mayor Roberts lose his office, there will be removed from the Nevada scene the outstanding advocate of venial sins. And, in the referendum scheduled for 1932 the cause of tolerance would have to go without its picturesque, appealing spokesman.

The final article of this series, published tomorrow, will deal with the future prospects of the gambling industry, in wide-open Reno.

HOOVER WINS POLL; ISSUES ECONOMIC

House in 1916 when it appeared that Charles Evans Hughes had him beaten, came replies from ten of the 1928 delegates and alternates, located in various parts of the State. Eight are for President Hoover for another term.

Returning to the East, all of the New Yorkers heard from agreed that President Hoover should be renominate. With regard to the vice presidential nomination, ten named Curtis, three suggested Gov. Roosevelt of Porto Rico and the remainder withheld a choice.

On issues, the New York men and women were almost tied. Economic conditions, however, were given a slight edge over prohibition. If business improves, one delegate predicted, prohibition is certain to become the dominant issue.

"President Hoover will have a very difficult time being elected again unless he does something to change the present prohibition law," wrote George B. Post, jr.

New Jersey's delegates who responded to the questionnaire were all for President Hoover, except one. He favored Senator Morrow. Two liked Vice Prseident Curtis for another nomination, two would substitute Gov. Roosevelt of Porto Rico, and the others were noncommital.

"Prohibition would be the main issue if the two parties were strongly divided on that question," said Frank Wilkinson, of Clifton, N. J., "but both parties seem to be sectionally divided."

Consequently, he made economic conditions the first issue, the tariff second and prohibition third.

The District of Columbia is entitled to two delegates and two alternates in a Republican convention All four predicted that Herbert Hoover would again be the nominee. Three think that Vice President Curtis can have the nomination again if he wants it, while the third lets the question go unanswered.

Republican-Democrat To Vote Here as Latter

Scranton, Pa., April 25 (U.P.).—Representative P. J. Bolan, elected as a joint candidate of the Republican and Democratic parties in this district, announced tonight that he would vote as a Democrat.

RENOMINATION MOVE STARTED FOR HOOVER

Mr. Hoover of an avowed intention to run for reelection.

Denies Personal Aspirations.

Since the close of Congress he has been in frequent consultation with the Republicans known to be friendly to Mr. Hoover's administration.

While his activity is regarded by most of the party workers as indicative of Mr. Hoover's intentions, others are somewhat skeptical of the wisdom of such an open move. Nevertheless, the Republican regulars concede it would be unusual if Mr. Hoover did not stand for renomination and almost as unusual if he were not renominated.

Benjamin's arrival here during the winter created considerable speculation after his visit at the White House. He was spoken of as a possible secretary to the President and as an adviser. He merely smiles at all inquiries.

"Just smoke it in your pipe," says Benjamin, "that you will never see me in public life. I have wanted to establish a law office here for many years. What is unusual about that? I expect to be here long after this administration has ended."

Hoover's Renomination Is Predicted by Slemp

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—C. Bascom Slemp, former secretary to President Coolidge, sailing today on the Ile de France, predicted President Hoover will be renominated by acclamation. Mr. Slemp will represent the United States as commissioner general at the International Colonial and Overseas Exposition, which opens in Paris, May 6.

"The party which will cope with the present economic unrest and industrial instability will be the one whose candidate will be chosen as President," Mr. Slemp said.

SLAIN MAN CALLED FARO FRAUD CHIEF

Woman Victim Identifies Photo; Murder Is Laid to His Associates.

South Bend, Ind., April 25 (A.P.).—George "Big" Perry, slain last night in an ambush at his home, was identified tonight as the ringleader in the mysterious Springfield, Ill., faro swindle of $50,000 from Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge.

Mrs. Blacklidge, former collector of internal revenue for Chicago, was unable to come here because of illness. But she looked closely at photographs of Perry in Chicago and said: "That's the man—that's the one who engineered the whole faro plot!"

And from information given by Perry's wife police formulated the theory he had been slain for failure to pay his confederates their share of the money mulcted from Mrs. Blacklidge and Edward J. Litzinger, wealthy Chicagoan, who loaned her the $50,000.

They started a search for Roy Burgess and Roscoe Reynolds, alleged associates of Perry in the "big" money game which electrified Illinois when word of it leaked out. They were informed that Perry's father-in-law, John Caniff, was an old friend of Mrs. Blacklidge's late husband; that he used to play cards in the rear of the Blacklidge drug store a few years back.

Perry "Man of Mystery."

Police followed a theory that this friendship had been used by Perry to strike up acquaintanceship with Mrs. Blacklidge—to interest her in the faro game for high stakes. Here they had aid from Mrs. Blacklidge.

"I remember," she said, "that Caniff used to play cards in the back room with my husband.

"Now I begin to see how Perry knew so much about my family history."

Forty years old, expensively dressed, Perry was a mysterious character in South Bend. He had married his wife, who is 26, a year ago. Since then, according to her story, he was never with her long. She continued to stay with her parents in South Bend while he went about the country "on advertising business" he told her.

Shot down as he stepped from the door of Caniff's Garage, he told police "a friend" did the shooting. He would not amplify that statement. His wife told of seeing the flash of a single shot.

Support of Revenge Theory.

Police claim the motive of revenge was substantiated in the finding of $300 in Perry's pockets, which, they said, eliminated robbery.

Questioned today by Coroner B. J. Bolka, Mrs. Perry talked freely. She said she had suspected her husband was a racketeer, that he always carried a large roll of money, and that she had suspected her husband of complicity in the faro swindle.

After reading of the swindle, in which Mrs. Blacklidge lost money loaned her by Edward R. Litsinger, Republican leader of Chicago, Mrs. Perry said she received a telephone call to meet her husband in Michigan City, Ind.

"He acted nervous and insisted on going to New York at once. Then we sailed for Europe. Before leaving New York, I noticed his name linked with the swindle under an alias of 'Parker.' When I asked him about it, he told me to shut up and asked me 'Aren't you getting everything you want?' I had no right to complain, so I shut up," Mrs. Perry told the coroner.

Mrs. Blacklidge called Perry's death "retribution." She said:

"His death is just retribution for what he did to me. His was a physical murder, mine a mental death."

ROVER WILL REOPEN HUFF SLAYING CASE

now is ailing. Her greatest concern was for Hurtha. She said that he had never been well since the night of the shooting.

Parent Silent on Evidence.

Questioned at his Hume Spring home yesterday, Albert A. Huff said he preferred not to go into the nature of the evidence he plans to present to the jury.

Huff asserted, however, that he had uncovered an "eye witness" to the murder, and had received information from other sources which he thought would alter the decision of the jury. He said he could not divulge these "sources," adding that "it would all come out at the hearing."

"These people are in business," he said, "and it might hurt them."

Huff said the district attorney had not advised him of his decision, and that two letters to his office urging that the case be reopened had been unanswered. He said he had received a letter from some one, whose name he would not give out, "warning" him not to press for a reopening.

Father Studying for Ministry.

The father of the man who was shot disclosed yesterday that for nearly four years he has been studying at home to become a Methodist minister. He said he has already been licensed as an "exalter," and expected to complete his studies, and be ordained this fall. Meanwhile he attends the Little Christian Church at Hume Springs.

He said he and "his boy" had always "buddied around," and for that reason he missed him the more.

"Of course I know that nothing I can do will bring my boy back to me," he said, "That's what hurts most. But I'm convinced it was cold-blooded murder and I'm going to prove it to the jury."

Huff added he did not believe in capital punishment, and for that reason did not intend to ask for a first degree murder indictment.

Freed by Previous Jury.

The first grand jury to weigh the case returned an "ignoramus" freeing Dulaney March 12, three days after the shooting. Dulaney was released, and immediately returned to the home of his father-in-law, where his four children were being cared for. A reconciliation afterward was effected with his wife, who took the blame for the incident, in a statement to police. She told newspapermen that her husband "should have shot me."

Under the District laws, the "ignoramus" returned by the grand jury did not release him from the possibility of future prosecution. The case may be presented to each succeeding grand jury for years, unless there is an indictment.

Five days after the jury finding, Huff's father appeared at the office of the district attorney to ask reopening of the case.

THE NEW CINEMA OFFERINGS

EARLE

"IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE." Paramount picturization of the play by Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett, adapted to the screen by Arthur Kober, featuring Norman Foster, Carole Lombard, "Skeets" Gallagher and Eugene Pallette, supported by Lucien Littlefield, Helen Johnson, Louise Brooks and Morgan Wallace. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

In addition to affording an inspiring object lesson to those timorous business executives who are cowering in the black presence of an ominous industrial depression, this rehabilitated comedy of almost two decades ago regales the optimistic amusement seeker with more lusty laughs than he has encountered in a picture since goodness knows when.

In structural form the version of "It Pays to Advertise" now under the microscope adheres rigidly to the original pattern. Much of the stage comedy, of both lines and situation, has been retained. The job has been so deftly done, however, and the process of modernization so skillfully, yet unobtrusively, contrived, that the old satire on high-pressure sales methods possesses all the zip and go of a brand-new idea, as up to date as tomorrow's sunrise—and much, very much, funnier!

The whole hilarious business concerns the commercial adventure—with a little love thrown in as a side line—of the playboy son of a millionaire soap manufacturer who was tossed out on his ear, without a cent, to make his own living. There was a side bet between dad and the pretty secretary that she couldn't keep the kid working for six months. So the youngster went into the soap business with a former theatrical press agent, who muscled in on the enterprise, and the girl. Just as they are about to sink for the third time in the sea of debt created by their national advertising campaign for a soap they didn't have, it becomes apparent through a parent that there has been a definite turn for the better and that prosperity is just around the corner!

The play is nowhere near so trite as that last line.

The triumvirate of ebullient young industrialists is composed of Norman Foster, the son; Carole Lombard, the secretary, and "Skeets" Gallagher, the press agent. The elder manufacturer who does his best to burst his son's soap bubble is Eugene Pallette and his bitter rival, Lucien Littlefield. It is among these five that the fun has its fountainhead, although important contributions to the gayety are made from time to time by Louise Brooks, who here returns to the American screen after a long absence; Helen Johnson, Morgan Wallace, Mercia Manners, Tom Kennedy, Junior Coghlan and numerous others.

An added screen feature is "The Putter," first of twelve two-reel golf subjects starring Bobby Jones under the general title of "How I Play Golf." "The Putter" is not so much a lesson in putting as it is a bit of corking good entertainment in which Frank Craven, stage star; Joe E. Brown and Richard Barthelmess participate, in addition to the wizard of the links. Bobby Jones' advice on putting is purely incidental to an amusing little story and some expert wisecracking.

A Mermaid comedy, "Windy Riley Goes Into Hollywood," featuring Jack Shutta and Louise Brooks, satirizes movie press agentry, after a manner, and the Graham McNamee newsreel and a fashion review in color complete the projected program.

The vaudeville portion of the entertainment, charmingly introduced by Maxine Doyle, is led by Frank and Milt Britton and their gang of musical maniacs, who boast that their specialty is intellectual insanity This is inspired lunacy that can not be described.

Next in popular acclaim yesterday were Annie, Judy and Zeke, three Georgia Crackers, who stopped the show cold with their singing musicianship and dancing. Annie is the star instrumentalist of the trio, giving the "St Louis Blues" an entirely new meaning on the piano. Judy is the dancer and comedienne and Zeke chatters and sings in best hillbilly nasal fashion. Ray and Harrison, with the plump Naomi Ray clowning boisterously at her own expense, are a riot in their burlesque ballet dance and the Andresens are gymnasts and pole balancers—a man and a girl—who close their act literally with a whirlwind finish.

COLUMBIA

"UNFAITHFUL." Paramount picturization of a story by John van Druten, starring Ruth Chatterton, supported by Paul Lukas, Juliette Compton, Paul Cavanagh and Donald Cook. Directed by John Cromwell. Reviewed Saturday night (second week) by J. F. Brady.

The appealing emotional acting which characterizes Ruth Chatterton's work in "Unfaithful" continues to exalt her among contemporary screen stars.

"Unfaithful" is a drama full of concealed bitterness, emotion, pathos, a few moments of what might be termed comedy, and a climax which is splendidly done, It is a heart-aching story of an unfaithful husband, and an apparently unfaithful wife, unable to divorce her husband because it is the wife of her brother who is causing all the domestic and family trouble. A strange twist to the old domestic triangle, well worked out, directed and mounted; a story of so much interest and such capable acting as to hold one's attention throughout.

Paul Lukas is the polished Carl, always so sympathetic toward Fay (Miss Chatterton) in her troubles and so deeply in love with her. Donald Cook, as the brother, is good, and Paul Cavanagh plays well the unfaithful husband. Juliette Compton, as Gemma, the unfaithful wife of the brother and the husband's lover, handles well her "breakdown" and confession.

The play points the way to domestic happiness—in that it teaches what not to do in order to live happily as husband and wife. It so happens that Fay, Lady Kilkerry, and Ronnie, Viscount Kilkerry (Cavanagh), start the story with their marriage, and also that for sometime before then Ronnie and Gemma have been carrying on as lovers. Gemma is the wife of Fay's brother and when the truth is learned Fay will not divorce her husband who is dubbed the most wonderful man in London, because to do so would ruin her brother. So, she surprises society by her wild parties, thoughtless capers, all done in a maddening effort to forget—but in all this, Carl continues to stay close by—to be the comforter—the one who really loves.

The climax is well done in a great piece of camera work. The London fog, the English atmosphere, the settings all add a distinctive touch to a most entertaining picture

As supplementaries there are an Our Gang Comedy "Bargain Day;" a most interesting series of Walter Futter's "Curiosities;" a current release of Paramount Sound News and the organ recessional, "Walking Between the Rain Drops."

PALACE

"A TAILOR MADE MAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Harry James, from the original "Der Gutsitzende Frack" of Gabriel Dregely, starring William Haines, supported by Joseph Crawthorn, Dorothy Jordan and Marjorie Rambeau. Directed by Sam Wood. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

"A Tailor Made Man" will have you in stiches and give you a ripping good time. it's "needles" to say! (Sorry).

The story, of course, is familiar to almost everyone. It is one of those comedy classics which the oldsters—not very old—saw in 1917 when Grant Mitchell played the lead and which the youngsters have played in high schools all over the land, and for those between the oldsters and the youngsters, I think there was a silent movie. This time it is cut and patched just a bit to fit our modern fashions with fantastic offices and our current depression omnipresent.

Just in case you don't know, it is the tale of the rise and fall and rise again of one John Paul Bart, a poor pants presser—poor both at pressing pants and making money, who is perhaps the world's greatest dreamer and firmest believer in destiny. He is not above helping destiny to the extent of borrowing, without so much as a "by your leave," evening clothes and having his "one flight to the sun." He attends, uninvited, of course, except perhaps by destiny, an exclusive party, meets "Abe" Nathan, financier and department store owner, and, as John Paul would say with a snap of the fingers, "Voila"—his fortune is made. Unfortunately, fortune proves a barometer with many ups and downs for John Paul.

Much of the fun and all of the romance, despite the delightfully catty competition of Hedda Hopper and Marjorie Rambeau, as two designing mothers with eligible daughters, takes place in the combination shop and home of Tailor Hubers, a kind-hearted and explosive German who adores his daughter, Tanya, and her cooking.

William Haines, as John Paul, emerges at last from his eternal, and recently almost unbearable, obnoxiousness into a much more likable natural and at times pathetic young fellow. His pathos is as yet a trifle self-conscious, but the impression must grow from this picture that William Haines is not a clown but an actor who knows how to clown superlatively well and also how to play his drama straight and seriously if given half a chance.

Joseph Crawthorn, as the tailor, is worthy of commendation equal to that of Haines, and if William hadn't given such a rattling good performance, Crawthorn might be said to steal the show. His is a deft, deliriously funny performance.

There is a fragility, daintiness and an emotional sincerity about Dorothy Jordan, as Tanya, that is very appealing. The cast is large and unusually fine with such players as William Austin and Ian Keith doing brief bits.

They are catching masters of ceremony young now—for that dancing kid, Chester Fredericks, is managing things on the stage this week, and managing them very well, too, despite a particularly stubborn and apparent cold.

The Galenos, seen not so long ago, are welcomed again in their fast-moving and startling acrobatics. A clever sextet. Fredericks mixes with them for a bit of fun. Another old friend is Deszo Retter, the man who wrestles with himself—and remember that excrutiating Egyptian dance of his, every time the band booms a certain toe-tingling tune, whether he is tap dancing, hanging under a table or undressing at the moment?

Nina Olivette dances well and sings a bit about the "ballet," The ballet, by the way, of Chester Hale girls is one of the best features of the bill.

There are a Burton Holmes travel reel to Morocco, a comedy and a newsreel to complete the bill.

METROPOLITAN

"TEN NIGHTS IN A BARROOM." An L. E. Goetz picturization of the famous melodrama, adapted for the screen by Norton S. Parker, starring William Farnum and Thomas Santshi, supported by Robert Frazer, Kathryn Clare Ward, Frank Leigh and Patty Lou Lynd. Directed by William O'Conner. Reviewed Saturday evening by W. A. Whitney.

The age-old melodrama depicting the evils of Demon Rum comes back to town in a new and improved form, possessing in this audible screen translation more entertainment than usually can be associated with the general run of pictures primarily designed to correct a so-called social evil.

Ever a powerful weapon for the promulgation of the doctrine of temperance, "Ten Nights" (of which there are only seven here shown) not only still retains its essential preachment, but presents an engrossing drama even though the form employed may not now be quite in vogue.

The main plot centering on Joe Morgan, one-time prosperous miller, and his fight against liquor, as well as the subplots of his small daughter's love and the two distinct love themes, are too well known to require further elaboration.

William Farnum, in the principal role, delivers a fine interpretation of Joe Morgan. While he seems to be overacting, it is entirely in keeping with the period of the drama and the dramatic pattern used. As the saloonkeeper, through whose insistance Joe takes to drink, is Thomas Santschi, whose delineation is one of the best. Patty Lou Lynd, as Joe's daughter, is poignantly appealing in an excellently played role, one designed to, and that does, create sympathy, without ever getting maudlin.

Among the others in the cast are Lionel Belmore, as Dr. Romaine; Robert Frazer, as the doctor; Frank Leigh, as the gambler; Thomas Jefferson, as Silent Sam, the barfly; Rosemary Theby, as Joe's wife, and Kathryn Clare Ward, as Joe's mother.

"An African Boma," part two of the "Adventures in Africa" series, momentarily leaves the zoological aspect of the safari and presents a highly entertaining and instructive glimpse of a native village, the proper atmospheric prologue for further appreciation of the coming installments.

The Vitaphone revuelet, "Sky High," presents a diverting cycle of songs and dances, featuring Janet Reade and Dudley Clements. A release of the Universal News, with Graham McNamee announcing, completes the week's entertainment.

RIALTO

"A VIRTUOUS HUSBAND." Universal picturization of the play, "Apron Strings," by Dorrance Davis, adapted for the screen by Edward Laddy and C. Jerome Horwin, featuring Elliott Nugent and Jean Arthur, supported by Betty Compson and Tully Marshall. Directed by Vin Moore. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Much as the title might lead one to believe otherwise, "A Virtuous Husband" is not a sociological dissertation, but a rollicking comedy revolving around the amorous difficulties of a young man whose "advice to the love-lorn" comes in the form of letters written by his deceased columnist-mother and delivered at stated times by her administrator.

A Victorian quasideification of woman thus inculcated into the mind of the 1931 youth, and his serious attempt to live up both to that "ideal" and to the excessive demands of his mother complex, and to his being "different"—wherein lies the whole secret of this fast moving and perfectly delightful farce.

In the title role is Elliott Nugent, who does a remarkably fine piece of work in a part that is quite contradictory of the normal actions and reactions of the youth of the present era. A strained intensity pervades his entire performance, and nothing could more adequately typify the extreme difficulty encountered in such a role either in real life or in reel life.

And even more difficult is Mr. Nugent's task when it is Jean Arthur opposite whom he must play his part.

J. C. Nugent and Allison Skipworth, as Miss Arthur's parents, deliver fine impersonations and furnish living examples, quite unobtrusively, however, of acquired feminine domination, quite opposite to that of the younger Nugent, who stands for masculine supremacy from the start. Betty Compson has a small but delightful part in the first portion of the picture, but her really unneeded presence in the later sequences adds only to the scenic effect. Tully Marshall, as the paragon's lawyer, has a characteristic bit which he does creditably.

The supporting program is one of the best that has been assembled at the Rialto for weeks and is headed by "Let's Play," in which Slim Summerville and Tom Kennedy continue their adventures in the "A. E. F." with Rita Rozelle as the pulchritudinous raison d'etre of their current escapades. It is a typical Summerville affair, patterned after his previous army farces, bordering on the risque at times.

Billy Wayne, in "Taking Chances," resorts to the ancient gag of female impersonation for comedy effects, but finally succeeds in winning Thelma White in spite of family opposition.

The customary organ numbers were omitted at the performance reviewed, the Universal News, Graham McNamee newscasting, and Oswald, the Rabbit, in a cartoon comedy, "The Fireman," rounding out the program.

LITTLE WHITE LIAR!

THIS is the unjust fate of an innocent husband whose sweet disposition was soured by a deceitful hot water faucet. He was all ready for a smooth shave. He turned the "hot" faucet. But the water ran icy cold. Too late to start up the water heater. A razor tugging at a cold skin! A nerve-wracking experience with uncertain hot water service. How many of these "little white liars" have you in your home?

Your "hot" faucets will always live up to their promise—after you install a Self-Operating Gas Water Heater. It will put instant hot water at your finger tips—without work—without worry—without waiting—without attention. The cost? A trifling sum. A few pennies per day per person.

A small amount down and the balance in 18 monthly payments will put one in your home without further delay. There is no extra charge for financing and we will give you a $10 allowance for your old heater. When you drop in at any of our display rooms, ask about the "bargain basement."

CURRENT EVENTS IN VIRGINIA AND MARYLAND

POLL TAX PAYMENT SOUGHT IN FAIRFAX

All Democratic Voters Are Urged to Qualify for Coming Primary.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

The Democratic executive committee of Fairfax County is endeavoring to have the Democratic voters pay their poll tax on or before next Saturday so they will be eligible to participate in the Democratic primary August 4.

The Fairfax County treasurer's office has reported that an unusually large number of the citizens of the county have not paid their poll taxes this year. In some precincts almost one-half of the voters have not yet qualified to participate in the August primary. It is not necessary for a citizen to pay taxes on land or personal property in order to qualify, but they must pay the $1.50 poll tax.

The executive committee has also issued the following notice: All white persons qualified to vote in the general election for which the primary is held may vote at the primary, but no person shall be permitted to vote unless a member of the Democratic party and at the last preceding general election in which such party participated, voted for the nominee of the Democratic party. Each person who has not taken part in a general election can be challenged and made to give their declaration under oath that they will support the Democratic nominee in the ensuing election.

The name of no candidate shall be printed upon any official ballot used in the primary election unless such person is qualified to hold the office for which they are a candidate and unless they are eligible to vote in the primary in which they seek to be a candidate. At least 60 days before the primary the candidate must make and file a written declaration of candidacy and have paid the fee required on or before the day upon which they are required to file declaration of candidacy and have complied with the rules and regulations of the party. It shall not be permissible for a voter to write in any name not printed on the primary ballot, in the primary election. This notice is signed by Judge James M. Love as chairman and Samuel H. Styles as secretary of the executive committee.

Fairfax County Commissioner of Revenue James U. Kincheloe has announced that, pursuant to the provisions of the tax code of the State of Virginia, which requires taxpayers of the county to meet him at the voting precincts in the respective districts, he plans to start his visits through Dranesville district the latter part of this week. He will be in Buell's office, in the Town of Herndon, on Friday and Saturday of this week. The following week he will be at Cockrill's store at Colvin Run on May 4, H. L. Oliver's store at Forestville on May 7, Daly's store at Shady Oak May 8 and White's store in Dranesville on May 9.

His tour of the district will be completed with Dove's store at Navy on May 11 and Bowman's store at Floris on May 12. The commissioner or his deputy will assist the taxpayers in making returns on their tangible and intangible property and their State income taxes for this tax year. The returns must be made prior to June 1. Failure on the part of the taxpayer to comply with this law means a 10 per cent penalty added to the tax on tangibles and intangibles with a minimum penalty of $2 added to what the person would ordinarily pay.

Harvey G. Breckenridge, of Herndon, vice commander of the American Legion, Department of Virginia, has announced that Loudoun Post, No. 34, with S. H. Grimes, sr., as commander, has been awarded the Robey C. Thompson trophy for this year. This trophy was awarded the local post for having the largest percentage of increase in attendance of its members over preceding years.

The Herndon Council, Daughters of America, will hold its regular meeting tomorrow evening in Wilkins Hall at Herndon.

The schedule of Miss Sara E. Thomas, Fairfax County home demonstration agent, has been arranged for a Monday morning visit to Ivakota Farm School for a demonstration on the preparation of foods. That afternoon she will attend a meeting of the Clifton 4-H Club which will hold a bread judging contest. Tuesday morning she will attend a business meeting of the 4-H Club at Fairview and that afternoon she will give a demonstration on attractive kitchens before the meeting of the Home Demonstration Club at Andrew Chapel.

Wednesday afternoon Miss Thomas has invited all the women in the Franconia neighborhood who are interested in the organization of a home demonstration club in that community to meet at the home of Mrs. Albert S. Simms. Thursday and Friday she will visit the 4-H Clubs to assist them in completing arrangements for the 4-H Club rally day program.

The 4-H Clubs of the county will hold their annual rally day in the grounds of the Fairfax County Fair Association, at Fairfax next Saturday. The program will open at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Each club is to present a club song and stunt. The judging of the home demonstration teams from each club will take place, and a health contest will be held. Each club will select its best physically developed girl and enter her in the contest. The winner will represent the county in the State contest to be held at Blacksburg in July. The club making the best showing at the rally will receive a five dollar gold piece. A feature of the morning program will be an address by Robert Foster, in charge of 4-H Club work in the Eastern States. The afternoon program will be given over to announcing the winners and to recreation features.

Accotink Lodge, No. 75, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, will hold a celebration in commemoration of the 112th anniversary of the founding of Odd Fellowship in America tomorrow. The Rebekah Lodge, No. 38, will assist the Accotink Lodge in the celebration. The meeting will be held in the Woodlawn Community House, near the entrance to Fort Humphreys on the Washington-Richmond highway.

Among the principal speakers of the evening will be C. C. Leap, of Waynesboro, Va., grand master of Odd Fellows in Virginia; Frederick L. Flynn, of Alexandria, deputy grand master, and Dr. E. V. Regester, of Alexandria. Past State Grand Master Edmund H. Allen, of Newington, Va., will act as toastmaster. W. H. Walker, of Mount Vernon, will be in charge of the entertainment, and Mrs. Phoebe Adams, of Fort Humphreys, will have charge of the refreshments and luncheon. The celebration will be a public meeting.

The Marr Camp of Confederate Veterans will hold its annual meeting at the home of Commander Robert Wiley, on Cedar avenue, at 2 p. m. next Friday, for the purpose of arranging for the annual memorial day services about June 1, and to elect delegates to the grand camp of Confederate Veterans, which meets in June at Montgomery, Ala.

The meeting night of the Centerville Grange has been changed to the fourth Monday of each month. The new schedule will go into effect tomorrow evening with a meeting in the Oakton High School auditorium. The lecturer, E. D. Vosburg, has arranged a special program for the evening.

Alan Williams chief engineer of the Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department, has made the following appointments in the department for the coming year Charles L. Smith, engineer; F. P. Sagendorf and Elmer Dove, assistant engineers; George Tate and Fred Hillis, assistant chiefs; Rene Pfalzgraf, Charles Casside and Roy Hollis, pipemen; Lewis Coyner, captain, and John Whalen, lieutenant. Officers elected at the annual meeting of the company were James E. Nichell, president; Allan H. Williams, chief; Thomas P. Chapman, jr., secretary and treasurer. George B. Robey will have charge of the annual carnival to be held the last week in June.

The baseball schedule of the interschool league of the Fairfax County Athletic Association as originally prepared interfered with the class work of the pupils, so the association has adopted a new schedule, which opened last Friday and will end on May 15. Twelve games are to be played during the high school season. The revised schedule divides the schools into two sections, with Clifton, Herndon and Oakton in one division and McLean, Lee-Jackson and Falls Church in the other. The schedule arranged follows: Division 1—April 24, Oakton at Clifton; May 1, Clifton at Herndon; May 8, Oakton at Herndon; May 12, Herndon at Clifton; May 15, Clifton at Oakton.

Division 2—April 24, McLean at Falls Church; April 28, Falls Church-Lee-Jackson; April 23, Lee-Jackson against McLean at Falls Church; May 5, Lee-Jackson at McLean; May 8, Lee-Jackson against Falls Church at McLean; May 12, McLean against Falls Church at Lee-Jackson; May 15, McLean at Lee-Jackson.

Hollin Hall, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Peyton Wilson, on the River road just south of Alexandria, will be opened for the Wakefield Garden pilgrimage Wednesday and Thursday under the auspices of the Fairfax Garden Club. Mrs. Amos H. Chilcott and Mrs. Frederick Richardson will act as hostesses.

Wilbert T. Woodson, of Fairfax, divisional superintendent of the schools, has issued a letter to all school teachers in the county requesting that Friday be observed as May Day, Child Health Day and Patrons Day. Regular classes will be conducted Friday morning, with patrons invited to visit the schools. In the afternoon the child health feature will be observed with appropriate playlets and May Day games, while 5-point health certificates will be distributed to the children who met State health department requirements in regard to sight, hearing, teeth, weight and throats.

A 4-H Club and a county health rally will be held the following day in the Fairfax County Fair Grounds, under the leadership of Miss Sarah E. Thomas, Fairfax County home demonstration agent, and Miss Fannie Lou Seamon, county health nurse. A banner will be awarded the school having the highest percentage of 5-point pupils.

The Rev. Royal A. Rice, pastor of the Southern Methodist Church at Fairfax, in answer to many requests, will repeat his illustrated lecture at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening in the Fairfax Methodist Church. The lecture, "Dream Pictures," is a tour through the national parks and byways of Western United States. Mr. Rice plans to present twenty new pictures during his lecture Wednesday evening.

The Volunteer Class of the Southern Methodist Church of Fairfax is rehearsing for a play which is to be presented in the near future under the direction of Miss Edna Jerman and the Rev. R. A. Rice. The cast includes Mrs. Mary Cullen, Mrs. Mary Michelson, Mrs. Sydna Bennett, Miss Virginia Beavers, Miss Hannah Lee, Miss Mavix Cobb, R. A. Rice, Norman Cobb, Stanley Dove, Rene Pfalzgraf, Ralph Waple and Thomas I. Piggott.

Varied Issues Will Face Public Affairs Institute

Gathering at University June 28-July 11 Will Discuss Unemployment, Law Enforcement, Chain Store and Other Problems.

University, Va., April 25 (A.P.).—Unemployment, law enforcement, the chain store, Latin-American relations, the plight of Southern agriculture, problems of municipal administration, religious education in the rural church, the new industrialism in the South and regionalism, will be subjects of round-table discussion groups at the fifth Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, June 28-July 11.

Dr. Charles Gilmore Maphis, director of the institute, announced today that the institute will open with vesper services in the McIntire amphitheater on the evening of Sunday, June 28, conducted by Dr. Luther A. Weigle, dean of the Yale Divinity School.

This summer the plan of conducting the round tables will be changed. Instead of having these discussion groups meet every other day for a two hour conference, as has been done in the past, each round table will be continued through one week, with sessions lasting three hours each morning.

Dr. Raymond Moley, professor of public law in Columbia University, will direct the round table on law enforcement. The round table on Latin-American relations will be led by Dr. Herman G. James, president of the University of South Dakota, private secretary of the American delegation at the fourth Pan-American conference, and former research associate studying the Brazilian government for the Carnegie Institution.

James Monroe, who laid the corner stone for the first University of Virginia building and who was a member of the first board of visitors, died 100 years ago on July 4. The centennial of his death will be observed with memorial exercises held in connection with this Latin-American discussion group.

David R. Coker, prominent plant breeder and cotton expert, of Hartsville, S. C., will lead the round table on the plight of Southern agriculture.

A different aspect of life in the life in the country sections will be taken up in the round table on religious education in the rural church, which will be under the direction of Dr. Henry W. McLaughlin, director of the country church department of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

Problems of municipal government are to be discussed under the leadership of Dr. Thomas H. Reed, professor of political science in the University of Michigan, who has been a leader since the establishment of the institute.

Chain store discussions will be led by Dr. Frederick C. Hicks, former president of the University of Cincinnati, now research professor of economics at that institution.

The new industrialism in the South will be the subject of the group under leadership of LeRoy Hodges, managing director of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

MONTGOMERY SEEKS $8,000 FOR CHARITY

Sum Is Needed for Budget Requirements of Social Service League.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post,
9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md.
Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Montgomery County residents will be asked to contribute $8,000 toward the budget of the Social Service League of Montgomery County in the annual campaign for funds May 8 to 22. This sum represents an increase of $1,000 over the amount sought last year. The increase is necessitated by unusual demands upon the social workers due to the recent drought and unemployment.

Members of the campaign finance committee, headed by W. B. Armstrong, of Cabin John, will meet tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the county building at Bethesda to formulate plans to raise the necessary funds. The entire budget of the league for 1931-32 totals $24,100. The Montgomery County Commissioners will appropriate $11,000 of this amount as usual. The $8,000 will represent the support of private contributors and will be sought through the coperation of member associations of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, various women's organizations and individual contributors.

Chairmen of branch committees, which will conduct the campaign in each district of the county, will be appointed at the meeting tomorrow night. Each committee will be assigned a quota and efforts will be made to have all communities of the county contribute their fair share toward the goal.

A meeting of the executive committee of the joint committee of six county chambers of commerce and other civic and business groups will be held Thursday evening in the Bethesda County Building to discuss plans for raising $10,000 to finance a booklet to advertise the county's residential and business advantages. The executive committee also will discuss the naming of the group. William F. Prettyman, chairman of the naming committee, recommended the use of Greater Montgomery County, Inc. Several other names involving the use of Greater Montgomery County were suggested. A meeting of the general committee Friday night left the task of selecting the name to the executive committee.

Ward H. Marsh, executive director of the Greater National Capital committee of the Washington Board of Trade, addressed the meeting Friday night and explained the process of collecting the money to finance the movement. He promised the support of his committee when needed by the county group and to distribute the booklets through the booths his committee will locate at entrances to the city in the George Washington Bicentennial celebration in 1932.

Auto accessory thieves were busy Friday night as the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department soared to thespian heights with a minstrel show in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, according to reports to the police of the Bethesda Substation yesterday. Two wheels and tires were stolen from the auto of Mrs. E. H. Post, of Chevy Chase, Md., according to a report by Thomas Pyle, principal of the school, and a set of automobile tools was stolen from the car of Miss Helen Imirie, of Bethesda, sister of Fire Chief J. Fred Imirie.

The Xaverian Players will present a three-act comedy, "Here Comes Patricia," tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in St. Mary's Hall, Rockville, Md., for the benefit of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

A lawn fete and dance, with cafeteria supper, will be held May 9, from 5 to 12 midnight, at the parish hall for the benefit of the Sunday school of St. Mary's Episcopal Church. The school has an enrollment of 70 pupils, and the proceeds will be used to purchase supplies for the Sunday classes.

The committee in charge includes Mrs. Erwin B. McIntyre, Miss Pearl Graeves, Miss Margaret E. Carroll, Wilton Disney, Miss Dorothy Martin, Lawrence Rabbitt, Charles R. Smith, Miss Edna Hull and Margaret E. Carroll.

A meeting of the Montgomery County Red Cross drought relief committee hsa been called for Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Frank B. Severance, Gaithersburg banker, who is relief chairman of the county chapter. Reports on all relief work will be offered at the meeting.

The committee has expended $3,300 for relief work in the county to date, according to Mr. Severance, and has passed successfully the drought crisis time, he believes.

The annual town meeting of Takoma Park, Md., will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Takoma Park firehouse. Candidates for three posts on the town council left vacant by the expiration of the terms of H. E. Rogers, Martin Iverson and John R. Adams will be named.

The annual election will be held May 4 and Tuesday and Wednesday have been designated as registration days on which persons eligible to vote can register for the election. F. D. B. Auston, and Henry Scherger are judges of election and Mrs. J. O. Foulk is clerk. Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle and Mrs. Foulke also are registration clerks.

Section 4, Chevy Chase, will hold its annual tax meeting tomorrow night at the Chevy Chase School on Valley Place to fix the tax rate for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1931. Registered qualified voters who are owners of assessed property in the section are entitled to vote but interested persons are invited to attend and participate in the discussions. William R. DeLashmutt is chairman of the citizens committee.

Applications for Federal farm relief drought loans will not be accepted after April 30, according to an announcement by State Senator Robert G. Hilton, chairman of the local committee.

Three new members of the Community Council of Sandy Spring neighborhood were elected last night at a meeting of delegates from the thirteen constituent bodies at the community hall in Sandy Spring. They were A. D. Farquhar, Brookeville; Fred L. Thomas Sandy Spring, and Mortimer O. Stabler, Colesville.

The delegates voted to amend the constitution so that each organization would be given an annual member as well as the nine members at large. This will make a total of 22 delegates at the council. The new members will be elected by the constituent bodies at their own meetings in the next two weeks.

Driver Released Under $1,000 Bond

Baltimorean's Car Figures in Two Collisions at Fredericksburg.

Special to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 25.—Charles Hulcher, 22, of Baltimore, who was owner and driver of a truck which precipitated a collision between two other machines and resulted in serious leg injuries to Mrs. Charles Scott, 48, was released from jail here in $1,000 bond, after he had posted two attachment bonds on his truck in the sum of $5,000 and $2,000.

Attorneys for Mrs. Scott filed a $10,000 damage suit against the youth, while F. W. McNutt, whose car was demolished when struck by Hulcher's truck, entered suit for $965.

Mrs. Scott's leg was severely mangled when caught between two cars which had been set in motion when one was struck by a door which projected nearly 4 feet from the side of Hulcher's machine.

VIRGINIA HIGHWAYS ARE BEING TREATED

Oiling Planned So as Not to Delay Traffic During Visits to Shrines.

Richmond, Va., April 25 (A.P.).—Although there was much construction going on over the State, the State Department of Highways today reported that road conditions in general were good, with traffic moving over the regular roads where work was on new location, or over short sections of construction with little interference in nearly all cases.

Practically all oiling under way was off the main through roads, and wherever this work was going on the road was kept open and in good condition.

From April 29 to May 2 many of the historic homes and gardens of Virginia will be open, and for the convenience of many who will travel to them the department has arranged, wherever possible, to postpone oiling work on the roads leading to the shrines while the tour is in progress.

During the past week oiling was completed, for the present, on Route 38 between Fredericksburg and Bealeton; on Route 51 between Spotsylvania Courthouse and Ashland, although there is a section of this road between the Washington highway at Gum Tree and Coatsville being resurfaced preparatory to oiling soon and it was expected to be dusty in places; on U. S. Route 60 between Bottoms Bridge and Providence Forge; on U. S. 15 between Gordonsville and Palmyra, and on Route 44 between Buffalo Springs and South Boston.

Construction on route 13, between Richmond and Farmville, near Midlothian, was on new location except where the new and old roads intersect in two places. These short sections were expected to be slippery after rain. Between Cumberland and Buckingham Courthouse, route 13 was being oiled and the work was expected to continue until about May 6.

Between Gordonsville and Harrisonburg, on route 17, there was a section of construction near Standardsville that was expected to be slippery in places where the new and old roads cross, after a rain, but most of the work was on new location.

Route 39, from Richmond to Charlottesville and Staunton, was in good condition.

Oiling was under way on route 41, between Richmond and Short Pump, and traffic was advised to use Patterson avenue and the Three Chopt road.

Several forces were working on route 52, between Petersburg and Suffolk, resurfacing the road preparatory to reoiling, and through traffic was advised to follow route 10 or 35.

The only construction on U. S. 1 was widening work between Ashland and Richmond, and between Richmond and Petersburg. The regular paved road was being used but traffic was warned to drive slowly and carefully.

Leesburg Lawyers Will Defend Beach

Court Designates Two in Case of Man Accused by Schoolgirl.

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., April 25.—Lester Beach, scheduled to be brought to trial Tuesday morning in circuit court here under an indictment charging him with a capital offense against a Loudoun County school girl, will be defended by Attorneys Cecil Connor and Fenton Connor.

Beach, without funds, was unable to employ counsel and Judge J. R. H. Alexander, before whom the accused man will be tried, named the local attorneys to defend the prisoner.

Upon his arraignment Beach pleaded not guilty. Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher has announced that he will ask that death in the electric chair be imposed upon Beach.

NEW ENGLAND HORSE WINS WHISTLER CUP

Outsider Is Victor in Hunt Steeplechase, Greatest Race of Kind in America.

Worthington Valley, Md., April 25 (U.P.).—Soissons, an outsider, of the Flying Horse Farm, Boston, Mass., crossed the barrier in front here today to win the Ross W. Whistler Challenge Cup before 30,000 in the thirty-eighth annual running of the Maryland Hunt Cup Steeplechase, greatest race of its kind in America.

Seven horses started out of 18 entries over the difficult 4-mile track, with its 22 jumps. Only two finished.

Brose Hover, the favorite, owned by Leslie Behr, of Chicago, finished second, missing a chance to win the cup a second time when it fell at the second fence and was unable to overtake the winner.

Soissons ran the 4 miles in 9 minutes 9 seconds. Sportsmen from New York, Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Virginia and the District of Columbia gathered at the estate of C. L. A. Heiser to witness the event which has always drawn crowds equal to those attending runnings at flat tracks.

The Whistler Cup first was placed in competition in 1913. Jack Skinner, gentleman jockey from Warrenton, Va., rode the winner, and Crawford Burton New York City, was on Brose Hover.

Virginia's Choice, owned by Howard Bruce, who sent Billy Barton to England, suffered a broken collar bone when it fell.

SILVER CONFERENCE IN CHINA IS FAVORED

Senator Pittman Suggests Parley to Act on Price of Commodity.

(Associated Press.)

The suggestion that China might properly call an international conference on silver was advanced yesterday by Chairman Pittman, of the Senate foreign relations subcommittee which has been studying the depressed price of that commodity.

Senator Pittman will sail from Seattle for China May 16 to study the silver question and the causes of the drop in Chinese-American trade.

The Senate, at the last session of Congress, adopted a resolution reported by Senator Pittman's subcommittee urging President Hoover to call an international silver conference, but the President has taken no action.

Senator Pittman said there was opposition in some quarters to President Hoover calling such a conference for fear other governments would attempt to "enlarge the scope of the conference to include debt settlements and other financial questions."

"I can not see any sound justification for this timidity," Senator Pittman said, adding that the President could justifiably refuse to extend the scope of the conference.

"There has been considerable talk in China among its statesmen of the advisability of calling such a conference," the Nevada senator continued. "China could very properly call such a conference. China is suffering more than any other country, although all silver-using countries are suffering from the unnatural depressed price of silver.

"Every government, in my opinion, would feel it its duty to its business men and its commerce and trade to be present at such a conference."

Manassas Pageant Features Festival

Large Crowd Views Parade Opening Annual Event of Woman's Club.

Special to The Washington Post.

Manassas, Va., April 25.—Manassas was crowded today with persons here for the parade and pageant in connection with the annual spring festival given under auspices of the music section of the Woman's Club of Manassas.

Following the parade the festival opened in the school gymnasium with the coronation of Miss Helen Bisson as queen. She had as ladies in waiting and members of her court the following: Misses Ann Bradford, Barbara Neill, Frances Bushong, Christine Meetz, Sarah Lewis and Margaret Hottle.

Dances and numerous stunts by the children featured the afternoon program, while the flower booth, side shows, and other attractions did a thriving business to help swell the funds which the club will use in carrying on the course of music appreciation in the local schools.

New Isaye Opera Delights Brussels

Queen Elizabeth Congratulates Ill Composer on Triumph.

Brussels, April 25 (A.P.).—The Walloon opera, "Peter the Miner," written by Eugene Isaye, former conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was presented at the Royal Opera House this afternoon amid great enthusiasm.

Isaye, although ill, attended the presentation, sitting in a box which was screened from the public. Queen Elizabeth went to his box to congratulate him.

When the curtain fell tremendous applause greeted the composer, the spectators so frantically clapping their hands for Isaye that the orchestra almost forgot to play the national anthem, which, according to etiquette, must sound when royalty leaves a theater.

Girl Scouts Will Make Hospital Picture Books

Troops of local Girl Scouts will meet this afternoon at the National Girl Scout Little House, Eighteenth street and New York Avenue, to make picture books for Children's Hospital as their final demonstration in the program for Better Homes in America Week. There also will be an exhibit of Girl Scout handicraft, a brief musical and story telling by Miss Alice Hutchins Drake.

Among guests invited are the District Commissioners, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Henry Alvin Strong, Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau; Miss Helen Atwater, editor of the Journal of Home Economics; Surgeon General and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Walter Newton, Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics; Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Lamont, Miss Blanche Halbert, and Miss Julia Conner of Better Homes in America. Mrs. G. L. Bowman will be the hostess for the day.

EPISCOPAL LEADERS PROPOSE TO BAR DIVORCE IN CHURCH

vorced for any cause by a civil court may at the expiration of one year after the granting of the divorce apply to his bishop or to the ecclesiastical marital court for permission to marry another person.

If, after inquiry the bishop or court determine that the purposes of Christian marriage will be best served by the proposed marriage, permission may be granted to a minister of the Episcopal Church to solemnize the new marriage but this can not be done in an Episcopal church or by the form contained at present in the Book of Common Prayer for the solemnization of matrimony. A special service authorized by the bishop for such occasions will have to be used. It is also provided in this section of the canon that "it shall be within the discretion of any minister to decline to solemnize any marriage."

In Section VI of the Canon in cases of marital disagreements the offended party before instituting proceedings for divorce is urged to lay the matter before a minister of the church. "It shall be the duty of such minister to labor," continues the section, "to labor that they may be reconciled. If in the end they can not be reconciled, the minister shall report his findings to the bishop."

For Marital Court.

One of the striking proposals of the proposed canon is that an ecclesiastical court with jurisdiction over marital causes be created by the constitutions and canons of a diocese or district of the Episcopal Church. In case the creation of such a court is not expedient the bishop may appoint a godly communicant, resident therein, and learned both in the law of the church and the law of the State, to find the facts of a marital question and to report such facts to him."

Furthermore, in the third section of the proposed canon of matrimony it is stated that "no minister of the church shall solemnize a marriage unless he is assured that the parties thereto are thus instructed (on the nature of Christian marriage and the mutual forbearance and responsibilities of marriage), and that both hold the Christian ideal of marriage." Before a minister performs such a marriage he shall require both bride and bridegroom to sign the following statement in his presence:

"We, A. B. and C. D., desiring to receive the blessing of the church upon our marriage, do solemnly declare that we hold marriage to be in nature a lifelong contract for the physical and spiritual union of husband and wife, for the purpose of the procreation and the physical and spiritual nurture of children, and for the safeguarding and benefit of society. And we engage ourselves to make every effort to realize the Christian ideal and to avail ourselves of means of grace thereto as taught and provided by the Christian church."

It is understood that there was unanimity among all the members of the commission in regard to this third section, but certain differences developed about several of the other sections. The commission included notable clergymen and laymen of the Episcopal Church in this country, thus having within its membership, beyond doubt, the best of legal ability and experience; and it also includes men representing various schools of thought within the church. Its membership is as follows:

Membership of Commission.

The Right Rev. Herman Page, Bishop of Michigan, chairman; the Rev. Percy G. Kammerer; John M. Glenn; the Right Rev. Paul Matthews, Bishop of New Jersey; the Right Rev. William J. Scarlett, Bishop Coadjutor of Missouri; the Right Rev. Cameron J. Davis, Bishop Coadjutor of Western New York; the Rev. Frank H. Nelson, rector of Christ Church, Cincinnati, Ohio; the Very Rev. Frederick C. Grant, President of the Western Theological Seminary; the Rev. Howard C. Robbins, former dean of the New York Cathedral; the Rev. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity Church, New York City; Prof. Joseph H. Beale, long a member of the Harvard Law School; Origen S. Seymour, well-known lawyer and the Chancellor of the Diocese of Long Island; George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General of the United States; Roland S. Morris, a well-known lawyer, formerly Ambassador to Japan, and Chancellor of the Diocese of Pennsylvania.

At the general convention of the Episcopal Church held in New Orleans in 1925 a commission was appointed to study the whole subject of divorce. A report was made at the general convention in Washington in 1928 by this commission, which aroused much interest and made a number of suggestions. The commission was reappointed, with the power to add to its membership and the subject for its consideration widened to that of marriage and divorce.

In explanation of its proposed canon the commission brings out the following points:

The feeling is gaining rapidly that what is most needed in Christian marriage is the right sort of training in early life. There is an increasing agreement that it is absurd to unite two people in Christian marriage unless they believe in and intend to strive for the Christian ideals of marriage.

In Section VI the educational effort is further made to get men and women whose marital relations are strained to consult some minister of the church before instituting proceedings for divorce, the thought being that such a general practice could bring about the reconciliation of marital difficulties and the avoidance of divorces.

In Dark on Annulment.

The Section V defines for the first time the grounds on which marriage may be annulled although it contains little that is new in the law of the church, for the present Canon 43 and Marriage Service of the church both assume that under certain conditions marriage may be declared null and void. Yet, it is said, some bishops and chancellors are not clearly informed on what the law of the church is in regard to annulment of marriage and it was thought best to have a clear statement of it in the proposed canon.

The removal of all causes for divorce, including adultery, in the new canon is one of its striking features, yet it is noted that all penalties are removed so far as divorced persons are concerned. In the old canon the innocent party in divorces granted for adultery could remarry. It is said that the commission was in practical agreement in regard to these changes. In the official release of the department of publicity of the Episcopal Church received here yesterday it was stated:

"There is one outstanding reason for removing the exception for adultery, namely, that in a divorce given by the civil court for adultery it is only too often the innocent party that is penalized. Many times when the wife is guilty of adultery the husband makes himself the apparent offender in the eyes of the law. Moreover, in many cases where adultery is the real cause for divorce some other ground is given, such as drunkenness, cruelty, or desertion. This is often done for the sake of the family reputation, especially for the sake of the children. The present canon of the church often penalizes a husband or wife who is high-minded and chivalrous as compared with some other man or woman who is above all things looking for self-protection. Every clergyman is familiar with such cases.

About Marrying Divorced Persons.

"The part of the canon that will undoubtedly cause most discussion is Section VII, which permits clergymen of this church, under certain conditions, to solemnize the marriage of men and women who have been divorced. It should be made clear, however, that the door for remarriage of divorced people is by no means thrown wide open. Under the proposed canon no clergyman of this church can remarry divorced persons unless the bishop, or a duly constituted court, after due inquiry, shall declare that the purposes of Christian marriage will be best served by the proposed marriage, and even then the clergyman may not use the form of service contained in the book of common prayer; nor may the service be held in the church.

"There was a general agreement on the part of the members of the commission that people who for any reason whatever had failed to keep the vows made in a former marriage should not be remarried in the church or by the prayer-book service, just as if they had successfully fulfilled the vows previously made. At the meeting of the commission at which this proposed canon was adopted this proposal received unanimous acceptance by all those present, who represented a majority of the commission.

"Unfortunately, several members of the commission, and those who might have been most likely to dissent, were unable to stay throughout the meeting; but the other members of the commission aimed to present in Section VII a plan on which they hoped the commission could agree. However, it is not certain that they succeeded, probably because there was not a clear understanding as to what the word 'solemnize' might involve. A majority of the members of the commission felt that, in view of the fact that the law allows the remarriage of divorced persons and that therefore new marriage relations are entered upon and new families are founded, it is desirable that the church should bring into these new homes every possible spiritual influence. On the other hand, there was an equally clear desire that in doing this the church should take no step which might seem to condone divorce."

Civil Versus Religious Rule.

A lack of agreement arose in the commission on the proposition to distinguish definitely between a civil marriage by the state and a religious ceremony by the church. Bishop Cameron Davis, of Western New York, issued the following statement on this point:

"A minority of the commission proposed the following amendment to the canon 'No minister of this church shall solemnize a marriage unless the parties thereto shall have been married first by a civil magistrate.'

"In proposing this, it was stated that the separation of church and state in America is a fundamental principle in our social policy, and that this vestige of Erastianism should therefore be eliminated. Furthermore, marriage is primarily a civil contract. The function of the church is primarily to bless, to give grace, to sacramentalize the union. And in the opinion of this minority, this special function of the church would be best set forth in the minds of the people by requiring the two ceremonies."

Comment Is Anticipated.

Anticipating that considerable comment will be made on the proposal that while under certain circumstances remarriage by Episcopal clergymen of divorced persons who obtained decrees for any cause will be permitted, the official statement explained:

"It is thought incongruous to remarry by the regular service, which contemplates the union of one man with one woman for life, persons who have already made a wreck of their former marriage. No matter where the blame lies, the fact remains that the vows of the first marriage to remain together until death do them part, have been broken. The existence of a real cause for breaking these vows is granted, but the case which the church is dealing with in its marriage service is hardly existent where a party to a proposed marriage has already been married to another and been divorced.

"It is therefore provided that the regular church service shall not be used in remarriage nor shall the clergy act as ministers of the church in celebrating such a marriage. The section does not forbid the clergy to act as civil magistrates if it is so provided in the law of their State, but they must perform the marriage in some other way than that provided by the church. No minister need marry a divorced person under this section. He may refuse to have any part in the remarriage, or he may bless a marriage made by a civil magistrate, but if he has the power of a civil magistrate he may, if he will, exercise that magistracy."

There is every possibility that the entire proposed canon will be given considerable attention at the annual convention of the Diocese of Washington, which will convene in the Church of the Epiphany in this city in May.

Pay Dirt Is Flying On the Two Major Construction Projects In the Metropolitan Area

DIRT is merrily flying just across the Potomac on the two hundred foot Lee Memorial Boulevard—majestic Southern Gateway to the Nation's Capital—sixty feet wider than Pennsylvania Avenue and direct entrance to Strathmeade, which it will link with Washington via the stately Lincoln Memorial Bridge.

And as this tremendous project is being rushed to completion—the first of Strathmeade's street building programs (under contract for $850,000) is advancing day by day with rapid strides. This means that winding, tree-sheltered avenues and lateral streets leading direct to the site of Strathmeade's $125,000 Community Club House will be in complete readiness by the time Strathmeade's first nine-hole golf layout is thrown open for play during the coming summer. Other huge utility contracts, including streets, water mains, sewers, etc., will be under way shortly—all part of the basic Strathmeade Plan and without extra assessment to the property owner.

Here again is new and tangible evidence that Strathmeade progresses step by step in accordance with the Perfected Strathmeade Plan, which has nothing to do with peradventure or experiment. To the man of vision—the man gifted with the spirit of the pioneer, Strathmeade's Syndicate Interest Shares now assume a sound new investment importance for profit and security.

For, if ever opportunity knocked convincingly at your door, that time is today, when you can choose a homesite in Strathmeade with the early selector's privilege of buying at a saving or invest in anticipation of golden profits that are as inevitable as the future of Washington itself.

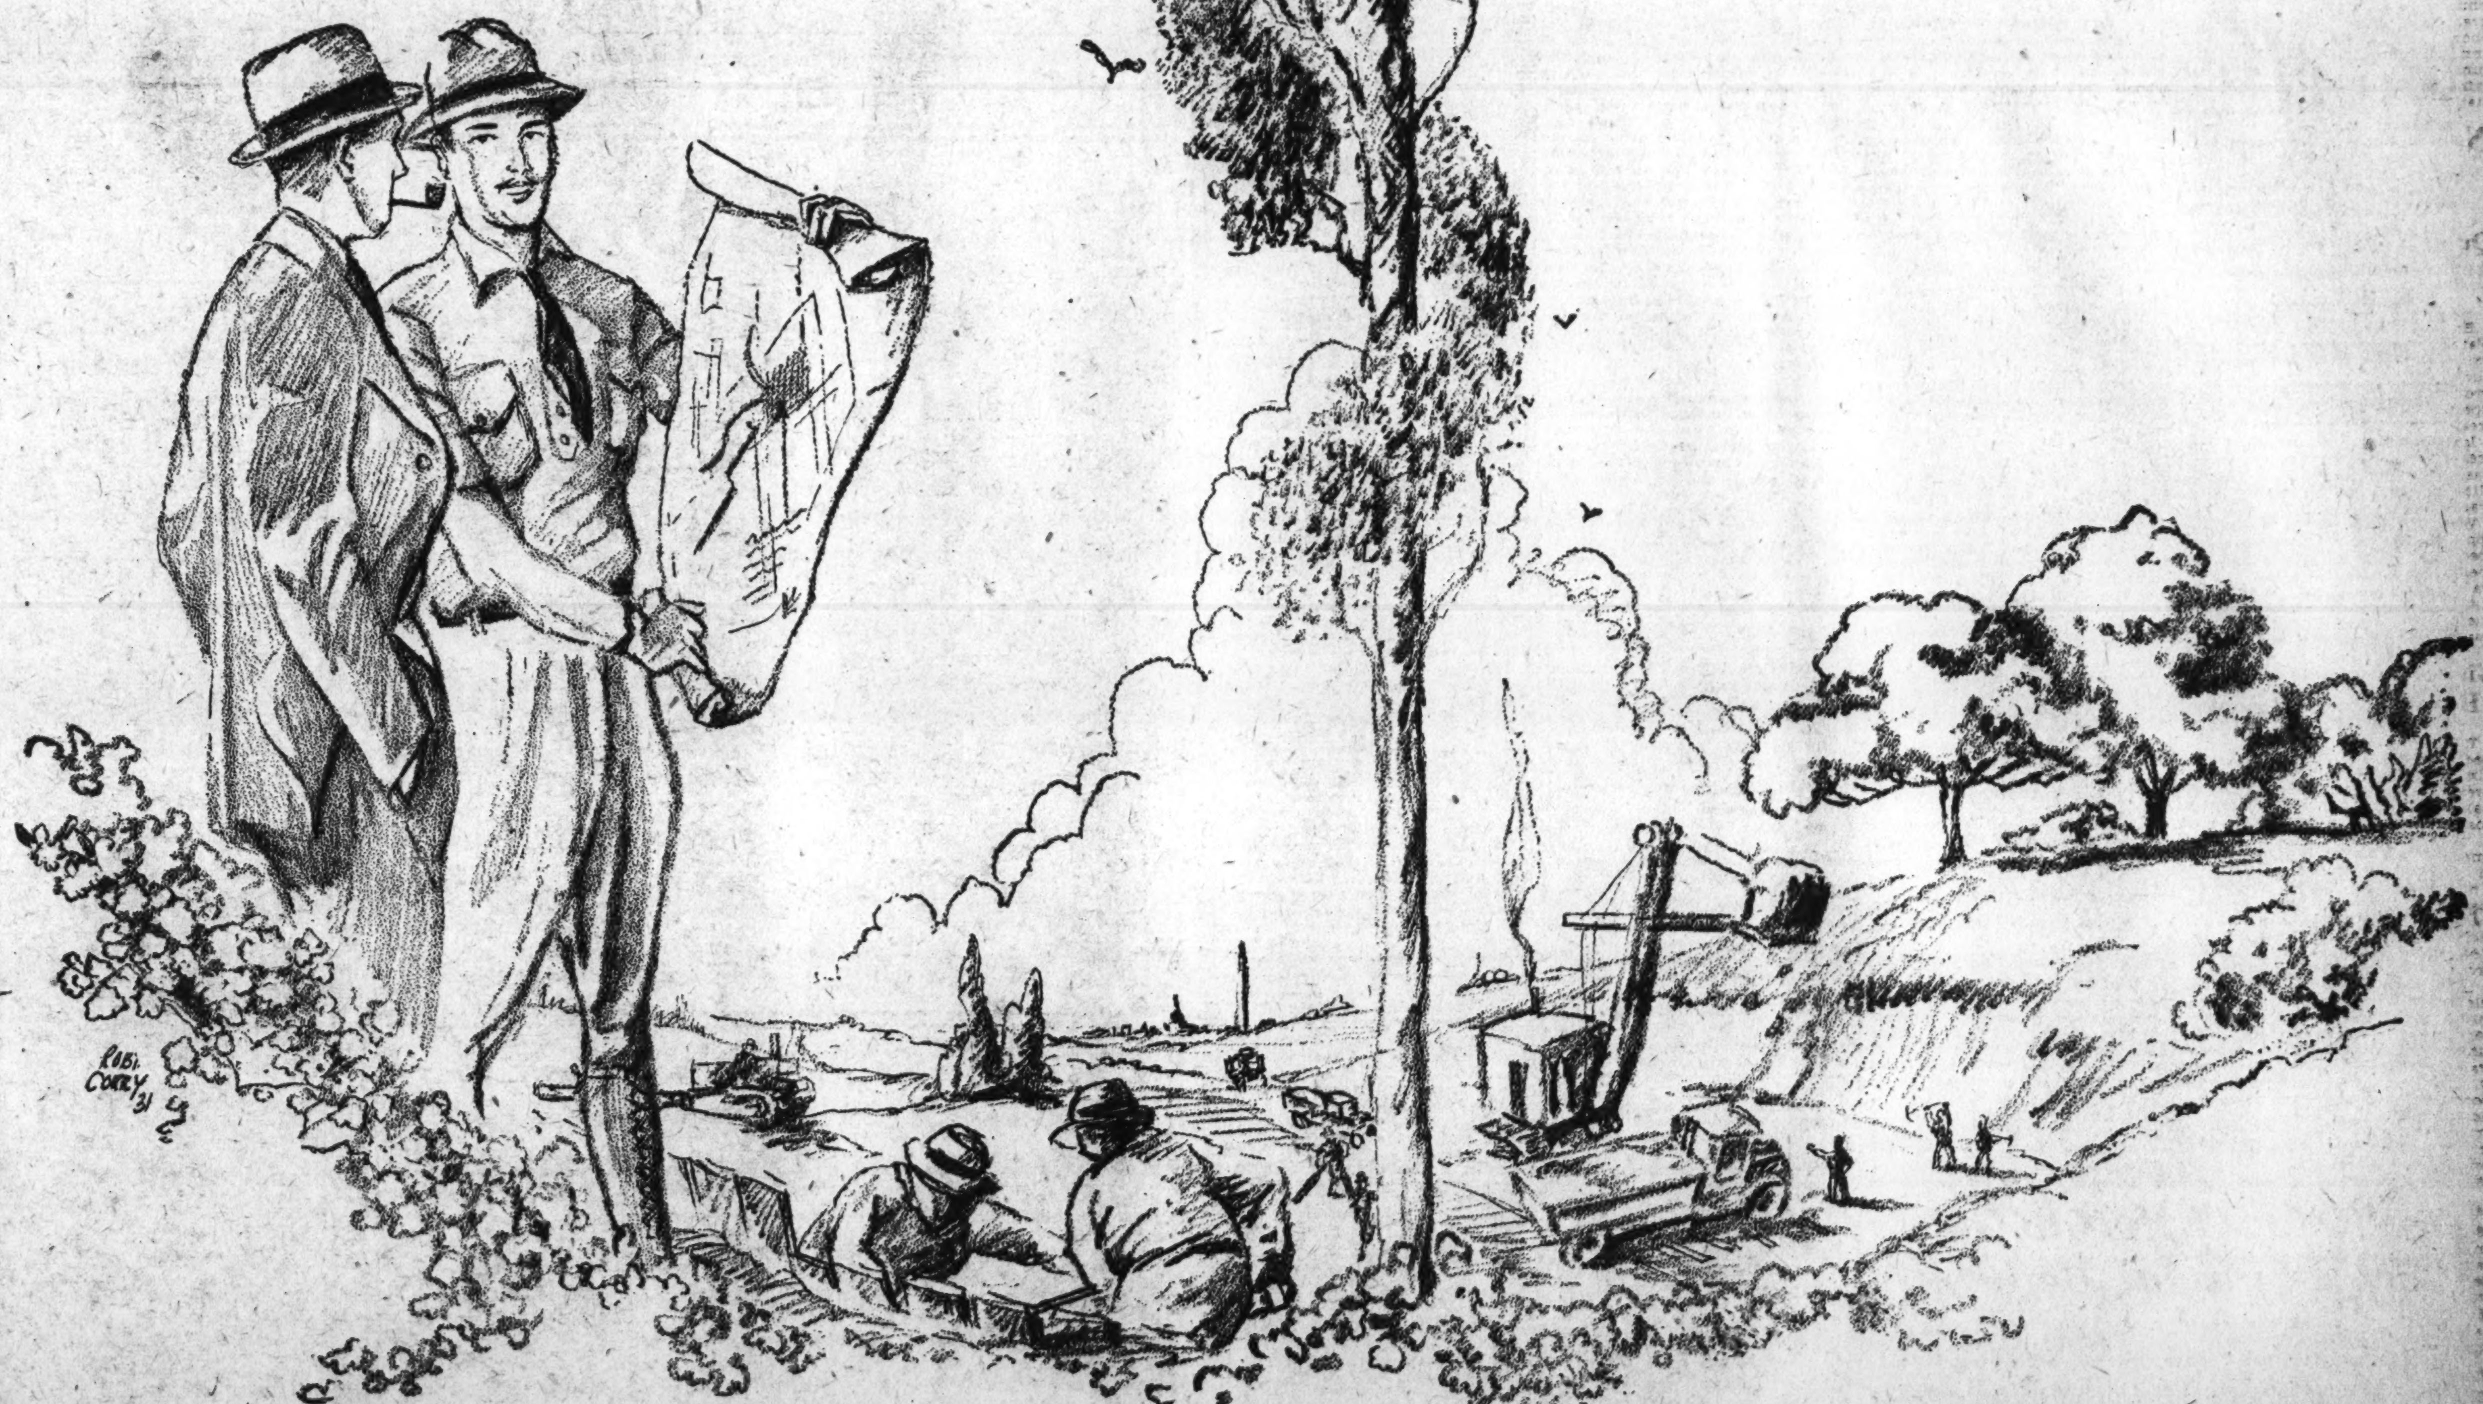
But, why not see the Lee Memorial Boulevard and Strathmeade in beautiful Fairfax County, Virginia, with your own eyes. Be our guest, as many other interested men and women of Washington are doing. The Strathmeade corporation will gladly furnish transportation without cost or obligation. All that's necessary is to phone, write or call at the Strathmeade General Offices, 611 14th Street N. W., where convenient arrangements will be made for you and your friends.



How to Reach Strathmeade

Strathmeade is only nine miles away from the United States Treasury, in Fairfax County, Virginia. Drive over Key Bridge and Lee-Jackson Highway, through Falls Church, watching for Strathmeade sign on your left. Be sure and visit Strathmeade this Sunday.

MAN'S WIFE, YOUTH JAILED IN SHOOTING

Woman, 37, Reputedly Admits Plotting With Friend to Rob Her Mate.

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—Jimmy DePew, 22 years old, who drifted down to Broadway after serving a prison term for burglary in Westchester County, and Mrs. Amy Conlin, 37, were held without bail today on charges of shooting and robbing her husband.

John T. Conlin, 41, victim of the attack, was in St. John's Hospital, likely to die at any moment, according to the information given Magistrate Peter M. Daly, before whom the two were arraigned.

Detectives awaited further word from the sick room with the view of moving the case to Homicide Court if Conlin succumbed.

DePew admitted he robbed the husband in order to get money to finance a Reno divorce for Mrs. Conlin.

Detectives reported that she, too, acknowledged plotting with the young man with that end in view, but she declared it had been her understanding that DePew would use a toy pistol.

DePew, his poise unbroken by repeated questioning and a courtroom appearance, maintained the shooting was an accident. Conlin struggled with him during the holdup, he said, and the gun was accidentally discharged.

When Conlin was robbed of $63 and an Elk's ring Monday morning, police thought they had a plain holdup case to solve. Their investigation turned up stories that Mrs. Conlin had been going about with a man who looked young enough to be her son. In her home they found love letters and a telephone number that sent them to DePew's hotel. There they discovered letters she had written—letters in which she called him "sonny boy" and other endearing names, detectives said.

The woman said, according to police, that they had discussed the holdup plan by telephone Sunday night. She became alarmed, she said, and asked DePew not to go on with the plan, but he refused.

Detectives say DePew shot Conlin in the spine when Conlin refused to surrender all his valuables. In addition to the $63, he carried $200 in cash.

Receiver Named For Bridge Firm

Portsmouth Man Appointed to Conduct Affairs of Corporation.

Norfolk, Va., April 25 (A.P.).—The Norfolk-Portsmouth Bridge Corporation, which operates a toll bridge between Portsmouth and South Norfolk over the southern branch of the Elizabeth River, today was placed in the hands of a receiver, appointed by Federal Judge Luther B. Way on the petition of the creditors of the corporation and the corporation itself. Charles R Welton, of Portsmouth, was named receiver.

Judge Way's action came in an equity suit filed against the bridge company by Ernest E. Howard, Enoch R. Needles and Henry C. Tammen, copartners, trading under the firm name and style of Ash-Howard-Needles & Tammen.

Announcement was made that the bridge would continue open and ready for traffic.

HILLIG TO ATTEMPT FLIGHT TO DENMARK

They have chosen May 17, three days earlier in the month than the date of Lindbergh's Paris flight, as the tentative date of taking off for Denmark. Permission already has been received from the Danish government for the fliers to land in that country, when, as, and if they succeed in spanning the ocean.

In Washington, Hillig and Hoiriis have arranged for conferences with Constantin Brun, Minister of Denmark; Col. Clarence Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, and Gilbert G. Budwig, director of air regulation. These officials will be interviewed tomorrow, and aid of Army and Navy fliers in mapping out a course also will be sought.

Hillig and his pilot will remain in Washington for several days, according to their present plans, and while here will be guests of George H. Lynch, of 2928 Forty-fourth place northwest.

Hillig is a native of Germany, but a naturalized American. He is 55 years of age. He received a prominent place on the front pages of newspapers in 1929, when he had a $125,000 attachment placed on the Graf Zeppelin when it reached Lakehurst, N. J., at the end of its world flight.

The photographer claimed he had booked passage for the world flight with the Hamburg-American Line, which was receiving bookings for the flight, but when he went to board the craft the line refused him passage at the last moment, claiming the ticket was sold through a "misunderstanding."

Holgar Hoiriis, who will pilot the big Bellanca plane, is an aviator of considerable experience.

HAD the above hand been played at Auction Bridge, South would have bid one Spade, and after West's pass North would have bid one No Trump. As South had six Spades and a singleton, he doubtless would have called two Spades on the second round, but North, with ample protection in the other three suits, would have ended the auction with two No Trumps.

However, the hand was played at Contract in one of our Eastern clubs by four prominent players, each of whom had the reputation of being perfectly satisfied with his own ability. Both sides were vulnerable, and North and South still are whenever the subject of this particular deal is mentioned.

The bidding was quite conventional. South, half a trick short of an original two-bid, called one Spade. North, with a worthless doubleton in Spades, strength in the other three suits, and a No Trump count of 19, had ample justification for bidding three No Trumps, and that bid ended the contracting. One Spade, three Diamonds, three Spades and three No Trumps would also have been sound bidding for South and North.

East led the Trey of Clubs, and Declarer, winning with the singleton Ace in dummy, paused to size up his combined hands. He could count as sure two Club tricks, one Diamond, three Hearts and one Spade. Finesses in both Diamonds and Spades were indicated and the establishment of either suit seemed probable. Losing the Diamond finesse would put East in the lead and might produce another Club lead from that hand, which would suit the Declarer. Therefore a Diamond was led to trick 2 and the Queen finesse taken.

The fall of East's Jack was somewhat embarrassing. Possibly it was a false card and the Diamonds could be established on the third round; but if not and the Diamonds should be continued, West would win the third round, still have the suit stopped and be able to return his partner's Clubs through North's King-Jack. Consequently Declarer determined to shift and invsetigate the Spade situation.

To trick 3 North led the Trey, East played the Six and South the Nine. West meanwhile had been making excellent use of his opportunity to think over his situation while Declarer paused to plan his campaign. He appreciated, in view of North's No Trump take-out and the length of South's Spades, that North probably had a holding of less than three Spades; and North's method of handling the suit indicated that he had just one more Spade. Consequently if West won this trick with the Jack, the Declarer might not dare to finesse Spades again. What Declarer would have done if West had played the Jack will never be known; but West took the first Spade trick with the King, hoping that a second finesse would follow and enable him to save game by winning the second Spade trick, and leading toward East's Clubs. This play, by exhausting North's Spades, would leave South's long Spades stranded.

To trick 4 West led a Club which North won with the King, Declarer rashly counting some unhatchecd Spade chickens as well as the two Clubs and one Diamond (already won) and the additional Diamond and three Hearts which were obvious. With pleasant anticipation of corralling five Spade tricks. Declarer led North's remaining Spade, finessed South's Ten, and was thunderstruck when West won with the Jack and led a third Club. East ran his three good Clubs and saved game—but that was not all; North discarded two Diamonds on East's last two Clubs, but still had a losing Diamond, no Spade and no way to put South in the lead. East led a Heart and North was obliged to lose one more trick to West's Diamond King, holding Declarer to seven tricks—two short of his three contract, North and South being vulnerable, the set cost them 300 points.

The North and South players are still arguing the question whether the Declarer should have been satisfied with game after West's play of the Spade King had put him in position to take nine tricks provided he did not risk a second Spade finesse. At Auction—a game of comparatively low values—the probability of the slam bonus would have made the second Spade finesse very tempting, but at Contract, with no slam bid, the certainty of a game should have outweighed the value of even probable extra tricks.

Another point which furnishes the late partners material for further argument is whether North should have gone on with the Diamonds after winning the finesse in that suit. If East's Jack had been a false card, the adverse Diamonds would have been divided 3-2, and game could have been cinched by continuing; but with East's Diamond a singleton (as it really was), continuing the suit would make up two Diamond tricks for West, and, supposing East to have the Queen of Clubs, assure three Club tricks to the enemy.

NOTED ELWELL CLUB IN BRIDGE CONTEST

Organization Started When Whist Was Played as Straight Game.

Participating in the first annual bridge tournament of Washington players will be members of the famous Elwell Club, probably the oldest organization of bridge players in Washington.

This does not mean that there were not whist clubs in Washington that played the original form of the game before it became modernized, but since the play became known as bridge, it is believed that no organization antedates the Elwell Club. It is composed of players in the exclusive Washington Club whose personnel comprises members of some of the most representative residents of the National Capital, and which has always maintained an exalted position in Washington society.

The Washington Club is said to be the oldest chartered women's club in the country, having been formed more than 30 years ago. It was shortly after this time that the game of bridge was introduced from England. It took its name from the fact that when a dealer found it inadvisable to name a trump from his own hand he "bridged" it across the table to his partner, who then had that privilege. Through the various stages of development of the game into auction and contract, the name of bridge has been retained as the general form of characterizing the popular pastime.

Supreme Authority on Game.

"Elwell on Bridge" was then considered the supreme authority on the rules of the game and the correct method of playing it. Its author met an untimely fate at the hands of an assassin who was never apprehended. It was from him that the Elwell Club of the ladies of the Washington Club derived its name, and although there has been great advancement and improvement in the game, the original name has been retained, although its members now play contract.

Mrs. Joseph R. Hawley, the wife of the late United States senator from Connecticut, long prominent in congressional and social circles in Washington, was one of the active members of the Elwell Club, and among her many other attainments was regarded as an excellent bridge player. With other members of the club she participated in some of the tournaments of the Knickerbocker Whist Club, of New York, and in other events of similar character.

Mrs. Frank W. Hackett, wife of the late Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who still maintains residence in Washington which was the scene of much of her husband's public activities, will be one of the members of the Elwell Club to take a hand in the forthcoming tournament.

Loves Game for Sociability.

"I do not consider myself an expert player," said Mrs. Hackett, "but I do love the game and its sociability. Even if I do not win a trophy I know I shall have a most enjoyable time, for so many excellent people are going to take part in it. I am looking forward to a very pleasant event."

Entries for the tournament will close on Friday, so that only four more days remain in which to file applications. If you have not attended to this matter do so at once by filling out the blank printed daily in The Post and sending it to the bridge editor.

The sessions will be held Thursday afternoon and evening, Friday afternoon and evening and Saturday afternoon and evening, May 14, 15 and 16, at the Shoreham Hotel.

Capital Student Creates College

Harry W. Proctor Leads in Organizing School of Foreign Service.

The school of international relations at the University of Southern California has become a college through the efforts of a Washington boy, a graduate of Central High School.

When Harry W. Proctor, of 1826 G street northwest, went to the school last fall he found a large number of students who were candidates for the degree of bachelor of foreign service, but they had no organized student body or officers or vote in university affairs. The Washington student went to work, interviewing the dean and President Von Kleinsmid, and received permission to petition the legislative council, governing the student body of 12,000 for admission.

These efforts met with favorable results and the council voted recognition. Mr. Proctor was named temporary chairman of his group and later elected president when a constitution was adopted and approved. Mr. Proctor attended the foreign relations school at Georgetown University for a year before going to the University of Southern California, where he expects to receive his degree in 1932.

Robbery of Store Fails.

Efforts to rob the mechanical piano of the G Street Lunch Room failed early yesterday morning. Jenkins Hammond, proprietor, reported that the rear window of the place at 8 G street northwest was forced, and an attempt was made to pry open the coin box.

Alaska Girl on Flight Sees First Train at 22

Anchorage, Alaska, April 25 (A.P.). In her 22 years Annie Parent had seen airplanes but never a railroad train or an ocean-going steamer until she came here from interior Alaska for a tonsil operation.

A plane stopped 100 feet from the door of her home at Crooked Creek, a village on a tributary of the Kuskokwim River, to bring her here. Her father, Dennis Parent, operates a trading post and breeds sled dogs at Crooked Creek.

Kenmore Association Joins Chamber.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 25 (Special).—The Kenmore Association, which has purchased and is restoring Kenmore, the colonial home of Col. Fielding Lewis and his wife, Betty Washington, sister of George Washington, has secured a membership in the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce, marking the first time locally that an organization interested in the preservation of a historic shrine has entered a civic body.

Death Stops Effort to Cure Girl's Unusual Deformity

Child Succumbs Under Experiment Attempted to Relieve Brain Pressure That Threatened to Cause Feeblemindedness and Blindness.

Oakland, Calif., April 25 (A.P.).—Death brought a tragic denouement here today to what physicians hoped would prove one of the greatest experiments in medical history when a 4-year-old girl failed to survive an operation to relieve brain pressure resulting from oxycephaly or "tower skull."

With scores of eminent specialists as spectators, Dr. Warren B. Allen, of the Highland Hospital, Oakland, aided by Dr. Charles Swift, Seattle, demonstrated to delegates to the Western section of the American College of Surgeons their method of remedying the unusual skull deformity. The operation was intended to prevent blindness, delinquency and feeble-mindedness.

With small drill-like instruments the surgeons bored into the child's skull and chiseled a groove longitudinally along the central, upper ridge to provide room for the brain to grow.

Such operations, it was declared, will prevent the brain from pushing the eyeballs forward and thus causing blindness and will give the convolutions of the brain opportunity to assume their proper complexity. Only two such operations had been previously performed, the physicians said, adding that every known exaggerated case of oxycephaly was accompanied by feeble-mindedness, delinquency and blindness. Physicians atributed the death to a recent head injury more than to the operation.

EVENTS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

ALEXANDRIA GARDEN CLUB TO BACK TRIPS

Pilgrimages to Show Places Planned May 2 to Aid Gadsby's Fund.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 323.

Mrs. Frank M. Dillard, president of the Alexandria Garden Club, has announced that a pilgrimage to gardens in this vicinity will be sponsored by that club on Saturday next, for the benefit of the Gadsby's Tavern courtyard restoration fund, the principal work of the Garden Club this year.

The gardens open to the public on that day will be those at Gunston Hall, the home of Lewis P. Hertle; Rippon Lodge; Wellington, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson; Ordleigh, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ord, and Windsor, the home of former Representative Campbell, located near The Little Tea House.

These gardens are all beautiful show places and it is expected a number of flower and shrubs enthusiasts will avail themselves of the opportunity to visit them, and they will be open to the public only the one day.

Mrs. Dillard and the other officers of the Alexandria Garden Club will be in charge of the tours and will announce complete plans later in the week.

The Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, D. D., a former pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, this city, and now an evangelist for the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, will occupy the pulpit of the Second Presbyterian Church this morning.

The Virginia Conference of Building and Loan Associations will be held on May 14 and 15 next, in the George Mason Hotel, with Alfred Thomson, of this city, as conference chairman. There are more than 90 building and loan associations in the State and all are expected to have representation.

The hearings in the case of the Alexandria Water Co. before the State Corporation Commission in Richmond, will be resumed on Thursday next, when the city's side of the case is to be presented. The water company practically completed its case prior to the adjournment on March 27 last.

Mrs. Cora Posey Scott, wife of George W. Scott, died on Friday night at her home 1119 King street, and the funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home, with burial in Betgel Cemetery. She is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mrs. Virginia Romdahl, of Horten, Norway; and Miss Nellie Scott, of this city; and three sons, George W. Scott, jr., Newman Scott and Vincent Scott, of this city.

Edmund H. Allen, past grand master of Odd Fellows of Virginia, delivered the address before the 112th anniversary meeting of Odd Fellows held on Friday night by Potomac and Sarepta Lodges. The meeting was presided over by W. Clifton Cunningham, who acted as master of ceremonies.

Marley Encampment No. 6, Odd Fellows, will hold an important meeting in their hall in North Columbus street, at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening.

Slayer Suspect Divorced by Wife

Henry E. Kelm Is Under Guard in Hospital After Woman's Death.

A divorce was granted Mrs. Estelle M. Kelm in Baltimore yesterday from Henry E. Kelm, a salesman, who told police that he lived in Washington after he was arrested in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Edith Stevns Wayson in the Maryland city early this month.

Kelm, who is said to have taken poison after the shooting, is under a police guard at Sa. Joseph's Hospital in Baltimore. Mrs. Wayson was shot on April 13 and died the following day, according to Baltimore police. No charge has been placed against Kelm.

The divorce was granted Mrs. Kelm on the grounds of desertion. The decree, signed by Chief Judge Samuel K. Dennis, awarded Mrs. Kelm absolute divorce and gave her the right to use her maiden name, Croucher. Mrs. Kelm lives in Baltimore. Efforts to trace Kelm's Washington address were not successful last night.

Virginia Parsonage Will Be Exhibited

Moorman's River House to Be Viewed as Better Homes Display.

Moorman's River, Va., April 25.—The Methodist parsonage here will be formally opened to the public at 3 o'clock tomorrow as a Better Homes demonstration. The house will be open during the entire week and the public is invited to visit it.

With the help of the local merchants in Charlottesville and several home demonstration community groups and through the cooperation of the people of Mount Moriah, Wesley, Brown Cove and Ivy Creek Churches this parsonage has been completely rejuvenated and stands as proof of what country people can do when they work together.

Under the direction of Mrs. Bessie Dunn Miller, county chairman of Better Homes in America, and Dr. L. G. Roberts, local chairman of Better Homes, an outstanding piece of work has been done. An old house which has eight rooms and a bath has been made into an attractive, livable home with all the modern conveniences.

MRS. M. G. RICHARDSON DIES

Funeral to Be Tomorrow in Upperville, Va.

Mrs. Sophie Carter Richardson, wife of Mahlon G. Richardson, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital after a short illness. She was 58 years old. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Trinity Church at Upperville, Va.

Besides Mr. Richardson, five sisters survive. They are Mrs. H. Gordon Moore, of Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. A. C. Marshall and Mrs. Mackenzie Tadd, of Middleburg, Va.; Mrs. Paul Whitin, Northbridge, Mass., and Mrs. T. B. Wood, of Baltimore.

Alexandria

A beautiful home wedding took place at 4 o'clock yesterday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Schneider, 412 North View Terrace, Rosemont, when their daughter, Miss Roberta Howard Schneider, became the wife of Mr. E. Willey Stearns, the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Herndon Stearns, of Rixeyville, Va.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Thomas K. Nelson, of the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia. The house was beautifully decorated with a profusion of spring flowers, and an improvised altar was arranged in the drawing room before a bank of tall palms. The bride entered the room with her father, who gave her in marriage, and was preceded by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Foster Schneider, as maid of honor, and her niece, Hilda Fielding Lewis, as flower girl. The best man was Mr. Charles Strahorn, of Annapolis, Md.

The bride wore an afternoon costume of beige lace, with hat and shoes to match and carried a shower of Talisman roses, while the maid of honor was gowned in a pastel shade of blue lace, with hat to match and carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers. The dainty little flower girl wore a yellow frock and her basket contained blue flowers.

The wedding and reception that followed were attended by only the two families and a few intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Stearns left for a wedding trip and later will make their home in the Brawner Apartments, 906 Prince street.

SEWER BONDS URGED IN PRINCE GEORGES

Plea to Sell $500,000 Issue to Be Heard on May 26 in Baltimore.

A petition asking permission to issue $500,000 worth of bonds to finance projected and partially completed construction of sewer and water lines in Prince Georges County has been filed with the Public Service Commission by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. A hearing will be held in Baltimore on May 26.

The funds received will be partially utilized to extend the water system in the vicinity of Capitol Heights, Greater Capitol Heights, Bradbury Heights, District Heights and Boulevard Heights. Surveys for this extension, being made under a bill passed by the recent Legislature, have already been completed and laying of mains is going ahead. Part of this project is the erection of a pumping station and standpipe near Capitol Heights. This work is expected to be completed by June 1.

Much of the proposed extension of the Northwest branch trunk sewer has been completed and it is proposed to use part of the funds from the bonds to push this conduit along the branch to a point beyond the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad between Hyattsville and Brentwood. The stretch between Riggs road and Queens Chapel road has been finished and construction of the sewer as far as Grape street is now under way.

Plans call for the sewer utlimately to be pushed to a point south of Bladensburg, and a sewage disposal plant to be erected.

Minor extensions of water and sewage lines throughout the metropolitan area also are planned for the summer.

Part of the funds will also be used in Montgomery County for construction of a connecting water line between Chevy Chase and North Woodside, and for sewer extensions in Woodside Park, Wynnewood Park and Seven Oaks. The water line has been nearly finished.

The rumored opposition to John H. Beall for mayor of Mount Rainier became a certainty yesterday, when the name of Fred Negus appeared on the list of those nominated for election in the municipal polling on May 4. Mr. Beall, the incumbent, will run for reelection against Mr. Negus, a former mayor.

Norman A. Pruitt, councilman from the First Ward, will also have competition in his race for reelection, the name of John Klein appearing as candidate from this ward. In the Fourth Ward, Rexford Worley, incumbent, will face Paul Hysan for councilman. Voters will not only have to make their choice among these six but also will have to register their preference for or against the bill to pay salaries to town officers.

The Greater Bladensburg District Citizens Association has joined in approving the measure authorizing the spending of $800,000 for extension of the park system in the county. The association at a recent meeting went on record as favoring the action as soon as possible.

The executive committee ordered Dr. Robert McCullough to send a letter to the county commissioners urging them to issue the bonds as soon as possible. Authority was granted by the recent Legislature for the issuance of the bonds on approval by the commissioners.

The association also asked the county commissioners to take up with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad the blocking of the Defense highway in Bladesburg by long freight trains which stop on the track. On one occasion, it is said, the Bladensburg Fire Department was delayed in answering a call. They also asked the commissioners to allow them a hearing before renting the proposed county building in Hyattsville.

Orlando, Fla., Man Heads Secretaries

Southern Commercial Group Select Macon for Next Meeting.

Roanoke, Va., April 25 (A.P.).—Karl Lehmann, of Orlando, Fla., today was elected president of the Southern Commercial Secretaries Association as that organization brought its two-day annual convention to a close. Macon, Ga., was selected for next year's meeting.

Other officers named were Wyatt H. Foster, Rome, Ga., and H. S. Howard, Meridian, Miss., vice presidents, and D. Hodson Lewis, Little Rock, Ark., secretary-treasurer.

State directors selected were: Alabama, L. E. Foster, Birmingham; Arkansas, E. J. Novak, Fort Smith; Florida, Fred J. Lee, Clearwater; Georgia, Miss Mattie Hardy, Albany; Louisiana, George G. Merkle, Crowley; Maryland, George J. Clautice, Baltimore; Mississippi, A. V. Ragusin, Biloxi; North Carolina, Grady Gaston, Gastonia; Oklahoma, Stanley C. Draper, Oklahoma City; South Carolina, Miss Maria Fewell, Rock Hill; Tennessee, J. N. Bagwell, jr., Murfreesboro; Texas, Jack H. Holt, Fort Worth, and Virginia, Vernon E. Kemp, Charlottesville.

Telephones and Coins Are Taken by Robbers

The telephone coin box collectors were to have gone to the Gulf and Standard filling stations south of the Highway Bridge yesterday to collect the nickels. They found no nickels. They didn't even find the telephones.

One or more thieves kept the line busy some time between 1 a. m. and 7 a. m. yesterday, when both filling stations were broken into and the pay telephones, including coin boxes, ripped from the walls. In each case, the intruders first attempted to gain entry by jimmying windows and, failing this, broke the glass in the door and threw the latch by putting a hand through.

No estimate of the amount obtained was given.

Martin Dodge Rites Will Be Tomorrow

"Father of Good Roads Movement" Expires at Age of 79.

Funeral services for Martin Dodge, 79, "father of the good roads movement," will be held tomorrow at noon at the family home, Dodge Park, in Prince Georges County, Md., and at the All Souls Unitarian Church at 3 o'clock. Interment will follow in the family plot at Fort Lincoln, Md.

The pallbearers will include Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida; Brig. Gen. H. C. Newcomer, former Gov. Heber M. Wells, of Utah; Seneca Canfield, O. C. Strawn, Wade H. Ellis, M. O. Eldridge, Armstrong Perry, Kepler Hoyt, William Canfield Lee, Dr. J. M. Aldrick and Richard Richards.

Mr. Dodge was born in Ohio and served in many positions of importance in that State, including membership in both the House and Senate of the State, head of the Ohio road commission, and he was later made director of the Bureau of Public Roads in the Department of Agriculture, being appointed by President McKinley.

He is survived by a son, Homer Joseph Dodge, local writer, and three daughters, Mrs. Jacob Gayer, and Esther and Daphne Dodge, all of Washington.

AUTOMATIC

costs less to operate

The only extravagance connected with automatic Oil Heat is the notion that it is expensive. Economical operation is one of the main reasons why the use of Oil Heat in homes and large buildings has increased at such an astounding rate. It is no longer a secret that Oil gives greater heat for each dollar spent. When you consider automatic heat from the standpoint of economy, Oil Heat is your logical choice. There is no substitute today which has ALL the natural advantages of Oil. There is no reason why you and your family should not be enjoying the clean, healthful, benevolent warmth of a modern automatic oil burner.

POST-ZAIN CONTEST OFFERS EASY MONEY

$100 Weekly Prize May Be Won in Few Minutes; Other Awards.

Would you work for $100 an hour? Of course, you would and if the work were easy and interesting you'd fairly clamor for the job, wouldn't you?

All right. Here's your opportunity. Spend one hour today writing ads for the big educational campaign at The Washington Post. Write ads for the 35 concerns which sponsor The Post-Zain $10,000 ad writing test conducted for amateurs and you are likely to share in the 565 merchandise awards for the combined third and fourth week of the ad writing period.

Perhaps you'll be lucky enough to win that first prize of $100 cash and if you are a daily and Sunday subscriber to The Washington Post you will receive an additional $10 in cash, making the first prize $110 instead of $100 for the first prize winners who are regular subscribers to The Post.

If you don't win first prize, there is that $165 ABC washer which you'll agree is worth writing ads for. If your ads do not win that, do not despair. Three strands of Triple X Richelieu pearls will be given as prizes, besides all those special prizes which you will find in a box on this page.

More Ads, Better Chances.

Get all the ads in that you can. The more ads you write the greater your chances to win one of these worth-while prizes. You'll need to write at least one ad for each of the 35 firms sponsoring the ad test if you want to compete for the grand prize of $1,000 that is given for the best ad of all ads submitted during the seven weeks of this contest. Attention is called to that $50 cash which The Washington Post is giving the winner of the $1,000 grand prize if he or she is a regular subscriber to The Post.

Suppose you work for an hour—you should be able to turn out half a dozen ads. Just make up your mind that your nimble wits are going to do something for you. You'll be surprised what they can do if you will prod them a bit. Writing the first ad may seem difficult. The second ad you write will be easier, and after that you'll want to keep on until you've written at least one ad for each of the participating concerns.

Here are a few timely hints on a timely service. Zain ad-writers are asked to incorporate some of these ideas in their contributions about the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. Complete financial service is given customers, ranging from the renting of a safe-deposit box to the executorship of an estate; from the opening of a small to a major industrial enterprise, from the placing of a deal to purchase or sale in escrow to the handling of collections amounting to millions.

Murco Paints of Quality.

Color is the keynote to personality. The E. J. Murphy Paint Co. ask you write about their product and the part it plays in its relationship to personality homes. Ask any hardware man or paint dealer in your district, not only as to choice in color, but appplication. They'll tell you about the fine quality of paints and varnishes. The E. J. Murphy Paint Co., distributors of this fine, high quality paint, like other participating concerns, will gladly furnish information to contestants.

The Washington Building, opposite the United States Treasury, is ideally situated in the heart of Washington's business and financial district, at the juncture of three principal thoroughfares, one of the busiest corners in the National Capital. It is exceptionally well planned, with an arrangement of floor space and windows on three streets providing a greater abundance of light and ventilation than any other office building in Washington. An opportunity to plan your own office space is offered by the management. Every feature for convenience and comfort will be found in this wonderful building.

Long Ads Not Necessary.

In writing ads for the Barber & Ross, Inc., feature their A. B. C. washers and Conlon ironers. It is not necessary to write long ads. Two or three paragraphs, or even less, are enough. Make them tell why the washer and the ironer are wonderful machines. Tell how the washer does away with tedious work, does not tear off buttons, stretch garments or tear them. If you write about the ironer tell how it takes very little room in the closet, kitchen or bedroom. It irons everything. Ruffles iron just as easy as flatwork.

Good printing, the kind done by the Gibson Bros., can be neatly exploited in a Zain ad. Write about Gibson Bros. and the high quality of their work. Tell how this concern has grown by leaps and bounds. Explain why good printing is an important aid to business success and explain that the Gibson Bros. are always ready to advise the person with printing problems.

Write an ad on Wilkins Coffee. When you think of coffee don't you think of early morning hours? Think what a delicious cup of Wilkins Just Wonderful coffee will do to your disposition. You can start the day right if you enjoy the delicate aroma, the delicious flavor and the appetizing qualities of Wilkins Coffee.

Start Ad Writing Today.

Start today to write your ads. Be sure you have the facts then go ahead. Your idea is likely to be new and original. You may express your ad in the form of a poem of why you prefer a certain brand, or a slogan that is original and apt or a letter of testimonial. Remember if you can write a letter you can write an ad.

What you are thinking is important. Let The Post-Zain ad editor in on the secret and share in the $10,000 cash and merchandise awards to be paid in The Post-Zain Ad Writing Contest.

Mail your ads to The Post-Zain Ad Contest Editor of The Washington Post.

WORKMEN WRITE ZAIN ADS AT LUNCH

Workmen engaged on the new building operation of Waverly Taylor, Inc., at 4411 to 4441 Volta place in Foxall, caught by the cameraman utilizing part of their lunch hour in writing ads for The Post-Zain Ad-Writing Contest. They are being instructed by the superintendent of construction, Earle Dodson, on the rules of the contest, and are writing about the superior construction features of the firm's newest group of double-front English homes they are building.

The pictures shows the heavy, hand-adzed porch timbers of solid cypress, the colorful and substantial stone masonry walls and walls of deep-hued brick, with rugged, variegated purple and green Vermont slate roofs above.

Indoors, some of these men are applying the plaster finish, some are installing the ultra-modern plumbing fixtures and heating plants, while others are providing the many electrical conveniences, insulated roofs, cedar-lined closets and other conveniences which have made these homes an outstanding success.

This should give you a splendid idea for that grand award of $1,000 for the best ad submitted during the seven weeks of the ad test. And why ask us how to spend that $1,000. You should know that already.

BOARD OF TRADE SET FOR 1931 SHAD BAKE

Colorful Event on May 23 Includes Two Dinners at Sherwood Forest.

Plans are being completed for the 1931 shad bake of the Washington Board of Trade to take place Saturday, May 23, at Sherwood Forest, Md. The Board of Trade members will go to the picnic place in a motorbus parade, escorted by police. A 45-piece brass band from the Twentieth Regiment Marines will accompany the excursionists.

Centering around the feature of the day—a shad dinner—there will be such recreational appurtenances as boxing tournaments, golf, billiards, pool, tennis, baseball, swimming, fishing, boating, bowling, horse shoe pitching, quoits, trap shooting, athletics and hiking over 750 acres. Boxing matches will be fought between members of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

The first dinner will be served at 11:30 o'clock and the second one at 2:05 o'clock.

J. Mitchell Owens is chairman of the committee planning the event. Other members of his committee are: C. Hayward Marshall, first vice chairman; W. E. Reed, second vice chairman; Richard Stimson, secretary, and Raymond Florance, auditor.

Other committee chairmen follow: Herman F. Carl, advisory committee; Harry H. R. Helwig, arrangements; Wallace Robinson, dinner; George Offutt, reception; Thomas Eagan, entertainment; Paul F. Grove, wheel committee; James B. Edmunds, souvenirs; Stephen F. Colladay, tickets; Robert E. Lee, transportation; J. Stanley Long, prize; Dwight K. Terry, property; E. C. Thomas, lunch; A. K. Soldier Ad Prize Winner Reveals Motive in Effort

Sergt. Kuster Hopes His Ad on Bread Will Help Children's Health.

The Ad Contest Editor received the following communication from Sergt. Kuster yesterday. We thought perhaps you would like to read it. His letter follows:

Headquarters, Thirteenth Engineers, Office of the Regimental Commander, Fort Humphreys, Va., April 24, 1931.

The Post-Zain Editor, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.—Dear Sir: After my meteoric ascent Thursday to the upmost heights of ecstasy, I am today trying earnestly to regain my modest equilibrium on earth.

I am most appreciative of the high honor bestowed upon me in your contest; I respect the profound decision of the judges who so nobly christened my brain child in the name of publicity, and I am most grateful to you and your staff for the kindly reception offered me. If my humble ad shall work to increase the health of nearby children, if it means better bread for only one chubby child, I shall be comforted far more than in financial remuneration alone.

A contest of this nature has accomplished its highest mission when the honorably stimulated efforts of the contestant are so inspiring as to spread one hundred fold the desire-germ of better-buying-for-better-living among the reading clientele. This I attempted in my limited way in the winning ad.

Most gratefully,

GEORGE B. C. KUSTER.

Electrical Show Opens Tomorrow

Big Display Will Indicate How Home Drudgery May Be Lifted.

Transition from the home drudgery of the 'nineties to the household leisure of today, will be graphically depicted tomorrow in exhibits at the National Electric Show at Fourteenth and G streets northwest.

The display, designed to show what electrical science has done for the modern housewife, will close May 9. It will feature the largest exhibition of household equipment ever staged here.

Talking pictures, mechanical demonstrations and lectures on home management and table economy will be presented. Of especial interest will be the kitchen exhibit, contrasting every type of antiquated equipment with the latest electrical innovations. Each night, except the last, 26 merchandise orders will be given as prizes.

Panama City, April 25 (A.P.).—The seismograph at Balboa recorded very slight earth tremors from 11:48 to 11:52 o'clock last night.

RULES FOR CONTEST

1—$10,000 in prizes to be distributed over seven weeks of amateur ad writing.

2—$1,000 in cash will be given for the best ad written by an amateur during the entire Post-Zain ad-writing campaign. To compete for this prize it will be necessary for contestants to write at least one ad about each of the 35 firms participating in the ad contest.

3—Grand weekly award of $100 will be given for the best Ad. written during the third and fourth periods of the ad-writing contest.

4—Fifteen merchandise prizes for each of the 35 concerns will be given during the third and fourth weeks of the campaign.

5—Ads for the third and fourth weeks of the Post-Zain ad-writing campaign must be received prior to noon, Wednesday, May 6.

6—Ads submitted in competition for the grand award of $1,000 must be received prior to midnight, May 27.

7—Any one anywhere may compete for the prizes with the exception of newspaper employes and members of the advertising profession.

8—There are no obligations. No coupons to clip, no entrance fees to pay, no subscriptions to buy. One person may submit as many ads as he chooses. The Post-Zain ad-writing contest may be entered at any time. Ads may be written about one or all concerns.

9—Write your ideas on one side only of a sheet of paper at least twice the size of a postcard. Place the name of the concern about which you are writing in the upper left-hand corner of the page. Place your own name and address, also telephone number, on the reverse of the advertisement and the envelope. Your contribution may be a slogan, a poem, a regular advertisement, a letter of testimonial, or an essay.

10—Winning advertisements will be selected by a committee of advertising experts. In the event of a tie like awards will be made to both.

11—All advertisements received become the property of the concerns about which they are written.

Ad-Writing Suggestions.

Prizes are given for ideas, not for grammar, spelling, punctuation, art work or layout.

Your ideas are likely to be new and original; your idea may win one of the prizes.

If you are not familiar with the advertisers about whom you are asked to write ads, study their service and merchandise; visit their shops, ask questions, and then jot down your ideas simply. Be brief and to the point.

If you can write a letter, you can write an ad. Get members of your family and your friends interested. Encourage them to write winning ads. Send in your amateur Ad. to the Post-Zain Ad-Contest Editor, Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

SPAIN WILL REDUCE SEVERAL EMBASSIES

New Republican Government Plans Appointment of but Seven Ambassadors.

Madrid, April 25 (A.P.).—President Alcala Zamora and Foreign Minister Alexander Lerroux were understood to have agreed today that the republican government will appoint only seven ambassadors abroad. The foreign posts heretofore of ambassadorial rank will become legations.

The embassies will be at Washington, London, Paris, Rome, Berlin, Vienna and the Holy See. At Havana and Buenos Aires the incumbents probably will continue in office.

No definite decisions have been reached regarding the ambassadorial appointments, including that to Washington, although a tentative list of appointees was published on Thursday. The post at Washington, it is understood, is a matter of considerable concern, since the government wants a representative there of unquestioned loyalty to the republic.

Although it is less than two weeks old, the government has accomplished extensive reorganization and thus far has avoided serious friction in domestic and foreign affairs. Its policy is to avoid such controversial matters as the relationship between church and state and the disposition of large estates until after the elections next June.

Mexico City, April 25 (A.P.).—Don Salvador de Madariaga, named by the new Spanish republic as Ambassador to the United States, will embark at Vera Cruz late next Thursday for Cuba and Spain, after a lecture trip of several weeks in Mexico.

Crowds Cheer Zamora En Route to Barcelona

Madrid, April 25 (A.P.).—President Alcala Zamora left for Barcelona tonight. A large crowd acclaimed him when he arrived at the station, which was decorated in much the same fashion as its used to be for the arrivals and departures of King Alfonso. Tonight the crowds shouted, "Long live the president.'

Zamora said he would attend the conferences of the international committee on Olympic games and the Spanish-Irish football match at Barcelona. He said also he would take advantage of his trip to talk with Francisco Macia, Catalonian political leader, in an effort to adjust the problem of that province temporarily until the constituent assembly considers it.

The president's notion on the Catalonian problem, it was said, is that it should be left for the constituent assembly in its entirety, the province meanwhile being subordinated to the government at Madrid.

The address of Provisional President Zamora of Spain scheduled to be heard over Station WRC this afternoon, has been canceled, the National Broadcasting Co. has announced. Arrangements are being made to have President Zamora speak later in the week.

higher rates on the larger incomes. On the other hand, Senator Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, has proposed, if governmental "extravagance" is to be checked, a raising of rates all along the line, with a big increase in the number of taxpayers by lowering existing exemptions.

Senator Couzens said the next Congress could not avoid consideration of an increase in taxation "if the Government is conducted in a business way."

"Three quarters of a billion dollars was appropriated last session at the request of industry, yet they now say we must not raise taxes," he added. "Where do they expect us to get the money? It's all right to spend it. Nobody came to Congress to protest the expenditures. Now we have the bills to pay and nobody wants to pay them."

Recent Trend of Wealth.

To justify an increase in surtaxes, he pointed out that the wealth of the lower earning classes in the last decade had declined, while the wealth of those with incomes of more than $10,000 had increased about 100 per cent.

In 1925, he said, there were 9,960 persons with incomes of $100,000 or more. In 1929 this number had jumped to 14,701.

Couzens said he would raise the surtaxes at least to the 1924 level and provide a scientific sliding scale gift tax.

"Why should a man worth $500,000,000 be able to transfer this to a son now and pay no tax, and a man who does not transfer his property until death have to pay $20,000,000 on $100,000,000?" he asked.

With the 1924 surtaxes in effect now, he said, it had been estimated "$260,000,000 more in revenues would have been collected this year even with decreased earnings."

National Boys' Week Commended by Hoover

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover yesterday commended the observance of National Boys' Week, which begins today.

"The celebration of National Boys' Week," he said, "is a yearly reminder of the priceless qualities of youth, when faith is highest and ambition strongest, with their constant inspiration and encouragement to the fathers of sons.

"Interest in boys and comradeship with them is a privilege to their elders and a guiding service to the boys. I commend the observance of National Boys' Week to all our people."

FARM BOARD PLANS FOR NEW CROP YEAR

Will Have $200,000,000 to Assist Farmers in Cooperatives.

(Associated Press.)

When the new crop year opens July 1, the Farm Board will have approximately $200,000,000 available to assist farmers through cooperatives to market their products.

On April 15 it had more than $100,000,000, of which slightly less than $60,000,000 was uncommitted.

The final installment, $100,000,000 of the board's $50,000,000 revolving fund becomes available July 1. Repayment of loans by cooperatives is expected to offset stabilization expenditures in the interim.

Wool growers' cooperatives are being financed chiefly through commercial and intermediate credit banks. Supplemental loans by the board probaly will reach $12,00,000, the same as last year. The board expects these wool cooperatives to handle considerably more wool this year than last.

Reports of the Farmers National Grain Corporation show that 112,000,000 bushels of grain were handled cooperatively in the nine months from June to February, inclusive, supplemental loans by the board amounted to only about $4,500,000.

All loans made by the board, including stabilization activities since organization in July, 1929, total $478,000,000 of which $178,000,000 has been repaid plus $4,000,000 interest.

The largest items outstanding involve stabilization purchases. How much loss, if any, the board will sustain remains to be reckoned when its wheat stocks, estimated now at 200,000,000 bushels, and its 1,300,000 bales of cotton are sold.

Republican Farm Relief Approved in Middle West

(Associated Press.)

The opinion that Middle West farmers are solidly aligned in support of the Farm Board and President Hoover's farm relief policies was expressed yesterday by W. L. Harding, a former governor of Iowa.

That belief was voiced in a statement through the Republican national committee after a conference with Senator Dickinson of Iowa, chairman of the Republican agricultural advisory council, and Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the national committee.

"After talking with thousands of farmers in my own and nearby States," Mr. Harding said, "I have addressed meetings of Republicans in a number of States and in every instance I have found that the Hoover administration has met with enthusiastic approval."

3 Pupils Drowned And 5 Are Rescued

Picnic Boat Overturns and Children Lose Lives Near Mobile.

Mobile, Ala., April 25 (A.P.).—Three children were drowned and five were rescued as a boat overturned in a creek near here late today during a school picnic.

Billy Stewart, 12; Ruth Wilbur, 11, and Harold Browning, 14, all of Mobile suburbs, went down with the boat. Their bodies have not been recovered.

Buck Lewis, 20, residing near the creek, saved four of the five survivors. He heard screams as the boat capsized and ran from his home, plunged into the stream and swam to the children struggling in the water. He brought two to the bank and then swam back and rescued two more.

Mother of Four Held In Slaying of Spouse

Riverside, Calif., April 25 (A.P.).—Mrs. William Ferris, mother of four children, was held on a suspicion of murder charge by the sheriff here today following the shotgun slaying of her husband at their home in Corona, near Riverside, last night.

Mrs. Ferris told police Ferris had held her and her children prisoners with a shotgun all day yesterday. She obtained possession of the gun last night and was forced to fire to defend herself and children, she said.

$2,000,000 PROJECT BEGUN BY SMALL AD

Beautiful Development in Beechwood Is Story of George F. Mikkelson.

Newsprint tells us advertising brings results and one of the most singular corroborations of that statement is the story of George F. Mikkelson, Washington builder. Twelve years ago he inserted a 65-cent "for sale" advertisement in a newspaper, and the "result" was a career of building activity representing a valuation of more than $2,000,000—and Beechwood, a real estate development that is Washington's pride.

For the ways to the Land of Accomplishment are as divers as they are many, and the bridges to success over the chasm of mediocrity are often of frailest trestlework. We have read that a Corsican cadet jumped over a schoolboy's snowbank to subdue a continent; that a Norman William tripped on an oarlock and fell, seizing a nation. Now hear how a classified advertisement started things.

Mr. Mikkelson had met with an obstacle far more formidable than the foregoing. An employe of the Government, he had lost his job in a Democratic landslide. So he spent 65 cents for an advertisement announcing the sale of a house. That house was his home, and he failed to sell it. But he did establish sales connections with two other dwellings, and these he sold, receiving $900 in commissions.

Born in Iowa, 1876.

After years of departmental routine, Mr. Mikkelson, a native Iowan, born in 1876, saw the possibilities of the real estate profession and what is more important, envisioned a greater Washington with the Chevy Chase country as its prize suburban residential futurity. A development there was his goal.

He was not a pioneer in the field of thought regarding the future of the Chevy Chase region. Nearly 40 years before, a group inspired by the selfsame idea had formed the Chevy Chase Land Co., sponsored by Senator Newland. The senator, to show he had faith in the project, built his home on land acquired by the company. It was located on Chevy Chase Circle, where the residence of W. S. Corby now stands.

The Capital Traction Co. was prevailed upon to run a street car line through the country to Chevy Chase Lake, which became a resort. But there were other difficulties to be overcome. The country from the circle site to Bradley lane, had no water supply, and this district had to be supplied by means of drilled wells from which cool, soft water was pumped by electric motors. As the section rapidly began to be peopled, this system became inadequate and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission took up the task, enhancing the value of the development by installation of ample water service and of other important utilities.

Sewer System Laid.

An elaborate filtration plant was erected. A satisfying sewer system was laid and broad, substantial streets and roads replaced the footpaths and the cinder-filling of their rain-washed depressions. These cinder fillings afforded the early inhabitants much amusement by the way they jarred automobiles negotiating the forward slopes. They became silent, black, gritty, but highly effective agents for enforcement of the law against speeding.

The setting Mr. Mikkelson had selected for his Chevy Chase operation was a choice wooded bit of Montgomery County in the heart of the section. In the foliage of its arboreal wealth the green and copper of the graceful beech predominated. This prompted the name he chose for it—Beechwood. He had been moving slowly and surely toward his objective, building a little here, selling a little there. Came the year 1928, when he purchased this coveted tract of seventeen acres from the Chevy Chase Land Co.

Residences of Dignity.

He began to build on his long-desired acquisition bounded by Meadow lane and Thornapple street. He constructed handsome, convenient residences of that dignity that characterizes the English and Colonial types of architecture. Twenty-one of these he has built on broad lots that insure against crowding. He has sites for 45 more under the same ideal conditions. Three thoroughfares now traverse the community, Beechwood Drive, Hillcrest place and Sycamore street.

In the planning of Beechwood, nothing of its natural beauty was sacrificed. Its stately groves have been saved except in instances where there was an abundance of poplar, soft wood trees. These were thinned and sold as pulp wood to the D. C. Paper Co., of Georgetown. But in places where their presence was essential to the primitive loveliness of the surroundings, they were preserved.

Since entering the constructional field, Mr. Mikkelson has built and sold more than $2,000,000 worth of homes in Chevy Chase. His son, James L. Mikkelson, has entered the business known as G. F. Mikkelson & Son, and the firm is now engaged on its eighty-seventh project. It has provided a broad field for the expansion of its work. It owns 82 lots on one tract on the District of Columbia side available for later development. It has ground for eight home sites east of Connecticut avenue along Primrose and Oxford streets.

Dream Is Realized.

From the window of a neat, little white and green office building, Mr. Mikkelson can see the realization of his dream. Between the gray and silver vaulted arches of the woods, as yet but partly draped by spring, hospitable roofs and sheltering walls of happy homes appear. The picture is stippled white and pink and yellow with a million vernal blooms of flowers, bushes, trees. A singing cardinal crosses it, a streak of bright vermillion.

Here sits the builder planning, visualizing the plan. His memory tells him of a time this picture was a tangled wilderness. When, 25 years ago, he bought for a home, ground at 5 cents a square foot that now is worth from 30 cents to $1 a square foot and costs 5 cents a foot to grade and sod. But in the complexity of the undertaking he has not lost himself. He plays golf and is a courteous, kindly, smiling, patient man.

That patience has rewarded him. It attends him when things are not going as they should; when he listens to the palaver of the advertisement solicitors of the newspapers. There is a tolerant smile on his face as he hears their sales talk and in his eye a twinkle when they tell him "advertising brings results."

For he is thinking of 65 cents spent twelve years ago for a classified advertisement announcing a house for sale.

BUTLERS COMRADE BLEW UP THAT FORT

Col. Campbell Tells Why Haitian Stronghold Is Now Nonexistent.

San Diego, Calif., April 25 (A.P.).—"Fort Riviere is not in Haiti any more, because I blew it up after we took it, but it was certainly there in 1915," Lieut. Col. Chandler Campbell, Marine Corps executive officer of base troops here, declared today.

Col. Campbell's statement followed reports of remarks made by Minister Bellegarde of Haiti to the effect that the fort, for whose capture Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler was given a Congressional medal of honor, "is not known in Haiti."

Details of the 1915 engagement, in which he shared command with the fiery Butler, came unfalteringly from Col. Campbell, whose memory of the action was clear.

"We attacked Fort Reviere in four columns," the colonel said. "Butler commanded one of them, and I had the other three. The towns of Bahon, San Raphael, Dondou and Menjewel, which formed a rough square about the fort, were our starting points. Butler's column started from San Raphael.

"There was an opening on his side of the square fort, so he went through while we were scaling the wall. I was busy during the 20-minute attack, but it was established that Butler and Sergeant Dan Daley were the first through the aperture. Both received Congresional medals.

"Our only casualty was a man who was struck in the face with a rock and lost two teeth. We were fighting a people who did not know what sights were for, and in a tight spot they threw away their rifles and reached for rocks.

"After the engagement we buried about 60 Haitians in the center of the fort, and then I blew up the walls with 40 cases of dynamite so that we wouldn't have to take it again. Fort Riviere was the only masonry fort in Haiti, and was located on Monte Noir."

Civil Service Rules Will Aid Veterans

Hoover Orders Changes in Code Relating to Preference.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover issued an executive order yesterday amending civil service rules relating to veterans' preference.

Under the amendments honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines will have five points added to their earned ratings in examinations ment service.

In the cases of applicants for entrance to classifield Government examinations, who are honorably discharged and who establish by officials records a service connected disability, and who on account of this disability are not qualified but whose wives are qualified, the wives will have ten points added to to their ratings in examinations.

The order was issued after President Hoover had studied the report of his advisory committee on veterans' preference. The committee was composed of Chairman Campbell, of the Civil Service Commission; Veterans Administrator Hines; Chairman Johnson, of the House veterans committee; Assistant Attorney General Richardson, and John Thomas Taylor, of the American Legion legislative committee.

Douthitt Is Found Beaten Senseless

Mysterq Veils Assault on Police Publisher in Apartment.

Harry N. Douthitt, publisher of the Bluecoat magazine, a periodical covering police activities, was found unconscious late last night in an apartment at Fifteenth and U streets northwest. Beside the chair in which he had collapsed was a lead pipe, wrapped in newspapers.

Removed to Casualty Hospital in an ambulance which was summoned by an unidentified person, Douthitt was found to have a possible skull fracture, concussion of the brain and severe scalp lacerations. Revived to a state of semiconsciousness, he was unable to explain the attack or shed any light on the circumstances which led up to the beating.

Dr. Lyman Greene, who responded with the ambulance, said that lamps and other furnishings were overturned as though there had been a struggle.

Hurley Enters Hospital In Arkansas for Rest

Hot Springs, Ark., April 25 (U.P.). Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley arrived here today and will enter the Army Navy Hospital early next week for treatment.

The nature of the treatment was not known and the Secretary declined to discuss his condition, declaring he came here "to spend a week's vacation in Arkansas; just playing 'hookey' from my work."

BUTLER SLUR WAS NOT MEANT, HAITIAN MINISTER DECLARES

Gen. Butler or to cast a reflection on his heroism."

This, it can be said, will be about what Minister Bellegarde will say in the event he is called upon for an official explanation.

Meanwhile, Gen. Butler, who was awarded a Congressional Medal of Honor for his capture of the Haitian fort (Fort Riviere), had the satisfaction of knowing that the State Department, which recently apologized for his attack on Premier Mussolini of Italy, is now investigating Minister Bellegarde's alleged slur on him.

When he saw the article quoting Minister Bellegarde as saying that Fort Riviere was "very imaginary," Gen. Butler wrote a letter of protest to Secretary of the Navy Adams.

"In brief," Gen. Butler said yesterday, "the Haitian Minister is quoted as having said I was a fake, and that the fort was a fake and never existed. Well, this puts the shoe on the other foot.

"I wrote to the Secretary of the Navy last Monday, and I inquired whether an investigation had been made to determine whether, first, the Haitian Minister had made this remark, and, secondly, whether something was not being done to correct the false impression in the public mind such a statement would create. I have not yet received a reply."

Stimson Orders Inquiry.

Yesterday Assistant Secretary of the Navy Jahncke, announced that the Butler letter was being forwarded to the State Department. Later in the day, Secretary of State Stimson announced that he had ordered an investigation. This probably will be made by Assistant Secretary of State Francis White or Walter Thurston, chief of the Latin-American Division of the State Department.

Minister Bellegarde probably will be asked to give his version of the interview, and, if his explanation is satisfactory, the latest Butler "incident" probably will be brought to a close.

While Minister Bellegarde and his attaches at the legation insist that they had never heard of Fort Riviere, this ignorance can not be said to be general among Haitians.

In 1920, President Dartigunave of Haiti presented Gen. Butler with the Haitian Medaille Militaire, and in doing so presented him with the following citation:

"Former Chief of the Gendarmerie, Organizer of the Corps. For the great service he has rendered to this country in pacifying the north, particularly for the capture of Fort Riviere, the last stronghold of the Cacos."

From a dozen quarters yesterday there came evidence that there was, in fact, such a fort as Fort Riviere, and that Gen. Butler, then a major, did in fact risk his life to capture it.

One such testimonial came from Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, who, at the time of Gen Butler's exploit, 1915, was Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson administration.

Roosevelt Says Fort Existed.

In a statement issued at Albany, Gov. Roosevelt said:

"You may say that the then Secretary of the Navy was in Haiti at the time. Furthermore, he climbed a mountain 4,000 feet high, saw the fort and entered it. He also took several photographs, showing the work from various angles."

And there were others who might give similar testimony, among them Capt. Joel T. Boone, now the White House physician, then a "fighting surgeon" with the Marines in Haiti. Capt. Boone was right there when Fort Riviere was captured.

Capt. John H. Craige, of Philadelphia, a Marine officer well known in Washington, said that Fort Riviere in Haiti "is a real and very imposing structure in the same place it was in 1915 when captured by Gen. Smedley D. Butler and his men."

"Every Marine officer who has been in Haiti has seen it and heard the story of its capture." Capt. Craige said. "I have visited it several times."

In view of these statements, there seems to be no doubt that there was such a thing as a Fort Riviere. Nor does there seem to be much doubt that Gen. Butler and his men captured Fort Riviere.

Not even Minister Bellegarde will argue that point. The sole point the minister makes is that he has never been able to find such a fort. In the United States, he says, the capture might be a much-exploited incident, but in Haiti nothing is known about it.

Minister Bellegarde was interviewed in the Haitian Legation at 1703 Q street northwest. A big, distinguished looking fellow, he stood out among those the reporter encountered as he entered the house.

Wears French Decoration.

In the minister's lapel was a bit of crimson ribbon—the rosette of the French Legion of Honor. Dantes Bellegarde is the ace of Haitian diplomats, and this decoration was awarded him as a result of his brilliant speeches before the League of Nations in Geneva.

An outstanding man in Haitian public affairs, Minister Bellegarde has been his country's diplomatic representative in Paris, its representative at the League of Nations, and its representative at the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague.

It was M. Bellegarde perhaps more than any other Haitian who persuaded an American mission that Haiti was ready to handle its own affairs.

Tells of Interview.

Upon his arrival here recently, Minister Bellegarde, so he said yesterday, was approached by a reporter from the Washington Herald.

"He said he wanted some social notes for his paper," the Minister said, through his interpreter. "In the course of the conversation, he asked me what I thought of the Butler case. Not so long before that, you will recall, Gen. Butler had been in a controversy with Premier Mussolini of Italy. He was accused of calling Premier Mussolini a hit-and-run driver.

"'As a diplomat,' I told him, 'I can not say anything about Gen. Butler's conduct in that case.' It so happened that there was on my desk a copy of the Washington Daily News. In this was an account of Gen. Butler's deeds in all parts of the world, including his capture of Fort Riviere in Haiti.

"The Herald reporter asked me about Gen. Butler in Haiti. I said I did not know anything about Gen. Butler's activities in Haiti. I said I did not know anything about Fort Riviere. Maybe there was such a fort, but I said I did not know of it. I did not say that no such fort existed. I only said that I did not know of its existence.

"I had no intention of slurring Gen. Butler. I did not even know that the reporter was going to write what I said. I thought he was talking to me about social affairs."

What the reporter did write after describing how Minister Bellegarde read the article in the Washington Daily News was as follows:

"Well," said the story, quoting Minister Bellegarde, "the general goes on and tells how he took twenty men, climbed up the wall, crawled through a drain pipe and took the fort.

"We in Haiti have always wondered about that. For there is no Fort Riviere. There never was. We have looked all over our island and there is no such thing.

"Fighting Marine!"

"However, for taking Fort Riviere he got the Congressional Medal of Honor the second time. He is the only man in the United States to get it twice!—Fighting Marine!"

Said Prof. Hibbert, the minister's interpreter:

"You have heard the minister speak. He speaks English, of course But he does not speak the kind of English that is used in that article If the minister spoke that well he would not have me here as an interpreter."

After he had learned yesterday tthrough The Washington Post that Gen. Butler had protested against the statement attributed to him, Minister Bellegarde got busy and sought to find something in his files with reference to Fort Riviere. He finally found something. It was contained in a report of the hearings before a subcommittee of the Senate foreign relations committee, held in February, 1925.

In this report, reference was made to a dispatch which Admiral Caperton sent to the Navy Department. This read as follows:

"Fort Riviere captured by forces under Maj. Butler. All avenues of escape had been previously closed so that none escaped. Fifty-one were killed. No casualties our forces."

In addition, the Marine Corps yesterday produced sheafs and sheafs of evidence to show that there was a Fort Riviere and to show further that Smedley Butler and his men captured it.

Butler Speech Describing Fort's Entrance Retold

Philadelphia, April 25 (A.P.).—The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin today published a report of a speech Gen. Smedley D. Butler made at a luncheon in Philadelphia on March 26, in which the general is said to have related in an off-hand, humorous fashion an incident in entering a Haitian fort, the name of which was not given, through a drainage pipe.

"It became necessary to get information about the enemy," the Bulletin quotes Gen. Butler as saying, "and the only way was to enter this fort. I asked for volunteers and selected two men to go with me. One of these was Samuel Gross, a gallant lad, whom I saw not long ago in the Veterans' Hospital at Coatesville, Pa.

"We were to enter this pipe, crawl the length of it, with the possibility the defenders would begin to shoot at us as soon as we were seen. Naturally, the first man to enter the pipe had the toughest assignment."

Gen. Butler joked about how the three decided who would go first, saying he really felt it was his right, as ranking officer, but waived it when Gross insisted on going first.

"The other man insisted he also share in the danger, and I consented to let him go. So he went next, and I brought up the rear.

"Well, we all got in and out again, and naturally, being all good loyal Marines, we decided something ought to be done about it. So I recommended the men and they recommended me, and we all got the Congressional Medal of Honor."

FETE OF GIRL SCOUTS BEGINS TOMORROW

Hoovers to Attend at Night "Festival of Nations'" Colorful Spectacle.

After months of work and intensive effort, with almost daily rehearsals of the big cast of 300 Washington dancers, singers and actors, under experienced local directors, headed by Chalmers B. Fithian, Chicago producer, and Rita Helmes, dance director, the colorful spectacle, "The Festival of Nations," sponsored by the Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia, the proceeds of which will go to the capital fund of Camp May Flather, in the Virginia mountains, will be presented all of the present week, beginning tomorrow at Constitution Hall.

"The Festival of Nations" is an all-Washington production, not only as far as its cast of players is concerned, but its costumes and accessories, its stage settings and properties, have all been designed and executed here by Washington artists, and several hundred Washingtonians, including civic and society leaders, Girl Scouts, and Girl Scout executives, have served as volunteers in arranging and perfecting the elaborate plans for the festival, which will take the form of a great international musical spectacle.

President to Be There.

The President and Mrs. Hoover will head the company of official and diplomatic folks who will attend the official opening night tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock, for which special preparations have been made. There will be a Girl Scout guard of honor for the President and First Lady, and a Girl Scout guard of honor for the Vice President and his party. It will be a gala occasion, this opening night of the festival, and will be attended by many persons and groups from out of the city, who have been attracted by the idea of this mammoth production, fittingly described as "an epic of international good will."

Hundreds of prospective visitors to the Capital during the coming week have signified their intention of attending the festival—many because of their keen interest in the Girl Scouts and many others because of the civic, patriotic and artistic value of the spectacle itself.

Scouts From Many Cities.

There will be groups of Girl Scouts from neighboring cities, including Harrisonburg, Winchester, Richmond, Hagerstown, Baltimore, Philadelphia and even from New York City and the New England States and Canada, where the Girl Scouts are known as "Girl Guides."

The Girl Scouts will attend for the most part the children's matinee on Saturday afternoon, which will immediately follow the annual court of awards scheduled to take place that morning at 10 o'clock in Constitution Hall as an important event in connection with the Festival of Nations. "The Exhibition of Girl Scouting" which will be staged in the corridors of Constitution Hall for the entire week of the festival is likewise attracting considerable interest from hundreds of scouts and scout executives from many parts of the country.

The Festival of Nations itself arranged and staged under the personal direction of Chalmers B. Fithian, experienced in the production of festivals and pageants throughout the United States, will present one of the most original and colorful musical spectacles ever seen in this city. In order to stage the spectacle in Constitution Hall it has been necessary to cut off almost the entire front section of the orchestra seats as well as the sections of the balcony overlooking the stage and to build the stage out over the usual orchestra pit.

SOLOIST IN INDIAN BALLET

Harris & Ewing.

JUDY HAMILTON,
granddaughter of former Gov. William T. Hamilton of Maryland, who will be soloist in the Indian ballet of the Festival of Nations, which opens tomorrow night.

GROUP WILL UNVEIL MEMORIAL TO KEY

U. S. Daughters of 1812 Will Be in Charge of Service at Mount Saint Alban.

Impressive ceremonies will mark the unveiling of a memorial tablet to Francis Scott Key by the District of Columbia Society of the U. S. Daughters of 1812 in Washington Cathedral, Mount Saint Alban, today at 5 p. m.

The tablet will be presented by the president of the District of Columbia Society of the Daughters of 1812, Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, daughter of the late Maj. Gen. John A. Logan, Civil War hero, and accepted on behalf of the Cathedral Chapter by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington. Mrs. Clement W. Sheriff, chairman of the committee in charge of the placing of the tablet, will unveil it.

The history of Francis Scott Key will be the subject of an address of his great grandson, Maj. Francis Scott Key-Smith. Mrs. Samuel Z. Shope, president national of the United States Daughters of 1812, also will speak. The office of dedication will be read by Bishop Freeman, assisted by the Rev. Dr. G. Freeland Peter, canon and chancellor of Washington Cathedral.

During the service the hymn, "Lord, With Glowing Heart I'd Praise Thee," written by Francis Scott Key and his immortal "Star-Spangled Banner," will be sung, led by J. F. M. Bowie. The tablet, designed by Philip H. Frohman, resident architect of Washington Cathedral, is situated near the memorial tablet to Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, unveiled last week by the Dames of the Loyal Legion.

Social Agency Council To Hear Hospital Head

Announcement is made by the Council of Social Agencies that at a meeting to be held tomorrow at the Y. W. C. A., under the auspices of the health committee, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur will be a guest and will speak on the "Significance of Community Health Surveys." Dr. William A. White, of St. Elizabeths Hospital will also discuss the survey recently made by the American Public Health Association of Washington's Health facilities.

The meeting has been called for 12 o'clock, instead of 12:30 as originally planned, in order that those who desire to attend the funeral of Dr. George M. Kober at 2 o'clock may do so.

Piano Recital Given By Olmsted Pupils

Music pupils of Amelia Menefee Olmstead were presented in a piano recital last night which was given in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium, and which was well attended by relatives and friends of the reciting pupils. Without exception the numbers were excellently received.

Pupils who took part in the program included Kenneth Frisbie, Jean Wolfe, Albert Parks, Frank Westbrook, Dorothy Hobley, and Burley Martin. With the exception of two numbers by MacDowell, all compositions presented were of the old masters.

Odd Fellow Officers Will Meet on Tuesday

The monthly meeting of the Line Officers Association of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, will be held Tuesday at the Odd Fellows Temple. The association will meet as guests of Excelsior Lodge.

More than 100 presiding officers of subordinate lodges and officers of the Grand Lodge will be present, and a delegation of the Line Officers Association of Maryland will attend the meeting as guests of the Washington Odd Fellows. Martin A. McGrory, of Langdon Lodge, will preside.

Last Right of Way Obtained for Canal

New Orleans, April 25 (U.P.).—The last major obstacle to the completion of the intracoastal canal in Louisiana was cleared away recently with the delivery of checks totalling $40,000 to landowners for rights of way in Terrebonne Parish.

The Federal Governmnet had allotted millions of dollars for the project, but none of this money could be used until all rights of way between New Orleans and Morgan City had been obtained. Work will probably get under way sometime in May, Maj. R. F. Fowler, district engineer, here said.

Only One Alien Serves British Army

London, April 25 (U.P.).—Only one alien is serving in the British army, according to statistics.

Ther figures show that the army is composed of 143,183 Englishmen, 7,638 Welshmen, 14,295 Scotsmen, 8,843 Irishmen, 2,535 Colonials, 167 Britons born in foreign states and the one alien.

According to the report 125,000 of the soldiers belong to the Church of England, 22,500 are Catholics, 13,300 are Presbyterians, 7,619 are Methodists, 6,900 Wesleyans and 123 Jews.

93% of all aviation motors in National Aircraft Show ... were Twin Ignition!

At the National Aircraft Show just held in Detroit, all but two of the 53 aircraft on exhibition were powered by motors with Twin Ignition (2 spark plugs per cylinder instead of one).

These 2 exceptions were small ships with motors of less than 45 horsepower. Of the motors on exhibition, not mounted in aircraft, there were 42 with Twin Ignition, 2 with single ignition and 3 were Diesel motors.

Think it over! The vital necessity of dependability, economy and power efficiency in aircraft motors calls for two spark plugs per cylinder. Lindbergh over the Atlantic, Goebel over the Pacific and Byrd over the ends of the Earth, all flew in ships powered by motors with Twin Ignition.

Nash, pioneer of progress in motor car design, brings the advantages of Twin Ignition to you. Both the Nash Eight-90 and the Nash Eight-80 have this superior type of power.

The prices of these cars are no higher, and in some cases are lower, than competitive cars with single ignition. But there is a vast difference in performance.

The Nash Twin-Ignition motor, with two simultaneous explosions per cylinder instead of one, burns the gasoline more speedily, more completely, more smoothly, more efficiently!

By actual engineering test of the same motor with Twin and single ignition, Twin Ignition produced 22% more horsepower, 5 miles per hour more top speed, and 2 extra miles per gallon of gasoline!

Of course you can get along without Twin Ignition, but you don't get along so well!

Get the facts! Phone us—a Nash demonstrator will be sent to your door.

ALLEGED RED PLOT ON OIL FIRMS BARED

Extra Guards Placed After Reputed Plans to Use Nitroglycerin Are Told.

Austin, Tex., April 25 (A.P.).—Warned of an alleged Communist plot to blow up refineries, pipe lines and storage tanks of several oil companies operating in the midcontinent field disclosed tonight that extra precautions had been taken to guard their properties.

Frank Hamer, Texas Ranger captain, issued the warning recently in a confidential letter sent to executives of 38 companies operating in Texas. His letter was passed on to officials and oil companies in Oklahoma and Kansas, becoming public today.

The Ranger captain refused to divulge the source of his information concerning the alleged plot and expressed indignation that his confidential letter had been given out. In the letter he said a large quantity of nitroglycerin had been stolen from storehouses in the oi l fields and apparently was in the hands of the asserted plotters.

Guards Are Increased.

E. E. Plumly, superintendent of refineries for the Magnolia Petroleum Co. and head of the Beaumont Refinery, said he had increased guards on the companies' properties.

Advices from Houston said at least one ship channel refinery had strengthened the night guard around its plant.

Jake Sims, chief of police at Seminole, Okla., notified 40 oil companies in that State of Capt. Hamer's warning. A nitroglycerin magazine near Seminole blew up last Tuesday night, and subsequently 90 quarts of the explosive were found buried near Oklahoma City. Sims attributed the blast to "common thieves" attempting to rob the magazine and expressed the belief that Communists were not involved.

Two Explosions Since.

Capt. Hamer said that two explosions had occurred in Kansas since he issued his letter. He said he was unable to give any details about the Kansas blasts.

Hamer's letter said, "For the past several weeks I have been receiving information that there is a movement on foot among Communists, or reds, to dynamite all tank farms and pipe lines throughout this State (Texas)."

He said he considered the information reliable and believed it of "such importance I deem it my duty to notify the different companies in Texas to instruct their special agents and all employes that can be trusted, to be very alert in watching all movements, as nearly as possible, as to activities of the reds in all of the oil fields of Texas."

Governor Refuses To Favor Sargent

Former Attorney General Must Meet Terms of New York Bar.

Albany, N. Y., April 25 (A.P.).—A bill authorizing John G. Sargent, former Attorney General of the United States, to practice law in the courts of New York State without submitting to the bar examinations was vetoed by Gov. Roosevelt today.

The governor said he had no doubt the former Attorney General would be able "in due time" to come within the provisions of the rule of the Court of Appeals that an attorney who had practiced law five years in another State might practice in New York without examination if he has been a resident of the State not less than six months.

"The bar associations of New York have made the suggestion, with which I heartily agree," the governor wrote in a memorandum, "that special legislation in regard to admission to the bar is bad as a matter of principle and should be disapproved."

Miss Joyce Avoids Summons Service

Quits Theater by Front Door as Marshal Waits at Stage Entrance.

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—Peggy Hopkins Joyce went out the front door of the Palace Theater after her appearance there last night while Deputy United States Marshal Edward Menges waited in vain with a summons for her at the stage entrance.

The actress is being sued by the bureau of customs to confiscate jewelry and clothing and to recover $51,000 damages. The complaint states that Miss Joyce disembarked from the Mauretania, May 12, 1922, without declaring $9,000 worth of jewelry and dresses valued at $1,800, which were promptly seized.

The government also seeks to recover under the anti-smuggling laws a penalty amounting to three times the value of the goods, plus the regular duty.

Gov. Bilbo Refuses To Attend 'Session'

Reiterates His Objection to Informal Meeting of Legislature.

Jackson, Miss., April 25 (A.P.).—Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo today declined an invitation to attend the "informal" special session of the Legislature which will convene here on Tuesday on the initiative of members to deal with the State's financial problems. He refused to call the assembly himself because a majority of the members would not sign a pledge to ban impeachment proceedings against him.

The governor sent his "regrets at inability to attend, owing to absence from the city," to the speaker of the house, Thomas L. Bailey.

"You may tell the members of the Legislature in your meeting," the governors letter said, "that the only way to get a special session is for a substantial majority of both houses to sign the pledge. This is final."

Stolen Typewriter Machine Recovered.

A window of the Galliher & Huguely Lumber Co., at 963 Florida avenue northwest was smashed early yesterday morning and a typewriter valued at $50 was removed. The thief later abandoned the machine in the rear of 2238 Eighth street, according to police reports.

Tax-Shift Efforts Rapped in Virginia

Real Estate Assessments Believed by Groups to Be Too Heavy.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 25.—A vigorous protest against any attempt to legislate a general sales tax to replace all tax laws now in effect in Virginia was displayed at a symposium of representatives of the Virginia Real Estate Association, the Virginia League of Municipalities, the Virginia Retail Merchants Association and the State Chamber of Commerce, meeting here to discuss a proposed general revision of the system of taxation.

The general theme of the meeting was that real etsate is being burdened too heavily in taking care of State and municipal expenses.

Approval was given the suggestion that the next General Assembly be petitioned to allocate to the cities a share of the gasoline tax, which at present is being divided between the State and counties.

How to Keep Well

SPRING STUFF.

THAT in mind is spring eating stuff. Before winter is entirely out of the way the human animal gets a yen for spring stuff. Just why, he can not tell you, but the desire is there. Some day the scientist will come along and tell him why, but he needs no scientist to tell him of the urge. Something within tells him that.

If he depends on himself, or his neighbors, radishes will be the first spring stuff to become available. Radishes grow very near the top of the ground and that is one reason why they get in so quickly. Almost everything that comes into the home market in the early spring either grows very near the surface of the ground or hangs well up.

The sun must get a fair chance at it. And now the scientists come along and tell us that one of the functions of certain plant cells is to absorb sunshine to change it into chemical substances, and then to store it. Of course, something taught our urges that a long time ago and the scientist comes a little late. How important it is that this sunlight get in just right is shown by potatoes. Those that grow on the surface and store sunlight as a green are poisonous; that is, the green part is poisonous. It has done the wrong thing with its sunlight.

Early radishes are wholesome if they are tender and not too hot. If they are old and tough some of the cells have changed to fiber and some starch to chemicals, such as cellulose, that man can not use. The objection to hot radishes is that they have condiment features.

Next may come tender young carrots. When they are tender and young, not rank or highly flavored, they can be eaten as radishes are. Probably next will come very young onions. What is said of radishes and carrots applies to young onions growing quickly and developing near the surface of the ground. Most gardens will have English peas right after radishes, and before carrots and onions.

Young peas are filled with a green pigment called chlorophyll, a chemical which is of great assistance in the animal economy. Again we are dealing with a fact which the scientists explained to us centuries after man had learned it. The starch in peas is easily converted into sugar and little of it has been developed into fiber. The good chemicals found there, the digestive organs can easily make available.

The papers have recently had an account of some very desperate people who had to eat grass, as did a famous Biblical character. Well, tender young grass is not such a bad dish. Maybe we would all be better off if we ate more of it. Of course, old grass and hay is another proposition, since man's stomach, unlike that of the cow, is not arranged to get food value out of cellulose. At that, alfalfa hay has value as a human food, but the tenderer it is the more valuable.

The first fruits to get in are the berries. The first of these is the strawberry. It grows near the ground, gets lots of sunshine, needs but little plant, and quickly comes to the ripening. Here is a good place to stop.

DIETING A MINOR ROLE.

L. A. B. writes: Is dieting of value for catarrh or rheumatism? If so, what things should one eat and also avoid eating?

REPLY.

Dieting plays a minor role in dieting for most of the diseases called rheumatism. It is of no value in the treatment of most of those called rheumatism. It is of no value in the treatment of most of those called catarrh.

Vacation Is Begun By Gov. Roosevelt

New York Executive to Go to Georgia for One Month's Rest.

Albany, N. Y., April 25 (U.P.).—Gov. Roosevelt left the capital tonight, not to return until after a month's vacation at Warm Springs, Ga. He will spend the week-end at his home in Hyde Park, go to New York City on Tuesday, and leave for the South May 1.

The governor has given no indication of whether he will announce his decision in the case of Mayor James J. Walker, charged with misfeasance, before he leaves the State.

Just before departing, the governor finished disposing of the last of the 30-day appropriation bills and then issued a statement saying there will be approximately $11,000,000 left in the State treasury at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, instead of the record low figure of $700,000 which he estimated in January.

High Gales Whip Straits of Dover.

London, April 25 (A.P.).—High gales drove heavy rains across the Straits of Dover today, but shipping was maintained and planes to and from the continent kept to their schedules. The Thames has overflowed at some points, the flood covering many acres and some of the main roads.

JEWS TO CONTINUE DRIVE FOR $60,000

Campaign Forces Reorganized in Effort to Reach Quota Set for Capital.

The United Jewish Campaign, which was scheduled to close today, will continue until the $60,000 quota has been reached. This announcement was made yesterday by drive chairman Harold H. Levi in an appeal to the Jews of Washington not to abandon their brethren in Eastern Europe.

Drive forces are being reorganized in an effort to achieve the goal this week, Mr. Levi said. At the last meeting of drive workers Friday noon at the Jewish Community Center the total on hand had not yet reached the half way mark. Mr. Levi attributed the failure to reach the goal in the prescribed time to the inability of workers to reach the prospects. He was confident that the entire fund would be raised, however.

$1,000 More Promised.

At Friday's meeting Paul Himmelfarb who has already contributed $1,000 announced that he would give an additional $1,000 if the fund gets within that distance of the $60,000 goal.

Mr. Levi in his appeal yesterday pointed out the plight of the Jews of Eastern Europe. He said:

"Cutting off relief funds now would bring about a terrible calamity to Jews not only of Europe but to Jews all over the world. It would mean abandoning the fight against epidemics, against tuberculosis, which is taking its terrible toll in Poland and among the children of Russia. It would mean permanent deterioration of the Jewish masses of Eastern Europe, the loss of a generation."

Speaking of the condition of the Jews of Russia, he said that due to their political and economic status they are deprived of earning a livelihood and can only be brought to the farm colonies and trained for agriculture through the help of American Jews.

Among the Contributors.

Among the contributions announced yesterday were a gift of $250 from the law firm of Simon, Young, Koenigsberger & Brez; $200 from Albert & Pilzer, and $100 each from Isaac Gans, Mrs. Ernest Mayer, Benort Baer, William Rosendorf, Ralph Goldsmith, Arthur J. Sundlun and the Connecticut Pie Co.

Rabbi Julius T. Loeb, Arthur Gottlieb and Morris Gewirz contributed $75 each, and $60 contributions were received from Dr. Charles Basseches, Mrs. B. Singer, Samuel Denezky and Abraham Cohn.

Contributions of $50 each were announced from the following:

Henry Oxenberg, Samuel Livingston, H. Abramson, Dr. Abram Simon, S. Freedman & Sons, H. Jeffrey, Judge Nathan Cayton, Ernest Gichner, Jeremiah Weitz, P. Miller, Barney Robbins, B. Siegel, Mrs. Fanny Schlossberg, Mrs. Minnie Mazo, Edward Ostrow, Jacob Eisenman, Harry Kaufman, B. Rich's Sons, Charles Rosenthal, Herman Schrot, Hyman Brown, Abraham Kay, Dr. William Chase, Mrs. B. Erlebacher, Charles J. Stein, Alexander Koplin, A. Mostow, Garfield Kass, Dr. David Davis, Mrs. Sadie Grosner, Julius Goode, Dr. William Ogus, George W. Levy & Bro., Lillian and Esther Levy, D. C. Hebrew Aid Society, Miss Pauline Baum and Julian Brylawski.

Riggs, of the Navy.

Portugal Is Visited By British Princes

Wales and His Brother Are Royally Welcomed at Lisbon.

Lisbon, Portugal, April 25 (A.P.).—Homeward bound from South America, the Prince of Wales and his brother George spent this day here on the way to Bordeaux, whence they will fly to Paris and home.

The steamer Arlanza slipped into the Tagus early in the morning under a British naval escort. The guns of Fort Sao Juliao thundered a royal salute and army airplanes roared overhead, but the princes slept through it for they had gone to bed late the night before.

Before noon they came ashore, reviewed the assembled troops and began a slow motor trip through lanes of cheering men and women to the presidential palace. The heir wore the uniform of a British admiral and his brother that of a naval lieutenant.

President Carmona, receiving them in the golden salon, invested the princes with the Order of Avis and received the grand cross of the Order of the British Empire.

Early tomorrow the brothers will board the British cruiser Kent for Bordeaux.

New York Police Rout Reds.

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—Police today swung their night sticks and dispersed about 400 Communists who hissed at an order forbidding them to parade in a demonstration against the forthcoming electrocution at Scottsboro, Ala., of nine Negro boys. Four demonstrators, all with minor injuries, were arrested. One policeman also was slightly hurt.

Masons in War Guests of Lodge

Coontz, Fries and Shearer Are Speakers at St. John Function.

More than 100 members of St. John's Lodge, F. A. A. M., who served in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps during the World War, were guests of the lodge at a communication devoted to service men held at the Masonic Temple.

Speakers, presented by Paul Bergh, in charge of arrangements, included Admiral R. E. Coontz, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, and Capt. T. R. Shearer, who spoke, respectively, on the Mason in the Navy, Army and Marine Corps. Grand Master of Masons C. Fred Cook presented the guests.

Maj. Henry L. Larson, recently decorated by the Nicaraguan government with a special medal of merit, spoke on the South American republic, its people and problems. Music was furnished by the Marine Band, and a program was presented by soldiers from Walter Reed.

Three Pickpockets Try To Rob Another in Bus

Havana, April 25 (A.P.).—Three pickpockets, none recognizing the others as professionals, were riding in the same bus.

Two of them, operating independently, dipped into the pocket of the third from opposite sides. The victim raised such an outcry that two detectives riding in a back seat arrested all three.

Serum in Eggs Results In Vari-Colored Chicks

Calgary, Alta., April 25 (A.P.).—Now come purple and green chickens.

Just a matter of serum. Some people interested in such things injected serum into eggs by means of a hypodermic needle on the nineteenth day of incubation.

Yesterday the chickens were hatched, some all purule, others all green. The serum people figured they can obtain a blue chick by a mixture of the serum.

It was not explained why.

$10,364,000 Gold Sent for Argentine Interest

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—Announcement was made today that the Bank of the Nation, Buenos Aires, has shipped $10,364,000 in gold to New York for payment of interest on Argentine loans.

Private cables from Paris stated that the cargo of gold en route to the United States from Cherbourg on the liner Europa, sailing today, totals $15,000,000. Only $12,500,000 of this total had been announced by New York consignees. The additional consignment of $2,500,000 brings total shipments of gold on the present movement from France to $18,500,000.

$15,000,000 in Gold Sent to U. S.

Cherbourg, France, April 25 (A.P.). Four hundred and sixty-eight barrels containing $15,000,000 in gold were shipped from Paris to New York today on the liner Europa.

U. S. EMPLOYES INCREASE RETIREMENT FUND

SLAVE ISSUE RAISED AS SOVIET MENACES U. S. TIMBER TRADE

Russia, Neutral in America's Troubled Days, Becomes Object of Scorn.

SHIPMENT OF LUMBER BRINGS TEST OF LAW

Dumping of Products Here Arouses Protest From Industrial Heads.

By DAVID RANKIN BARBEE.

Those of us who thought that the curse of slavery was lifted from the back of the world at Appomattox, under a celebrated apple tree, are just as mistaken as men usually are about any controversial matter.

In that little American family affair it was Russia who stepped in at a critical moment and said to England and France and whatever other nations—Spain, too, I believe—wanted to take a hand in it: "Hold, enough. Lay off there." And because Russia would not side with the South or against the North, England and France, which were just trembling to do so, were kept out of the fracas.

If you are disposed to play the little sectional game of put and take, of deciding what might have happened if so and so had not done as he did, you might use the case of Russia as an example in the higher mathematics of the international politics of that era and figure out what did happen because she stayed out.

History is ironical. The wheels of time revolve and here in this good year 1931 we find Russia standing at the bar of public opinion, with a number of accusatory fingers pointed at her, and behind every finger a voice hissing: "Slavery."

In 1860 one section of America was hissing that word at another, and saying that slavery in the South was imperilling the status of free labor in the North. To that extent and no further was slavery the real exciting cause of the terrible sectional war.

Russia Resents Slavery Charge.

In 1931 free America's great groups of organized labor and agriculture and industry are hissing at Russia and are saying that slavery in her lumber camps and in industry are imperilling the status of free labor throughout the world and of certain great industries in America.

Of course Russia hotly resents the charge that she permits slavery within her borders; she even denies the implication that any form of peonage or forced labor exists anywhere in her broad lands. But the outside world knows better than that, and the United States Government believes it so strongly that it has taken steps to prevent any goods made by such labor in Russia from entering this country.

This, of course, is no new tale. It is even more than a twice-told tale. But it is a tale that can never be told too often. For, despite the vaticinations of the prophets of evil, Soviet Russia has held on to her government now some ten or a dozen years longer than the optimists said she would. As a matter of fact, Soviet Russia has more than a toehold on the Russian Empire. She has both feet planted deep into the soil and is pulling back on the breeching straps.

Interest in the slavery situation is revived by the shipment to this country of a consignment of 4,000,000 feet of spruce lumber, which has already made port at Providence, R. I., once and for more than half a century the seat of the African slave industry of America. This cargo is worth only $100,000; but it looks as big as $8,000,000 to the American lumber industry.

May Be Another Trent.

It is altogether probable that the good tramp ship Anversoise, of Finland, which brought this cargo to Providence, may go down in history by the side of the Trent, a small British steamer which also made history. Nobody in this country every heard of her until she slipped into Providence with this consignment of lumber, but within ten minutes after docking she was on the front page of thousands of American newspapers, and a new word had crept into our language to give cross-word puzzles another lease on life.

The Anversoise brought something else to America besides a cargo of lumber. She brought a mighty controversy. Who knows what else? Under a ruling of the Treasury Department it is up to the importers, A. C. Dutton Lumber Co.—who may be a blind for the Amtorg for aught we know—to prove that this consignment is not tainted. They must produce the evidence that not a stick of this timber was ever touched by a convict or by forced labor. Of course, they can do some tall swearing, but the day has passed when the loudest and longest oath carries the deepest conviction. Uncle Sam is entirely too canny for that.

The chances are that the cargo is untainted, as untainted as any car of lumber cut in the fir forests of Oregon or in the pine barrens of Mississippi. Russia was not so foolish as to select a cargo of lumber cut and milled by convicts and by slaves and send it to America to make a test case of the Treasury ruling. At least the National Association of Lumber Manufacturers does not think so. And in this case it is in the position of the mountain that was frightened by the mouse.

Boarded by Investigator.

Just as soon as that ship docked she was boarded by Mr. Carl W. Bahr, of Washington, an investigator for the lumber association, who devotes his whole time to studying and investigating the operations of Soviet Russia in her efforts to enter the American lumber market. Mr. Bahr—pronounced Barr, and not Bear—can see farther through a knot hole in a stick of Russian spruce than any man ever

ELDERLY MEN HOLD OWN IN BRAINS TEST

Younger Entrants Speedier, but Not as Profound and Accurate.

Cleveland, April 25 (A.P.).—Elderly men who hear all the talk about the young fellow being superior in ability can mark up a point for their side.

Under a grant from the Carnegie Foundation, Leland Stanford junior university set to work recently making a comparison between the capacities of young and old persons. Keith Sward, assistant professor of psychology at Western Reserve University, participating in this research, made a comparison between young and elderly professors at two of the leading Pacific Coast colleges, using intelligence tests.

The young and old scored in the tests just about equally, he said today. The young were a little more speedy. Age, however, did not impair quality and accuracy. The younger men were surpassed in their knowledge of vocabulary, indicating that in addition to well-preserved minds their elders had experience on their side.

How Tests Were Made.

Prof. Sward examined two groups, 45 men in each. In one group, ages ranged fom 25 to 45 and in the other from 60 to 80.

He used an intelligence test devised for superior adults, in collaboration with Dr. L. M. Terman, author of the Stanford revision of the famous Binet test.

Answers to some of the questions required a limited time, while other questions were power tests to indicate thought depth.

Some of the questions were like this: "A is stronger than B, and A can lift as much as C and D together, and C is weaker than D. Is B stronger than C?" There were sentences with vocabulary in artificial language, like this to translate: "Aj lobana fregil pristef." The vocabulary test had words like these: "Insouciant, absterge, apopemptic, sciolist, sapid and manumit."

"The older men were slowed down," Prof. Sward said, "but their age did not seem greatly to impair the quality and accuracy of their work. We found greater difference between members of each group than between the two groups.

Mental Attitude Analyzed.

"We also found a close correlation between high standing on the tests and the background of the individual. The professors who had attained who's who distinction or were members of honorary societies like Phi Beta Kappa, Beta Phi or Tau Beta Pi made consistently higher scores than others. This was a good basis for the validity of the tests."

While the professors were pondering over their problems Prof. Sward made notes on the comments they made to one another. He found that the elderly men made many more self-disparaging and self-belitting remarks than the younger did.

"This might have been due to a feeling of inferiority," Prof. Sward said, "or to self-consciousness in the test situation, or because they felt they had more at stake than the younger men."

Prof. Sward said it is remarkable how well preserved some of the minds at 70 were, but suggested this might not hold true in the different environment of the outside world.

Standish's Grave Again Disturbed

Bones of Plymouth Hero Are Moved to New Tomb in Massachusetts.

Duxbury, Mass., April 25 (A.P.).—For the second time since his grave was discovered in the little Pilgrim cemetery 40 years ago, the bones of Capt. Myles Standish, hero of the Plymouth settlement, were disturbed today. Forty years ago the town fathers opened the grave to place the mortal fragments of the doughty captain in a wooden casket.

Today's disinterment was decided upon that the bones might be placed in a hermetically sealed casket and laid away in a new concrete tomb as a permanent resting place. In the casket was placed a metal tube containing records of the settlement prepared by Dr. Myles Standish, of Boston, direct descendant of the warrior of three centuries ago.

The grave of Capt. Standish was flag decked today, and on each corner of the plot an old gun was mounted. Historic and military organizations participated in the simple ceremonies.

Bird, Free to Come and Go, Popular Dweller of Apartment.

Joe Likes Motoring and Sits on Master's Arm as Car Is Driven.

Joe is a common sparrow. He is common to the extent that he belongs to that great and troublesome bird family that inhabits our trees and sometimes pesters poor humans with their antics.

Here Joe's similarity to his brothers stops. He is an apartment dweller, a motorist of note, and a music lover. Also it might be added, Joe has quite a bit of personality and wins strangers by his fearless approach to them.

Joe, born in Potomac Park, April, 1928, dwells with his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred S. Jones, 303 Park Lane apartments, Twenty-first street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Joe Featherless When Found.

Three years ago Mr. Jones was on his way to work in the Shipping Board Building, Nineteenth and B streets northwest, when he discovered a bird nest, which had been blown from a tree by high wind the night before. Nestled deep in the straw composing the nest was the featherless Joe, apparently but a day old.

The nest was placed against a sunny wall of one of the nearby buildings in the hope the mother bird would find him and attend to his feeding.

That night the bird was still in his nest and appeared to be somewhat the worse for want of worms.

The future bird prodigy was taken to Mr. Jones' apartment where he was fed warm milk with an eye dropper. As Mrs. Jones is away during the day, some plan had to be devised to feed the voracious youngster. Mr. Jones took him to work, nest and all, the next day.

At regular intervals during the day Mr. Jones would slip out and feed his bird with the eye dropper and some warm milk. The nestling had been stored away in the Jones' car.

With the hardihood of his kind Joe, the sparrow, grew steadily. He was never placed in a cage and was allowed to make free of the apartment. He saw no good reason why he should not make himself completely at home.

He Knows Voice of Master.

He learned to know Mr. Jones' voice and spent contented hours nestled in his friend's cupped hands or sitting on his shoulder. He even made friends with the family canary.

After Joe had attained maturity he was taken to Potomac Park and released. It was thought he would want to join his feathered brothers.

But this was not for Joe. He delightedly scratched around in the grass and gravel until he became tired. He then flew to Mr. Jones' shoulder and chirped his readiness to return home to his apartment. He made no effort to leave his friends.

He learned to look on the family automobile as his and showed as much excitement when Mr. Jones started the engine as would a child or pup that has become fond of his motoring.

The bird usually rode on Mr. Jones' arm, which the driver rested on the open window of the car. There was joy and thrills aplenty for Joe in sitting securely on his friend's arm, feeling the tug of the wind, seeing the countryside glide swiftly by.

This beats flying a darn sight. One did not tire one's wings, and there were none of those family quarrels, so common among his kin, to contend with.

Joe liked motoring so well that when the family went for a trip up through Canada the bird occupied his usual place on the driver's arm. Sometimes he would perch on the steering wheel. If a street car passed too closely he would become startled and would fly to Mr. Jones, where he clung to the friend's cravat.

Joe Guards the Car.

When Mr. Jones would go golfing he would leave Joe as guardian of the car. The windows of the machine were left open so the bird could fly away to his own kind if he wished. Joe preferred not, however, and would perch himself on the steering wheel and await his friend's return. It is to be admitted he would not make a very terrifying watchman of the car, yet so he evidently considered himself.

At night when Joe's bedtime arrived he would crawl up into Mr. Jones' cupped hands and chirp sleepily for a lullaby. Regardless of what Mrs. Jones or the neighbors have to say regarding the qualities of Mr Jones' voice, Joe liked it.

After two or three songs he would be put to bed in a nest that had been built for him. Sometimes he would fly out and again snuggle into Mr Jones' hand, where he would chirp for more melody.

Now he has built himself a nest of his very own. He selected a pocket

SCIENTIST STUDIES STAR MOVEMENTS

Finding of Heaviest Known Object Brought Fame to Van Maanen.

Mount Wilson Observatory, Calif., April 25 (A.P.).—Adriaan Van Maanen sits at the turret of the world's largest telescope here and measures the movement of the stars.

He is one of the distinguished astronomers Sir James H. Jeans, noted British astronomer, is coming here to consult next week. In fact, it is Van Maanen's star that gave to Jeans one of the bits of knowledge upon which the famed English observer predicates his theory that the whole universe is wasting away.

Van Maanen's star is one of the most remarkable objects in the sky from the astronomical viewpoint. It is named for him by right of his discovery in 1917. One of the faintest of the white dwarfs of the sky, at the same time it is one of the nearest stars to the earth. It is only seventy-six million million miles away.

Star's Fame Lies in Weight.

Smaller than the earth, therefore an unusual midget among the stars, its chief fame rests in weight. Man knows of no other object so heavy. One cubic inch of it would weigh seven tons if transported to the earth. That is 400,000 times as dense as water.

"A few years ago such an astounding density would have seemed absurd," said Van Maanen. "No chemical element on the earth is known that has any such weight.

"Physicists, however, have told us that the density of an electron is about thirty thousand million times that of water, while that of the proton, the nucleus of the hydrogen atom, is still enormously higher. If, therefore, we could strip the atoms of their widely scattered electrons, and pack the electrons and nuclei close enough together, we could easily produce densities such as we have found in our stars and still have plenty of empty space left.

Pease Is Another Conferee.

"Now, theoretical considerations have shown that with the temperatures and pressures prevailing in these dwarf stars, we have exactly the conditions required to strip the atoms and closely pack their parts together.

"There is therefore no reason to think our figures absurd; moreover, it was proved by Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the observatory here, a few years ago, in a different way, that another very small star, the companion of Sirius, has a density of about 30,000 times that of water. A cubic inch of that on earth would weigh a ton."

Sir James Jeans will find another interesting conferee here in Dr. Francis G. Pease. He measured the diameter of Antares and found its density to be only one three-millionth that of water. This means that it would take a hundred thousand cubic inches of Antares on earth to weigh a pound.

PEOPLE BORN WHEN MERCURY IS RULING SUBJECT TO MOODS

Planet Dominates Over Mind Favoring Those Producing and Selling Literature.

VERSATILITY COMPELS CULTIVATION OF POWER

Planet Specially Influential Between May 22-June 21 and Aug. 24-Sept. 23.

By EVANGELINE ADAMS (World's Most Famous Astrologer).

Next to the sun and the moon, Mercury is the most important heavenly body in determining the horoscope. For it increases the influence of the other planets for either good or bad. It makes Mars more quarrelsome and Venus more fair.

The adjective which we use in common parlance, "mercurial," is the true description of this changeful, restless planet. It is up or down, laughing or crying, shining or glooming, "dayless, seasonless, yearless," the planet of youth, of wit, the greater of the lesser gods.

Naturally, people born strongly under the influence of such a mercurial planet are especially subject to moods. I remember the case of a grand opera singer of international fame who came in to see me to ask if she should get rid of her devoted but no longer thrilling husband. I read the diva's horoscope and discovered that she was subject to these "mercury moods," often without cause, and that when she was in the "dip" of one of these slumps, she was apt to do foolish things.

She Turns From Divorce.

"That's extraordinary," agreed the singer. "What you say has always been true of me."

"Wait until the mood passes," I counseled. "You are coming under better conditions presently, and your husband is coming into the best period he has had in 21 years."

The singer was about to sail for Europe to get her divorce in Paris. I did not know at the time whether my words had any effect. But that night, as I was leaving my studio, a messenger arrived from the Metropolitan Opera House carrying a huge box of American Beauties and this note:

"Dear Miss Adams: I have decided to take the wiser part. I am sailing tomorrow with my husband."

The only trouble is: I can not get hold of all you Mercury people in time!

But, of course, not all the sons and daughters of Mercury want to get divorces. Some of them are using the energy of their dominant planet in more constructive ways. For Mercury exercises dominion over the mind and all mental things. It favors writers, editors, publishers, printers, booksellers and all others connected with the production and distribution of literature. It also favors research workers, teachers and accountants.

When Mercury Is in Gemini.

It is especially influential in the lives of all people born under Gemini between May 22 and June 21 or under Virgo between August 24 and September 23, because it is the ruling planet of both of these highly mental signs. In only slightly lesser degree does it affect those people born in the last ten days of April, the first ten days in July, the last ten days of November and the first ten days of February.

Variety is the breath of life to these people, particularly those born under Gemini. They would do well to force themselves to finish the various undertakings they start before taking up an entirely new set. They are so versatile, they often find it necessary to guard against scattering their forces and should practice concentration.

Lack of decision is one of their greatest faults and drawbacks to happiness and success. They are constantly torn between two courses of action, as to whether they should go here or there, do this or that—and after having made a decision, they

New Table on Children's Growth Relieves Mothers

Some Boys and Girls Develop at Certain Ages, While Their Chums Develop at Others, Doctor Says in Presenting Chart.

Philadelphia, April 25 (A.P.).—Science today offered relief for mothers worrying over children who bring home school reports of having weights and heights wrong for their ages.

This relief is in a new set of growth tables presented at the closing sessions of the American Philosophical Society by Dr. Charles B. Davenport, director of the department of genetics of the Carnegie Institution of Washington at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y.

Discovery of an elephant tooth calendar that promises to date outstanding human events of more than a million years past was reported by Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, of the American Museum of Natural History. A dust storm source of the rich farmlands of the Mississippi Valley was explained by Dr. William H. Hobbs, of the University of Michigan.

Studies of child growth hitherto, said Dr. Davenport, have been made chiefly by measuring about 100 children at a time from lowest to highest school ages. This was given a mass growth curve against which individuals were matched.

But there is a different story in growth curves of individual children which Dr. Davenport has been making for seven years. These individuals often fail to fit the mass curves. They have other periods of growth, sometimes ahead of the mass, sometimes behind, and even taking several different spurts. But they are normally healthy.

"When a child is growing four, five or six inches in a year," said Dr. Davenport, "it is quite probable that he is in a rather peculiar physical and nervous condition compared with his time of slower growth. Yet the growth is likely to occur at a time when physical and mental demands are made upon him most heavily. It is a question whether some special consideration should be given to a child at this fast growing period."

The elephant tooth calendar is a discovery that for more than a million years the amount of enamel

No. 10 in Statue Test Teaser to Many Fans

Search the alcoves of your memory for the statue reproduced above. If you can find it, can give it a name, and can assign it to its proper location in a city so thickly populated with statues, rest assured you have overcome the most difficult hazard in The Post statue contest.

For the contest editor sincerely believes this monument, No. 10 in the series published every Sunday in The Post, is the most difficult that has yet appeared. If you have seen it in your strolls through the parks, in one of Washington's spacious plazas, or perhaps in a public building, by all means write and tell us.

We would like to assist you in your search, but that is forbidden in our rules, and you wouldn't find it nearly so much fun. If you've "been around" in our town you should have spotted it already, and if you haven't, well, now is the time to get acquainted.

You may win a prize. The Post will pay $10 for the highest percentage of accurate replies covering all of the statues in the contest. There will be a second prize of $5, and five $1 awards. If you are saving your clippings you can submit all of your answers at the close of the contest. But perhaps you are one of those that write in as each statue appears.

FROM A SENATOR'S DIARY

Being the Day-by-Day Observations of a "Member-at-Large" Set Down for His Own Satisfaction.

By the 97th Senator

Wednesday.

A GOOD many folks are puzzled by Ham Lewis' pussyfooting on the liquor issue.

Ham was elected to the Senate on that issue last fall over Mrs. McCormick by an unprecedented majority. There was no other issue involved except possibly the prejudice among some voters against sending a woman to the Senate. Now Ham says prohibition is a secondary issue. He insists that "the economic issue" is paramount. Just what he means by "the economic issue" isn't quite clear, but whatever it is, Ham says it must take precedence over the rum issue.

I think I can explain Ham's attitude in a very few words. Ham is a candidate for the Democratic vice presidential nomination. Out in Illinois Ham's boosters are booming him for the Presidency, but every one knows that is "a lot of bologna," if I may be permitted to borrow one of Al Smith's favorite expressions. Ham will take the presidential nomination if he can get it, which he can't, but what he is really aiming at is the Vice Presidency, which he thinks is not so far beyond his reach. Ham has always had a hankering for the Vice Presidency. He longed for it during the Wilson period, but Tom Marshall always had too tight a grip on it.

Ham thinks that by soft pedaling the liquor issue, on which he was elected, he can make friends among the dry Democrats from the South. If he joins with them in keeping a wet plank out of the platform, he figures they will reciprocate by helping him get the vice presidential nomination. Ham is a political fox and he knows how often it is necessary for statesmen to rise above principle.

And what a gorgeous Vice President Ham would make! Never again would it be possible to wisecrack about the drabness of the Vice Presidency.

Thursday.

IF Newton D. Baker isn't actually in the ring for the Democratic presidential nomination he is so close to it that the slightest push would put him in. His statement the other day that he would not run away from the nomination indicates that the formal launching of his boom is not far off.

Woodrow Wilson, who was not addicted to rhapsodizing, once characterized Baker as "the ablest public servant I have ever known." Some of those who watched him at close range as Secretary of War in the world conflict are inclined to agree with Wilson's estimate. As an orator he has few equals. He got his political fetching-up from the late Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, and he knows how to talk to the masses.

Nevertheless, Baker had to take a lot of punishment in the fierce politics of the war and its aftermath. Just how much that punishment hurt his reputation remains to be seen. His political strength is a doubtful quantity. Personally, I am inclined to think he is weak as a vote-getter, as matters stand today, but it is conceivable that he might develop.

If Messrs. Cox, White and Bulkley could step aside and let him have the Ohio delegation solidly, Baker would have to be reckoned with as a contender for the nomination. He qualifies as a wet and he comes from a pivotal State.

Harry Hawes, I am told, will not reconsider his determination to quit the Senate at the end of his present term, which means that his successor must be elected next year. Many are hoping that Jim Reed will run for Harry's seat, but Jim insists he is through with the Senate for good. He still has a hankering for the Presidency, despite his 70 years, which he doesn't look, and it is probable that the Missouri delegation will go to the Democratic convention pledged to his support. Under these circumstances it would weaken Jim's prestige for him to get into the Senate race.

Word comes from Missouri that Bennett Clark, son of old Champ Clark, Speaker of the House during the Wilson era, will be a candidate for Harry Hawes' place. Bennett is a close friend of both Hawes and Reed. If either of them changes his mind Bennett can withdraw from the race. If he stays in the contest he probably will be a strong candidate. He has many of his distinguished father's engaging characteristics and he has had plenty of schooling in practical politics.

Friday.

MR. RASKOB'S days as chairman of the Democratic national committee are surely numbered now. Jim Reed has taken the warpath against him. Raskob may have thought that Joe Robinson and Cam Morrison were troublesome customers, but from now on he is going to learn a whole lot more about the art of being pestiferous from a real master. As I have remarked before, he is a tough and wiry little fellow and a glutton for punishment, but he'll save himself a lot of anguish by resigning right now.

Raskob's got to go, says Jim Reed, echoing the words of Josephus Daniels, Cam Morrison et al. But, Jim's declaration of war on Raskob is prompted by far different reasons

TOTAL IS EXPECTED SOON TO MOUNT TO $30,000,000 YEARLY

Nearly Half of 17,768 Now on Roll Receive Less Than $800 Annually.

ENORMOUS AND COSTLY LABOR TURNOVER SHOWN

Data Being Used in Forming Program to Be Given to Congress.

By J. B. M'DONNELL.

Contributions by Government employes to the retirement fund have exceeded all expectations and soon will average $30,000,000 annually, according to a study of the ten-year history of the retirement law made for the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Some of the high lights developed by the study included:

Far from being a lifetime sinecure for employes, the Government service has an enormous and costly labor turnover each year.

A comparatively small number of employes are retired each year, but a large number are separated from the Government service by death and other causes annually.

Nearly half of the 17,768 employes on the retirement rolls receive less than $800 a year, while only about one-fourth of the total receive the maximum retirement pay of $999.96 a year.

Average Rate Is $759.40.

The average annual rate paid retired employes is $759.40, a few receiving less than $100 a year.

The great bulk of employes who have been retired received salaries of less than $1,800 a year, a showing in sharp contrast with the criticism voiced by some members of Congress in the last session that Government employes were living luxuriously on extraordinarily fat and juicy Government salaries.

The study is being used by the employes in preparation of their legislative program for improvement of working conditions in the Government service. This program is to be submitted to Congress when it convenes and will call for amendments to the retirement law as well as of other laws affecting personnel.

Employes, the study showed, have contributed to the retirement fund a total of $223,598,899.79 since the law became operative in 1921. Of this amount $23,961,907.16 represents interest and earnings on their deposits.

Against the total contributed by the employes the Government has contributed only $40,450,000, of which $19,950,000 was paid into the fund on July 1, 1928 and $20,500,000 paid on July 1, 1929.

Have Increased Rapidly.

Contributions by employes have increased rapidly since 1921 and have more than doubled since 1923. Their contributions in 1921 amounted to $12,586,389.37; to $15,155,609.75 in 1923, and to $34,926,919.75 in 1930.

The large turnover among Government employes is indicated by the fact that there have been nearly as many refunds of contributions as there are employes in the retirement group. There are 400,000 employes in the retirement group and the refunds have numbered 384,950. This figure, however, includes employes who have been in and out of the Government service a varying number of times and it is estimated that not more than 325,000 different employes are represented by the refunds.

Since 1922, the report declares, the number of refunds have decreased steadily and they may stabilize somewhere between 20,000 and 30,000 a year, although the amount returned employes to whom refunds are made probably will increase as the total of contributions paid into the fund mounts. Refunds have amounted to $31,114,199.58 over the ten years. These refunds, however, do not represent money paid out of the Treasury, but simply the return to employes dropped from the service the amounts they contributed to the retirement fund.

Balance in Fund.

Annuities paid in the 10 years have amounted to $76,139,224.51, making the total disbursement $107,253,424.09, leaving a balance of $156,795,475.70 in the retirement fund at the end of the 1930 fiscal year.

Retired employes receive $13,492,934 annually. This is divided among 17,768 persons, making the average annual rate $759.40.

Analysis of pensions paid shows that 12 persons receive less than $100 retirement pay a year, 137 less than $200, 437 less than $300, 812 less than $400, 1,643 less than $500, 1,678 less than $600, 1,735 less than $700 and 2,074 less than $800, making a total of 8,548 who receive less than $800 a year.

Of the remainder on the retirement rolls, 2,672 receive less than $900 annually; 1,919 receive between $900 and the maximum allowed, $999.96. There are 4,629 who receive the maximum.

Of the annuitants, 70.5 per cent had average salaries before retirement of between $1,200 and $2,100, and these received 76.5 per cent of the annuities paid in the 10 years; 20.5 per cent of the annuitants had average salaries of less than $1,200, and they received 12.8 per cent of the annuities.

Analysis of the salaries paid by the Government to annuitants before retirement shows that 22 were paid less than $300 a year. Of the 17,768 annuitants 16,175 were paid less than $2,100 a year.

Details showed the average salaries paid annuitants by groups divided by each $300 range in pay: 197 averaged $473.30 a year; 1,007 averaged $785.84; 2,414 averaged $1,078.02; 4,603 averaged $1,347.01; 4,605 averaged Brennan, pianist; "In the Time of Roses (Reichardt); "Ma Little Banjo" (Dishmont; "The Little Sandman" (Brahms): "Hallalujah," from the "Mount of Olives," (Beethoven), the Glee Club.

Detectives Hope To Link Up Crimes

Baltimore Youth May Face Quiz on Shooting of Woman in Holdup.

Detectives here yesterday were seeking possible connection between an attempted holdup and slaying in Baltimore and the killing of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Jaynes, cashier, in an attempted holdup of the Garden T Shoppe.

Information was requested from Baltimore police concerning Dale H. Lambert, 18 years old, who is under arrest in connection with the slaying of a milkman in an attempted holdup, as Capital police worked on local clews.

Should information received from Baltimore warrant it, Inspector William S. Shelby said yesterday, a detective will be sent to the Maryland city to question Lambert, who is said by Baltimore police to have confessed to the holdup in which John W. Anderson, driver for a Baltimore dairy, was shot. In his confession he is said to have implicated Herman W. Duker, 21, son of a Baltimore manufacturer. The alleged confession states that Lambert and Duker planned the holdup to obtain money to entertain girl friends.

Donohue's Suicide Laid to Gambling

New York Hears Woolworth Kin's Loses Ran Close to $1,000,000.

New York, April 25 (U.P.).—James Paul Donohue was buried today, with a funeral such as only the wealth of a Woolworth could provide.

Many notables of the city attended services for the man who took poison a few days ago while his wife, the former Jessie Woolworth, lay ill in a hospital. Orchids valued at several thousand dollars were the tribute Mrs. Donohue cast upon his bier. His second cousin, Mrs. Stephen Donahue, held requiem mass.

As he was borne to his grave, word passed along Park avenue that he probably had taken poison because of losses in the gambling haunts of Palm Beach, Miami and New York. The story went that his recent losses were close to a million and that he had overstepped the allowance made by his wealthy wife.

Design of Hospital Will Be Discussed

Architect to Confer With Heads of District on Sanatorium Plans.

T. B. Kidner, consulting architect, will be here tomorrow to confer with District authorities on the design for the proposed Children's Sanatorium, Maj. H. L. Robb, assistant engineer commissioner, said yesterday.

Plans for the institution are to make it complete within itself because of its distance from the city and the fact that the adult Tuberculosis Hospital doubtless eventually will be moved to the same site. The plant will include a nurses home, administrative building, physicians' quarters, a power plant, and an independent sewer system.

Between 110 and 125 beds will be available. The sanatorium and its associate buildings will cost $500,000. While there are now only 35 tubercular children in dire need of hospital treatment, according to Maj. Robb, there are several hundred more who should have hospital attention.

Crash Starts Gasoline Fire.

Fire which broke out when an auto crashed into and leveled a gasoline pump while backing from a filling station on Seventh street near E southwest, caused $200 damage yesterday. The car, which was not damaged, was driven by George B. Edwards, 334 N street southwest.

CATHOLIC U. GLEE CLUB TO GIVE CONCERT

Glee Club of Catholic University which will give its annual spring concert in McMahon Hall Thursday night. Lower left, William D. Ganey, of Auburn, N. Y., president of the club, and right, Frank J. Brennan, accompanist and pianist.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

THE military bands of Washington had a busy week with their services constantly in demand at the sessions of the Daughters of the American Revolution and their assignments to functions in connection with the visits here of Oriental royalty.

Visitors to the city rejoice in the spring and summer concerts of the military bands, the United States Marine Band, the Army Band and the Navy band, with their capable leaders presenting programs often of symphonic character. These programs are the outstanding musical events of the summer season and are a big factor in the musical education of the people of the city.

For nearly twenty years Arthur S. Witcomb, cornetist and second leader of the United States Marine Band, has been a feature of the annual congresses of the D. A. R. In addition to his services with the band in its frequent appearance Second Leader Witcomb has given a number of solos, which delighted the delegates and added to their musical memories of the week. The services of Mrs. James Shera Montgomery as accompanist, were also highly appreciated by the officials of the congress.

Music programs were used at nearly all of the sessions to break the monotony of speeches only.

Some of these musical moments were the singing of Flora McGill Keefer, mezzo-contralto; the George Washington University Glee Club program, the singing of Mrs. Marie Lewis, a member of the William Dawes Chapter, D. A. R., in New York, and the organ recitals of Miss Dorothy Jean Silversteen, of the Waightsill Avery Chapter of North Carolina.

Gertrude Lyons, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs, in her desire to help promote the excellent work being carried on by the National Federation of Music Clubs for young musicians, has made an earnest endeavor to bring before the public during National Music Week, May 3-9, the splendid results of the senior federated groups and through the courtesy of three radio stations, WRC, WMAL and WOL, will present the following clubs:

Interstate Male Chorus, Hon. Clyde B. Aitchison, director; Friday Morning Music Club, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, president; Chaminade Glee Club, Esther Linkins, director; Elizabeth Somers Glee Club, Mary Burnett, director; Jewell Downs Chorus, Jewell Downs, director; Washington Composers' Club, Mrs Dorothy DeMuth Watson, chairman; the Rubinstein Club, Claude Robeson, director; Music Section Women's City Club, Gertrude Walter, chairman; Wilnor Glee Club, Mrs. Bernice Randall Angelico, director; Capital City Choristers, Mrs. Dorothy Radde Emery, director; Rho Beta Chapter, Mu Phi Epsilon, Miss Catherine Benson, president; Madrigal Singers, Mrs. J. M. Sylvester, director; Calvary Baptist Church Choir, Thomas Moss, director; National Baptist Memorial Church Choir, Mrs. Emily Dickinson, director.

Also Metropolitan Baptist Church Choir, Gilbert A. Clark, director; Vermont Avenue Christian Church Choir, William E. Braithwaite, director; Epworth M. E. (South), Edwin Moore, director; First Congregational Church a Cappella Choir, Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl, director; Institute of Musical Art Orchestra, Dr. C. E. Christiani, president, will enter the contest at Fox Theater as will also the Kaspar Junior Orchestral Ensemble, Josef Kaspar, director.

Each club has been asked to include one or two selections on their programs by American composers and several programs will include District of Columbia composers. The Capital district contest for young artists will be held on Saturday, May 2, when winners from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia will compete for first place, the winners to go to San Francisco, Calif., in June, when the most outstanding man's and woman's voice will receive a first prize of $1,000, the next six winners $500 each.

Other radio activities during National Music Week include an hour of choral music to be given under the auspices of the Washington Choral Festival Association, Louis A. Potter, director, in the Epiphany Church on Saturday afternoon, May 9, at 4:30 over WRC.

An ensemble from the Lyons Studio will give a program for the S. A. R. over WJSV Wednesday, May 6, 8:30 to 8:45 p. m., under the direction of Gertrude Lyons.

The president of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs, Gertrude Lyons, will give a brief address before the Washington Pianists Club, Thursday, May 7.

At the Vesper service of St. Paul's Lutheran Church tomorrow evening, held at Epiphany Chapel, Sixteenth and U streets northwest, at 8 o'clock, there will be a program of music by the Victory Quartet, Eugene Dahl, first tenor; Lynn Gillchrest, second tenor; Ralph Balliette, first bass, and Ray Gustin, second bass. The quartet will sing "My Task," Ashford; "God Is Love," Shelley, and two hymns, "The Old Rugged Cross" and "The Golden Bells Ring Out." Mr. Dahlo and Mr. Gillchrest will also sing Steiner's "Beloved, Let Us Love One Another," arranged as a duet. A song service by the congregation of the old familiar gospel hymns will be led by John F. Stowell, barytone.

Elena de Sayn and Charlotte Klein will repeat the concert of American music on Thursday at 8:15 p. m., for the first public meeting of the Roerich Society of Washington. The aims of the society will be outlined during the intermission by Miss Ada Rainey, chairman. The meeting is open to the public and will be held at the Stoneleigh Studios.

The Juilliard School of Music announces that May 1 is the closing date on which manuscripts will be accepted for its 1931 competition for publication of new orchestral works by American composers. The school will select a given work from the entries and pay for its publication. The composer receives all royalties and fees accruing from the sale or performance of his work. The school also cooperates with the composer in securing for his work adequate rehearsal and performance.

The Ladies' Choral Club of Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, appeared in concert Saturday in the college auditorium at 8 p. m.

The program was entirely religious music. Interspersed with the regular choral numbers were vocal solos, marimba and violin solos, and accompaniments.

The club consists of 30 ladies and is under the direction of Mrs. Verna Schuster-Metcalfe. The organization recently gave a half-hour broadcast over Station WRC on the afternoon of April 8.

Haydn's "The Heavens Are Telling," Tschaikowsky's "Good of All Nature," and Roma's "I Come to Thee," were a few of the numbers on the concert program. The club also presented one group of Negro spirituals. "The Sinner and the Song," with an answering invisible choir was the last number on the program.

Edith B. Athey gave an organ recital Sunday at 4 o'clock at the Ballston Presbyterian Church, Glebe road and Wilson boulevard, Ballston, Va. The assisting vocalist was Cleo Scanland Parks, soloist at the Calvary Baptist Church, Washington.

There are two concerts of Latin-American music scheduled at the Pan-American Union for the coming summer. The three large service bands stationed in Washington give individual concerts annually, and this season the opening event was given by the United States Marine Band under the leadership of Capt. Taylor Branson on April 14.

The second event will be that of the United States Navy Band under the leadership of Lieut. Charles Benter. This concert will be held on the esplanade of the union on Monday evening, June 29.

The third concert will be given by the United States Army Band under the leadership of Capt. William J. Stannard on Monday evening, July 27. Assisting artists from Latin America will take part in each of these programs.

At the suggestion of the United States Chamber of Commerce a special concert has been arranged by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the union, as a part of the entertainment to be provided for the delegates in attendance at the International Conference of Chambers of Commerce to be held in Washington during the week of May 3. This concert will take place on Tuesday evening, May 5, and will be held on the esplanade of the union.

Owing to the fact that over 1,000 delegates from 29 countries are expected to be present. the local invitation list will be confined to members of the Diplomatic Corps and Government officials. The United Service Orchestra of 110 pieces will play a program made up of outstanding selections from previous programs.

The assisting artists will be Maria Romero, Mexican soprano, and Francisco Dominicis, Cuban tenor. These artists have never sung in the United States and are coming to this country especially to take part in the May 5 concert. Maria Romero is recognized as Mexico's most famous operatic and concert artist. She has sung in Spain and in the leading capitals of Latin America. Her voice is a most unusual one and as the program will be broadcast over a chain of stations in the United States and sent out over short-wave channels to Latin America for rebroadcasting, the invisible audience should be a very large one. Francisco Dominicis has earned the distinction of having sung for ten consecutive seasons in opera at La Scala, Milan. He is now on a visit to his home in Havana and will arrive in Washington in early May to take part in this event before his return to Italy.

The Sunday evening concerts of the Lowe-Nevins Orchestra at the Shoreham Hotel have been advanced one hour in time and will be presented between 6:15 and 8 p. m. during the spring and summer months, beginning today, April 26. The influence of spring is shown in today's program, which features various composers' impressions of the springtime, ranging from Tschaikowsky's "Valse des Fleurs" to the extremely light and dainty "A Day in May" suite by Friml. Raoul da Costa will direct. The program:

Overture, "Fingal's Cave" (Mendelssohn); "Valse des Fleurs" (Tschaikowsky); selection, "Song of the Flame" (Gershwin); "The Lost Chord" (Sullivan); suite, "A Day in May" (Friml); (a) "Spring Fancy" (Densmore), (b) "Il Baccio" (Arditi); selection, "Madame Butterfly" (Puccini).

At the last meeting of the Animato Club an interesting musical program was given by Clare Speaker and Emily Elkins.

A concert for the benefit of the club will be given tomorrow at North Woodside. The following members will take part: Clara Young Brown, soprano; Goldie Hutchins, contralto; Anne Marley, violinist; Emile Bishop, pianist, and Clare Speaker and Marta Brocaw, readers. The program will be followed by dancing.

The Capital City Choristers, Dorothy Radde Emery, director, will give a concert on Tuesday evening at the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K streets, for the benefit of Beck Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R. The club of 30 members will have the assistance of the Bernheimer Trio, consisting of Clara Moran Bernheimer, piano; Louise Bernheimer, violin, and Elizabeth Bernheimer, cellist.

The soloists will be Ella Mintz, soprano; Paul O. Gottwals, tenor; Katharine English, contralto. Incidental solos in choruses will be sung by Hannah Klock, soprano, and Marvin Gardner, bass. There will be dancing at the conclusion of the program.

The junior choir, Church of the Ascension, will repeat the operetta, "Little Red Riding Hood," in Alexandria, Va., benefit P. T. A. on Friday, and on the following Friday at the Episcopal Church in Congress Heights.

The Chaminade Glee Club will have a benefit and theater party at the National Theater Wednesday evening, May 13.

The District of Columbia Chapter of the American Guild of Organists is presenting a series of four organ recitals at the Church of the Epiphany on Tuesday, May 5; Tuesday, May 12; Monday, May 18; Tuesday, May 26, at 8:15 p. m.

The first recital will be played by Edith Athey, the second by Conrad Bernier, the third by Lyman McCrary and the fourth by Charlotte Klein.

The programs of these recitals will be announced in turn, beginning with next week.

The members of the National Capital Choir have issued an invitation to their friends and other lovers of music to attend a series of three musical teas to be held in the Romaine-van Schaick room at the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S streets, on Saturday afternoons, May 2, 9 and 23, between 4:30 and 6 o'clock. The soloists to be heard Saturday are Trixie Groff, soprano; Marjorie Soper, contralto; Eugene Dahl, tenor, and Warren Adams, baritone.

At the morning service the choir of Christ's Church, Georgetown, under the direction of Richard Tuttle Bell, organist and choirmaster, will sing "Seek Ye the Lord" (Roberts), "O Lord Most Holy" (Franz Abt), and Woodward's "Te Deum and Benedictus in D." A contralto solo will be sung by Miss Verna Richie.

Mary Helen Howe, coloratura soprano, will have charge of the music of the novena services to the Sacred Heart at the Visitation Monastery at Bethesda, Md. Among the soloists whom will assist here are Mrs. Sinnott, Clement Geibel, Delphine Barr Walsh, Florence Yocum, Mrs. David Certley, LeRoy Lewis, Mrs. Martha M. Barbee and Mary Barbee. Louise McNearney will preside at the organ. These services will take place at 3:30 every Friday afternoon until June 12. The public is cordially invited.

Masons Will Pay Bertholf Tribute

Past President of League Is Ordered to Duty in Philippine Islands.

A testimonial dinner in honor of Capt. Cheney L. Bertholf, U. S. A., past president of the National League of Masonic Clubs, who was recently ordered to the Philippines, will be held by the Advisory Board of Masonic Clubs Saturday, May 9, at the Hamilton.

An "aloha" farewell program has been arranged by Charles H. Taylor, chairman of the entertainment committee. H. F. Chandler, president of the board; D. D. Isbell, vice president, and guests prominent in local Masonic circle will be at the speakers' table.

On May 28, members of the local board will go to Alexandria, to witness conferring of the third degree at historic Alexandria-Washington Lodge. The board will go as the guest of E. J. Skidmore, treasurer, who is a member of the lodge. A dinner at the George Mason Hotel will precede conferring of the degree.

It would cost $2,250 to send postcards to all the readers that can be reached any morning by Post Classified Ads.

PERSONS MERCURY BORN MADE MOODY

Planet Dominates Over Mind Favoring Those Producing and Selling Literature.

Why Some Are Moody.

Are you "moody" and "mercurial?" If so, the chances are that you are strongly under the influence of the planet Mercury.

In the accompanying article, Evangeline Adams will tell you a lot about yourself and your friends whose birthdays come during the following periods:

May 22 through June 21.
August 24 through September 23.
April 20 through April 30.
July 1 through July 10.
November 20 through November 30.
February 1 through February 10.

still wonder whether it would not have been better to have done the other thing.

They should cultivate will power. Also, they should be less influenced by the people with whom they are thrown and less dependent upon environment. They should make their own decisions and then stick to them. It is only through the lessons they gain from experience that they will build character and rise above their tendency to go to extremes in mood.

It is most necessary that they should have a purpose in life, as they are inclined to do things for the joy of doing them, rather than for results. Their insatiable mental curiosity moves them to many unwise actions. The fact that their motives are prompted by a desire to ascertain the reactions produced on the undeveloped mind, the conservative mind and the sophisticated mind, does not keep them from being misunderstood or criticized. It would be well for them to realize that it is quite as necessary to avoid the appearances of evil as evil itself.

Mercury is the most truly sensitive of all planets. Venus and the Moon are more easily affected, it is true, but for them a better term is "impressionable." Mercury responds to every impression as does the weather vane, which is a very different thing from the receipt and reflection of every impression. In slightly different language, Mercury is not modified by the signs as are the more passive planets; rather each excites him to give a special expression of opinion.

Changes Like Quicksilver.

Mercury is, as we have already indicated, the mind, and while the contents of the mind are determined by the food of the mind, yet different minds deal quite differently with identical foods. It has been well said that thousands of people before Newton saw apples fall from trees, but their only impulse was to eat them.

Like mercury in the thermometer rising and falling according to temperature, mercury is still mercury, and so whatever aspects may exist will not alter the essential character of the planet. The main point to remember is the delicate sensitiveness of the mental ruler, and the fact that such impressions as are made on him are not like seals upon wax, but like the rise and fall of the column of quicksilver at every change in the atmosphere.

The desire for knowledge, the longing for change, and the cosmopolitan spirit of those born strongly under this planet will cause them to feel the wanderlust, and consequently to take many journeys and make many changes. Their keen intuition and ability to sense what people are about to say often causes them to interrupt in conversation and to change the subject quickly that at times it is difficult to follow them.

Too Easily Bored.

It will all depend on their environment and mental development whether their inquisitive nature will cause them to be curious over petty things or those of more importance. They should realize that their restiveness and tendency to be too easily bored is caused by their own mercurial nature and is not the fault of people or circumstances. Lack of decision and a tendency to allow the attention to wander are two of their outstanding characteristics, which may prevent their permanent success.

The mind of these people is never at rest, and for this resaon they require more sleep and fresh air than does the average person. They should guard against being too introspective and should associate as much as possible with spiritulaly minded people.

In the physical body, Mercury governs the brains, nerves, bowels, lungs, tongue, hands, arms, mouth and the whole nervous system. Its influence is active, excitable, changeful and stimulating. Its colors are black, blue, orange and slate gray. Its stones are the agate, marcasite, emerald and topaz.

If you are a true son or daughter of Mercury, you are, above all things, "quick on the trigger." Your mind works rapidly and accurately. But you are subject to moods. You are either up or down. You are "mercurial" in every sense of the word. But there are many more good things than bad things about your star of destiny. The aim of every person born under its influence should be to avoid the bad and take full advantage of the good.

The God of the Intellect is a powerful ally to have on your side in life's battle!

NEXT WEEK—"Venus, the Goddess of Love."

Man Seriously Injured; Bent Fenders Sought

A colored man giving the name of R. Dorsey, who was apparently struck by a hit-and-run auto on the Rockville pike, was being examined at Emergency Hospital early this morning as Maryland police looked for bent fenders in the stream of cars which came into Bethesda over that road.

Dorsey, who was about 35 years old, was unable to give police his address or tell what his initial stood for. While his condition has not been diagnosed, it is thought to be serious. Sergt. Leroy Rogers, in charge of the Bethesda substation, stationed a detail of men at the end of the pike with instructions to look for any car which showed evidence of having been in a recent collision.

2,000,000 Pupils Now Ride in Buses

50,000 Motors Transport Children in U. S. to 17,000 Schools.

(Associated Press.)

An army half as big as that which served the United States in the World War moves each day by motorbus in search of knowledge.

In buses large and small, 2,000,000 children go to and from school, some of them carried many miles from scattered homes in the open country, others for comparatively short distances in and around the cities.

The recent death of several children in a blizzard bound school bus in Colorado turned the attention of the Federal office of education to the part played by that means of transportation in American education.

It found practically every State ran school buses last year. All told 50,000 went the daily round, bringing their youthful charges to 17,000 schools. The cost was placed at about $40,000,000 for 1930 alone.

Gov. Pollard Helps Poppy Month Drive

Virginia Executive Issues Indorsement of Work for Veterans.

Richmond, Va., April 25 (A.P.).—Gov. Pollard today issued the following statement indorsing May as poppy month, as designated by the American Legion and its auxiliary:

"The American Legion and Auxiliary have designated May the month that the poppy, as the memorial flower, shall be worn each year in memory of the heroes of the World War.

"The making of the poppies by former service men in our own Virginia hospitals should appeal to every citizen, due to the fact that it gives our disabled men something to keep their minds occupied, and, at the same time, make money with which to secure some small comforts.

"A poppy over every heart for our dead and disabled.

"Because of the beautiful sentiment attached to the poppy it has won a place in the hearts of the people throughout the world."

FESTIVAL OF MUSIC PLANNED IN SCHOOLS

Divisions 10-13 Will Present Week's Program, to Begin on May 4.

L. Williams, F. H. Douglass, L. H. Peck, P. T. Goines, Estelle Pickney, Ernest R. Amos, Mary L. Europe, Henry L. Grant and Alfred H. Johnson.

Trade Board Play Arouses Interest

"Death Takes a Holiday" to Be Presented by National Troupe.

Although the sale of seats does not open until tomorrow, orders have already been coming in for tickets to the gala night of the National Theater the evening of May 3, which will be dedicated to the greater National Capital committee of the Board of Trade. The play, "Death Takes a Holiday," will feature the party.

This production has attracted a great deal of attention, and without exception has been presented to crowded houses, and has met with generous patronage in many cities. It is now beginning its third week in Pittsburgh. All receipts from the May 3 performance will go to the greater National Capital committee, organized to stimulate interest in Washington as a city for conventions, tourists, new permanent residtns and to stress the importance of Washington as an educational center.

The Board of Trade management is asking all members of the organization to make their seat reservations as soon as possible. All of the theater attaches are volunteering their services for this performance and the management is giving the theater.

Communist Creed Assailed by Cobb

Judge Tells Harlem Lawyers Negro Should Work Out Destiny in Peace.

"The insidious and seemingly attractive doctrine of communism should have no place in the philosophy of the Negro of this country," Judge James A. Cobb, of Municipal Court, said last night in an address before the Harlem Lawyers Association in New York City. Judge Cobb was speaker and honor guest at the organization's fifth annual banquet.

"I firmly believe," he said, "that if the Negro ever comes into the full enjoyment of all the rights, privileges, immunities and prerogatives which are justly his, it will not be by revolution, but by working out his own destiny through the medium of education, industry and mutual respect for all peoples, regardless of race, creed, color or class, under our present form of government."

Propaganda which the judge said is being circulated to overturn the present Government he labeled as "the most dangerous and insidious since 1860."

Man at Gallinger Found Hanged; Inquest Fixed

An inquest will be held tomorrow at 11:30 o'clock into the death of Frederick C. Lewis, a patient in the psychophatic ward at Gallinger Hospital, who was found hanging yesterday.

The body was discovered by Charles Fowler, an orderly at the hospital. The body was suspended by a belt which had been tied to a bathrobe cord and fastened over the top of the door. Lewis was pronounced dead by Dr. George P. Wyman, of the hospital staff. The man, a salesman, 39 years of age, formely lived on Belmont street northwest near Thirteenth street.

Texan Sltin in Dispute With Honduran Worker

(Associated Press.)

The murder of John Edward Wright, son of Lew Wright, of Alto, Tex., by a Honduran at Lerida Farm in the interior of Honduras, was reported to the State Department yesterday by the American Legation at Tegucigalpa.

The legation's report says it was the result of a personal attack and was not connected with the insurrection. The murder occurred Friday.

EQUIPOISE RUNS LAST AS ANCHORS AWEIGH WINS STAKE

1-7 Favorite Shows Dull Effort

Poor Showing Is Laid to Kidney Poisoning by Doctor.

Is Never a Factor; Soll Gills Second, Beaten a Nose.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 25. Twenty thousand spectators, who had wagered so many dollars on C. V. Whitney's Equipoise tha he was a 1-to-7 shot in the twelfth renewal of the Chesapeake Stakes, saw him finish a very poor last in the six-horse field, with the winner turning up in the Greentree Stable's Anchors Aweigh, perfectly ridden by Charlie Kurtsinger.

Equipoise ran so poorly, shownig not a lick of speed during any part of the 1 1-16 mile journey, that many expert horsemen said there was something the matter with him. This could not be verified immediately, as he was taken back to his barn right after the race.

Anchors Aweigh's victory netted Mrs. Payne Whitney, who owns the Greentree Stable, the sum of $9,950 and moved his stock up very high as regards the forthcoming Preakness and Kentucky Derby.

Dr. Henry J. McCarthy, of Baltimore, who was called over to the C. V. Whitney barn to examine Equipoise following his dull performance, had the following to say after his examination:

"Equipoise contracted a case of azoturia, which is a case of kidney poisoning. There are several cases of it here, and is brought about by change in the weather.

"When I looked over Equipoise as he left the paddock for the race, I informed a horseman that the colt was suffering from the ailment and would be unable to do himself justice, as it causes the animal to have no use of its hind legs.

"Equipoise's race proved that I was correct, but if he is rested he will be able to overcome it in a short while and be as good as ever.

"Scot Harlan, who handles the Walter M. Jeffords string, has a bad case of it in his barn. R. Pollard, a Western turfman, also has a case of azoturia in his stable.

Head Trainer T. J. Healy and Freddie Hopkins, who personally preps Equipoise, were dumfounded when seen at the Whitney barn after the race. They could not offer any excuses for the colt's poor showing, but when informed of Dr. McCarthy's statement, said that if they had had the slightest idea of the colt's illness prior to the race they would not have allowed him to leave the barn.

Levante Leads Field To First Bend.

William Zeigler, jr.'s, Levante ran the field of six around the first bend. He was still leading turning for home, where Anchors Aweigh moved to him to be on top at the eighth pole.

While the leaders were fighting it out the fans forgot the duel in their anxiety to learn what was detaining Equipoise, far back of his field. The favorite never showed any speed through the stretch, and Robertson, seeing his task a hopeless one, wisely eased him up the final sixteenth.

As Anchors Aweigh sped under the imaginary wire he was being hard pressed by the Seagram Stable's Soll Gills, with Levante third.

The start found Levante breaking on top from No. 1 lane, with Equipoise last in the field of six. Every one took it as a matter of fact that Equipoise would move to the lead

All-Marines Defeat Temple Again, 11-8

Special to The Washington Post.

Quantico, Va., April 25.—The All-Marine team made it two straight over Temple University by taking today's game, score 11 to 8. The weather was more suitable for football than the National pastime. The field was slippery and muddy causing both teams to field poorly.

The Sea Soldiers jumped into the lead in the first inning with two runs and another in the second. The University boys from Quakertown came back and forged ahead in the sixth on singles by Bonner, Ford, and Melrose, coupled with a steal by Bonner.

The Devil Dogs put on a scoring spree in their half scoring five runs on four hits, three walks, and an error by Fitch. In this inning two of the Philadelphia boys were put out of the game by Umpire Purdy for objecting to his decision.

CAPITALCITY CHAMPS IN CONTEST

Takoma Tigers Play Celtics 2 Today in Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 25.—Takoma Tigers, champions of the Washington Capital City League in 1930, will meet the St. Mary's Celtics in a twin-bill at Baggett's stadium tomorrow afternoon. The first game will begin promptly at 2 o'clock.

Director Corbett of the Celtics stated a four-game series had been scheduled with the invaders. They will return to Alexandria again on June 7 for a twin bill. To cop the D. C. titular honors, the Takoma Tigers eliminated the Dixie Pigs, in the Prince Georges County League, Anacostia Eagles, for the D. C. honors and Bauserman Motors, for the Northern Virginia championship.

Jake Powell, former Griffman, now with New Haven, in the Eastern League, is a product of the Takoma Tigers and played several games with this club after the professional baseball season had terminated. Rossiter, catcher with the team this season, left last week for Hagerstown. He will don the mask and mit for the Marylanders in league games.

The Celtics' mound selection for the tussle will be selected from Shoute Taylor, Pete Ball, Reds Weaver, Curtiss and Dreifus. Kidwell and Bowman will divide the catching post. The Takoma Tigers will probably pitch Young and Ryan in the two games, with Cy Hogarth catching.

Manager P. P. Clark, of the Del Ray Athletic Club, has scheduled the Wheaton A. C. of Maryland to meet his charges on Duncan Field at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The Red Birds won from the Bethesda Fire Fighters last Sunday. Finney Gardiner will probably be Jeff Williams' mound pick for the tussle.

The Virginia Athletic Club will meet Battery A, of Fort Myer, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on Guckert's Field. Manager Hammond stated today that Foote would pitch for the Virginians. This is the first game for this club.

Manager Theodore Beach, of the Nation-Wide Store nine wants all players to report at the Cameron Street Wharf at 11:45 o'clock tomorrow to make the boat trip to Fort Washington, Md. The Nation-Wide tossers will meet the Company L team in a contest.

Entries for C. U. Meet To Close Tomorrow

Entries for the annual Catholic University interscholastic track and field meet, scheduled next Saturday, will close tomorrow at midnight. Louis DeSantis, manager of track at Catholic University, is in charge of entries.

According to Dorsey Griffith, Catholic U. track coach and the guiding spirit in the affair, the meet promises to surpass any previous schoolboy track carnival held by the Brookland institution. This year the meet has been thrown open to all classes of high and prep schools. It formerly was restricted to Catholic schools.

Navy Lacrosse Team Routs Lafayette, 11-0

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 25.—Lafayette College lacrosse team proved easy prey for the Midshipmen twelve here today, bowing 11 to 0. The Tars rolled up a 10-to-0 edge in the first half, yet scored but once in the second half, and that in the initial minute. However, Coach George Findlayson sent many of his substitutes into action.

The Middies had an easy time at the start, Elliott and Castree scoring within the first three minutes. The Pennsylvanians' defense then held for nine minutes, but quick tallies by Moncure, Castree and Monoure twice again followed within four minutes. Then Gilbert and Moncure each tallied once, and Ferguson made two shots before the end of the half.

In the second period, O'Neill's early score was the only one made as Lafayette took to a defensive game and led by the stellar goal work of Dyson, was highly successful. Dyson blocked many well directed shots. Navy had numerous open shots and passed well, as well as flashing general improvement in their play.

Penn's Relay Runners Tie Mile Mark

25,000 See Carnival Concluded in Heavy Downpour.

Ohio State Carries Off Bulk of Honors; Coan Wins.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

FRANKLIN FIELD, Philadelphia, April 25 (A.P.).—The thirty-seventh annual Pennsylvania relay carnival closed today in a downpour of rain, a short outburst of record-breaking and a blazing brace of performances that enabled the home boys of dear old Pennsylvania to split the lion's share of racing honors with the Buckeyes of Ohio State University.

Three carnival records, including one that had survived the battle for 27 years, were knocked off, and a fourth that has resisted attack for 15 years was equaled, despite the cold and rainy weather.

For the benefit of a hardy crowd of 25,000 spectators who stuck it out to the finish, Pennsylvania's runners furnished the greatest thrills of the two days by registering a smashing victory in the 1-mile relay and then withstanding sensational bids by Cornell and Harvard to carry off the 4-mile relay championship.

Tie Ohio State For Honors.

These two triumphs for the Red and Blue shirted athletes, coached by Lawson Robertson, gave them a total of three major relay victories and a tie for honors with Frank Castleman's brilliant band of Ohio State runners. The Buckeyes, strong contenders in six of the eight big relays, won the 2-mile race today after previously lifting the quarter-mile and sprint medley titles.

Penn's flashy 1-mile quartet, composed of Carr, Edwards, Steel and Healy, raced around the rain-soaked track to beat Harvard by a good 50 yards, despite a smashing last quarter of 48.4 seconds by the Crimson anchor man, Dodge. The Quakers, leading all the way, were clocked in 3 minutes 18 seconds, thereby equaling the carnival record set in 1915 by the famous Penn team of Meredith, Lockwood, Kaufman and Lippincott.

Penn 4-Mile Team Pushed to Win.

Pennsylvania's 4-mile team, consisting of Ritchie, Dean, McKniff and Coan, also had been expected to run away with the distance classic, but barely succeeded in repelling the unexpected opposition from Cornell and the strong challenge of Harvard. They finished in that order after a stirring last mile, in which Coan, of Pennsylvania; Cobb, of Harvard, and Martin, of Cornell, matched stride for stride. Martin's challenge on the last turn and home stretch nipped Cobb and nearly cut down Coan. The trio was less than a full stride apart at the finish, with the crowd yelling frantically.

Ohio State, after lifting the 2-mile relay title, finished third to Pennsylvania and Harvard in the 1-mile relay, third to Army and Yale in the half-mile relay, and then pushed the Yale timber-toppers to a new carnival record to win the 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay race.

Two carnival records tumbled in the field events when Williams, of Hampton Institute, Virginia, hurled the javelin 197 feet 1½ inches, and Munn, of Minnesota, tossed the shot 48 feet 7⅝ inches. Munn displaced the mark that had stood since 1904 to the credit of Ralph Rose, of Michigan, at 48 feet 2 inches.

Lamb, of Lehigh, Wins Dash in Upset.

One of the biggest upsets of the final day was sprung when Morton Lamb, of Lehigh, closed with a great burst of speed in the 100-yard dash final to beat the favorite, De Armand Hutson, by a yard in the time of 10 seconds flat, that was excellent under the conditions. Hutson had romped through the preliminary heats with ease. Al Kelly, of Georgetown, was third.

Hamilton Collegiate Institute, of Canada, scored its second straight international victory by beating the best of the schoolboy talent in the 2-mile interscholastic championship. The Canadians won the interscholastic medley yesterday.

GIANTS SHOW BENEFIT OF CHANGES

M'Graw's Shifting of Lindstrom, Ott Successful.

By DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

NEW YORK, April 25 (U.P.).—Another of John McGraw's astonishing experiments apparently is proving successful, and the New York Giants promise to be an important factor in the 1931 National League pennant race.

The Giants' strength was discounted in preseason estimates because of McGraw's experiments. When McGraw announced that Freddy Lindstrom, one of the outstanding third-basemen in the game, was to be transformed into an outfielder and that Johnny Vergez, a raw recruit, was to be given the third base assignment, there was much shaking of heads by the skeptics.

But one needs only to study box scores of the Giants' games to date to realize how well the unknown Vergez and Lindstrom have justified Manager McGraw's judgment.

Lindy Seen as Star Outfielder.

Lindstrom, a natural ball player—he can do anything and do it well—gives promise of becoming one of the league's finest fly chasers. In the comparative short space of one series he learned to play balls off the tricky right field wall at the Polo Grounds—a feat that many outfielders have found impossible. Giants fans are certain Lindy will prove a worthy successor to his two worthy predecessors at the position, the brilliant Ross Young and Mel Ott.

In nine games Lindstrom made only one error in 21 fielding chances. He roamed far and wide and was as effective in catching flies as a sheet of tanglefoot. His hitting leaves little to be desired.

Vergez's fielding ability never has been questioned, but there was some doubt that he would prove capable of hitting major league hurling. These doubts have been dispelled by the Coast League rookie's performances to date. His hitting has been particularly valuable because of the fact that he does his best work in the pinches.

Shifting of Mel Ott Also a Success.

Mel Ott, the third player who was affected by McGraw's radical lineup shift, also has justified McGraw's confidence. The slugging little outfielder has fitted into the center field berth in great style. He, like Lindstrom, is a natural player and probably would do well even if McGraw put him to ushering.

With Ott, Lindstrom and Leach in the outfield, McGraw has his finest combination of recent years. The only question remaining about the Giants is the pitching, and if McGraw gets any kind of hurling the Giants should make a great fight for pennant honors.

Arlett's Homer in Tenth Wins for Phillies, 4-3

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—Clise Dudley's pitching and Buzz Arlett's big bat combined to give the Phillies a 4-to-3 victory over the Giants in ten innings today after they had battled to a twelve-inning deadlock yesterday.

Dudley went the route, holding the Giants to seven scattered hits, and Arlett came through with a lusty homer into the right field stands in the tenth to win. The former Coast batting star walked twice and doubled in his other appearances at the plate.

Johnny Vergez led the Giant attack with three blows, one a homer.

Lion Netmen Open Against Gettysburg

Special to The Washington Post.

State College, Pa., April 25.—With only two veterans from last year in the line-up, the Penn State Tennis Team will open its 1931 season here next Saturday, opposing Gettysburg College in its initial test. The two veterans who form the nucleus for this year's team are Ralph Robinson, also a varsity cross-country runner, and Glenn Thomson. Bob McKune, soccer captain-elect for next year, is ranked third on the squad, and will likely be found in the line-up against the Bullets.

A captain will be appointed for the opening match, since Paul M. Barber, of Sewickley, elected captain for this year, is no longer in college.

RED SOX WIN OVER YANKS IN 10TH

Gehrig's "Boner" as Winning Run Scores Decides Game.

FENWAY PARK, Boston, Mass., April 25 (U.P.).—While Lou Gehrig was attempting to tag out Ruel in the tenth inning today, Pickering scored from third and the New York Yankees dropped the final game of the series to the Boston Red Sox. The score was 5 to 4.

Both teams tallied twice in the opening inning. The Red Sox scored a run in the seventh and another in the next frame. The Yanks scored a run in the eighth and tied the score in the ninth when Lazzeri flied out to Webb and Lary scored after the catch.

Pickering Starts Rally.

With one out in the tenth, Pickering singled and went to third when Reeves doubled off the boards in center. Ruel was purposely passed, filling the bases. Marquardt batted for MacFayden and hit to Lary, who threw to Gehrig and the batter was out. Then Gehrig ran after Ruel, but Pickering scored from third with the winning run.

The defeat ended a four-game winning streak of the Yankees.

Cubs Rally in Ninth To Beat Pirates, 8-3

Pittsburgh, April 25 (A.P.).—Pittsburgh went into the ninth inning of the game with Chicago today sporting a one-run lead, and the Cubs emerged with a five-run margin and the game, 8 to 3. It was the fifth time the Chicagoans had defeated the Pirates in six games this year.

Hornsby, who made three home runs in yesterday's game, and English were the big guns in this afternoon's victory. Each made four hits.

Brown Yields Only 5 Hits But Walks Are Undoing.

Foxx's Fly Decisive; Walberg Holds Nats to 6 Safeties.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—Like the cow which gives a good bucket of milk and then kicks it over, Lloyd Brown weakened just enough in the ninth to allow the Mackmen to break a tie and defeat the Nations, 3 to 2. Brown allowed but five hits during the game, but after having not granted a walk in twenty previous frames, issued three today and two figured in runs by the Athletics.

Twice the Nats had a one-run lead. A home run by Al Simmons—his third of the season, all against Washington pitchers—tied things up once, and a hit following a walk deadlocked the score again after the Nats had stepped in the van.

One was out in the ninth when Cochrane singled. On Simmons' tap, which got past Judge, Myer made a good stop and could have made the out at first, but Brown had become stuck in the mud in the pitcher's box and failed to cover the base.

Walk to Miller Fills Bases.

When Miller walked the bases were filled and Jimmy Foxx then hit for Todt. He flied to deep center and the ball game was over when Cochrane easily scored after the catch.

George (Rube) Walberg hurled for the Athletics and he managed to keep the six Washington hits fairly well scattered, although two came in each of the Nats' scoring frames. The loss dropped the Nats into a tie for third place with the Mackmen and gave the latter a one-game edge in the seven games played between the two to date. It was their third straight victory here.

Rain was in the offing, causing the game to be started earlier than scheduled and keeping the crowd, usually large on Saturdays, down to about 9,000. Most of the game was played in a drizzle and it started raining again just after play was discontinued.

Nats Assume 2-1 Lead.

When five innings were completed, marking it a legal game and assuring both clubs the money paid in by the fans, who rated their baseball ahead of their health, the Nationals were out in front by the slim margin of one run, 2 to 1. Over this stretch, Brown had quite an edge over Walberg, having granted but two hits as against five credited to the Nats.

A walk to Manush was put to no good use in the first, but in the second the Nats scored a run. After Judge had fanned, Harry Rice doubled to right and Bluege immediately scored him with a one-base liner to left. Brown later walked in this frame but Walberg managed to prevent further scoring.

In the home half of the same frame, Simmons, first up, quickly knotted the count. He worked the count to three and two, forcing Brown to groove one, and then slammed a home run into the upper stands in left.

Bluege Triples In Fourth.

A scratch hit by Cronin was wasted in the third and then the Nationals stepped in front again. With two out in the next round, Bluege tripled against the base of the stands near the foul line in left and Spencer, who has been hitting hard and timely, propelled him over with a clean one-base drive to left center.

Brown issued his second pass in 22 innings in the sixth, Bishop drawing it with one down, and this was

YANKS START SERIES HERE TODAY

Marberry - Pennock Likely Mound Foes in Opener.

Special to The Washington Post.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—Immediately after today's series final here with the Athletics, Manager Walter Johnson and his charges hustled to the station for a train to Washington where they open a four-game series with the Ruthless Yankees tomorrow afternoon. Babe Ruth will not be on hand, but Manager "Marse Joe" McCarthy will have all the rest of his battering crew available to make things hot for the Nationals.

The veteran southpaw, Herb Pennock, who has heard his swan song by others more than once in recent years, is expected to do the flinging for the Yankees and this means that the Nats must have their hitting eyes properly attuned if they hope to come out on top, for the aged southpaw already has turned in two victories this season and has shown that he is just about as good as ever.

Marberry Choice Of Johnson.

Opposed to Pennock on the hill will be Fred Marberry. The big Texan was not impressive against the Mackmen here Friday when he did a relief turn for Sam Jones, but he has done well in his other starts including a well-deserved victory over the Red Sox in which he went the route in fine style. He has appeared in three relief roles.

Judging from the manner in which the Yankees have been winning so far and from reports of the Philadelphia players, the Yankees have been underestimated in the advance pennant dope. McCarthy, according to the Athletics, has a crew of fence-busters, a fair fielding team, and, unless his mound staff has been performing better than it knows how, a stronger pitching corps than was anticipated by any of the so-called experts.

All of which means that the Mackmen and Nationals, who calmly conceded the race to the one which beat out the other, may have to revise their estimates of what they are up

Hoyt Stops Browns As Tigers Win, 3 to 1

Detroit, April 25 (A.P.).—Detroit made it three in a row over St. Louis by taking the series final here today, 3 to 1. A two-run rally with the score tide at 1-all in the eighth inning proved sufficient to win the game for Detroit. Hoyt held the Browns to five hits while Detroit was collecting six off Coffman. One of the Detroit hits was a home run by Alexander in the third inning. Gehringer's double in the eighth featured the winning rally.

Brandt Hurls Braves To Win Over Brooklyn

Brooklyn, April 25 (A.P.).—Knocking Hollis Thurston out of the box in the first inning and scoring three more off Mattingly in the fifth, the Boston Braves made it two out of three from the Robins today, 5 to 4.

Ed Brandt, crack southpaw, held the Robins to seven hits, including a homer by Babe Herman, in scoring his third straight victory. He fanned Herman in the seventh inning with the tying run on base.

EQUIPOISE RUNS LAST IN $10,000 GRAW FEATURE

Severe Upset Occurs in Stake

Anchors Aweigh Wins Chesapeake by Nose Margin.

Soll Gillis Is Second, Levante Third in Turf Surprise.

after it straightened out on the back stretch, but when they raced by the half-mile pole with Levante, Anchors Aweigh, Great Gun and Sol Gills still fighting for the lead and Equipoise more than a dozen lengths away, the fans who had wagered thousands of dollars on the colt started worrying.

Whip Brings No Response.

Leaving the back lane, Robertson drew his whip and lashed Equipoise several times, but even this failed to arouse his mount.

There was a general bunching up as the field swung for home, but it failed to find Equipoise among the leaders. At the eighth pole Equipoise was so far back that Robertson, seeing his task a hopeless one, did not punish his mount.

Sensing that their idol was beaten, the fans turned their attention to the stirring duel being waged between Anchors Aweigh and Sol Gills, but Jimmie Rowe's charge proved the gamer to win by a nose on the wire.

Ruban Rouge Scores In Opener.

The sport opened auspiciously for form players when George C. Brenton's Ruban Rouge, a 12-year-old, raced 1½ miles in 2:37 to pay $4.10.

The Negro rider, R. Simpson, who has been treated quite roughly in recent races, kept Ruban Rouge out of all early trouble and, after going a mile, took the overland route to be second to Nettie Belle as the field left the back stretch.

Swinging for home, Simpson let Ruban Rouge step right along and the veteran soon took the lead to win as his rider pleased. Ping Coates and Daddy Nelson also came again in the stretch to be second and third, respectively.

John Robert stumbled at the break and tossed Jockey W. Day. The lad was injured, while the horse followed his field throughout the race.

Widener's Evening Wins Sprint.

George D. Widener's Evening stamped herself a nice filly when she won the Glengar, a 4½-furlong sprint, in 0:54 1-5.

Pink tried to outrun the field of fifteen from the break, but Eaby sent Evening right along with her, and at the stretch turn the ultimate winner moved to the lead, never to relinquish it.

Although leg-weary in the final sixteenth, Pink had enough left to save the place from Surf Bather.

The Greenwich Handicap, like the Glengar, fell to George D. Widener, whose Panetian raced the 6 furlongs in 1:12 2-5 to lead home William Zeigler, jr.'s, Barrido, with the Nevada Stock Farm's Siskin third.

Panetian's score also marked a double for Trainer W. F. Mulholland and Jockey Jason Eaby. Eaby rode a well-judged race. He allowed Siskin, Sir James and Barrido to race themselves into defeat the first half, when he came around his field to win as his rider pleased.

William T. Fourth Choice to Win.

The Dixie Trial, secondary feature, at one and one-sixteenth miles, found the fourth consecutive favorite winning, when W. E. Caskey, jr.'s, William T. led home the Lemar Stock Farm's Morsel, with Mrs. K. E. Hitt's Sunvir third.

Morsel cut out a fast early pace, but when the field swung for home Robertson moved to the lead with William T. to win as he desired.

It was Robertson's fourteenth victory of the meeting and enabled him to carry off a $500 purse offered to the leading winning rider by General Manager Edward Burke, of the Harford Agricultural and Breeders Association.

Equipoise Derby Odds Rise After Poor Chesapeake Race

Whitney Star Now Cofavorite With Twenty Grand at 5 to 1; Surf Board Held at 15-1 After N. Y. Victory.

By THOMAS H. NOONE
(United Press Racing Editor).

NEW YORK April 25 (U.P.).—Cornelius V. Whitney's Equipoise, which ruled first choice in future wagering on the Kentucky Derby, to be run three weeks hence, now shares favoritism with the Greentree Stable's Twenty Grand, due to his poor showing in the Chesapeake Stakes at Havre de Grace today. Both are now quoted at 5 to 1 by Tom Shaw, prominent clubhouse commissioner.

Anchors Aweigh, winner of today's contest in which Equipoise failed so dismally, has been dropped from 40 to 1 to 25 to 1. A. C. Bostwick's Mate remains at his former price of 8 to 1, while Griffin Watkin's Insco has been dropped to 10 to 1.

Surf Board, stablemate of Twenty Grand and Anchors Aweigh, has been dropped from 20 to 15 to 1 by virtue of his remarkable victory in the Kings County Handicap at Jamaica today. Despite the poor showing of Sweep All at Lexington Friday, Shaw has cut Charles T. Fisher's nominee from 30 to 25 to 1.

E. R. Bradley's Barometer and B'ar Hunter have been lowered from 60 to 30, while the Shady Brook Farm's Pittsburgher has taken a 20-point drop to 40.

Shaw does not believe that Spanish Play, winner of the Louisiana Derby and runner-up in the Florida Derby, to be on a par with the leading contenders, and rates the Kentucky colt a 60-to-1 chance.

Don Leon, Boys Howdy, High Day, Ormesby, Phantom Star and Polydorus are also offered at 60 to 1, with few supporters.

The following quotations being offered by Shaw are regarded as a definite line on the almost certain starters in the historical Derby at Churchill Downs on May 16:

Horse.	Straight.	Place.	Show.
Equipoise	5-1	5-2	7-5
Twenty Grand	5-1	5-2	7-5
Mate	8-1	4-1	2-1
Insco	10-1	5-1	5-2
Surf Board	15-1	7-1	4-1
Sweep All	25-1	12-1	6-1
Anchors Aweigh	25-1	12-1	6-1
Barometer	30-1	15-1	8-1
Bar Hunter	30-1	15-1	8-1
Sun Meadows	30-1	15-1	8-1
Siskin	40-1	20-1	10-1
Pittsburgher	40-1	20-1	10-1

Others of 126 eligibles are quoted at 100 to 1 and upward.

Grid Success Not Aid To Colleges, Says Wade

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 25 (A.P.).—Wallace Wade, whose football teams at Alabama twice won Rose Bowl honors, today said he did not believe a championship team increased either the enrollment or the endowment of a university.

Wade, now director of athletics at Duke University, was addressing the American College Publicity Association at the University of North Carolina here.

"It seems to me," Wade said, "that the experience of institutions all over the country shows the way to increase student enrollment and endowment is to raise academic standards, improve equipment and secure better teachers."

Penn State's Teams Play on Foreign Fields

State College, Pa., April 25.—Penn State's baseball, lacrosse and golf teams will be in action on foreign fields next week, with each team scheduled for two-game trips. The lacrosse and golf teams will be opening their 1931 seasons; the baseball team has already played four games.

The baseball team will invade New York State for games with Syracuse and Colgate, playing at Syracuse Friday and Colgate at Hamilton, N. Y., the following day.

MARYLAND'S HUNT CUP TO SOISSONS

Six Others Fall as 10,000 See 38th Running.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 25.—Flying the 22 fences that not one of the other six starters topped with impunity, Soissons, a 6-to-1 shot from Boston, romped home an easy winner in the thirty-eighth annual running of the Maryland Hunt Cup race in the Worthington Valley this afternoon.

Brose Hover, the favorite, owned by Benjamin Leslie Behr, of Chicago, fell at the second fence, but resumed, and was the only other horse to finish. As he fell, so fell Mr. Behr's hopes of winning permanent possession this year of the Ross W. Whistler Challenge Cup, on which he had gained two of the three necessary legs by victories in 1925 with Burgoright, and last year with Brose Hover.

Soissons, victor in America's greatest annual timber race, is an 8-year-old brown gelding owned by Sumner Pingre, of Boston. While winning for his owner his first Maryland Hunt Cup, Soissons, ridden by Jack T. Skinner, of Middleburg, Va., wore on his blinkers a black flying horse on a silver shield, an emblem adapted from the house flag that flew from Pingree ships 200 years ago.

Leaves Trail of Fallen Horses.

Behind him he left a trail of fallen horses, vanquished by the stiffest series of post and rail fences on any steeplechase course in this country.

Howard Bruce's Virginia's Choice, ridden by J. Rieman McIntosh, fell at the second and fourteenth fences. In the second fall, Virginia's Choice's rider received a broken collarbone.

Frank A. Bonsal, jr., riding Charles L. A. Heiser's 14-year-old Bon Master, twice a victor in the Maryland Hunt Cup (1927 and 1928), fell at the eighteenth fence and was stunned momentarily. His fall erased Mr. Heiser's hopes of permanent possession of the Whistler Cup, first offered in 1913. Only Mr. Heiser and Mr. Behr have two legs on the trophy.

Ten Thousand See Race.

Ten thousand persons, from every State east of the Mississippi, watched Soissons gallop over the 4-mile course in 9 minutes 9 seconds flat to finish 19 2-5 seconds ahead of Brose Hover, ridden by Crawford Burton, who had piloted Mr. Behr's horse over the same course a year before in the record time of 8:53 4-5.

There were only seven starters, eleven of the entries being scratched.

Howard Bruce's Hubar was eliminated when he fell at the third obstacle, while the twentieth fence put out of the running the two leaders at this stage—the Mill Creek Stable's Sea Soldier and W. W. Lanahan's Reel Foot. Both tumbled after hitting the obstacle and were not able to resume running.

San Francisco, April 25 (A.P.).—Max Baer, California heavyweight, today was denied a permit by the State Athletic Commission. He has been on the "Undesirable list" since the death last August of Frankie Campbell, a ring opponent.

THERE IS REAL POWER IN NAVY SHELL THIS YEAR

The Navy varsity eight under the guidance of old Dick Glendon looms as a menace on the water this year. There is real power in the crew, which includes four veterans. Not a man is under 6 feet and all except one are taller. Here they are during a workout, left to right—Robert Fulton, coxswain; Howard Shelton, stroke; Paul Schoeni, captain; Kenneth Hartley, Jack Phillips, Howard Anderson, Al Gray, Ray Hunter and Ed Steffanides, bow.

Tannery Is Winner In Lexington Feature

Lexington, Ky., April 25 (A.P.).—E. F. Prichard's Tannery again scouted the old legend that horses with unsound knees can not win over the "hill" at the local track when he outgamed George Collins' Thistle Fyrn in the twenty-second renewal of the Camden handicap for his second stakes victory of the current meeting. The chestnut son of Ballot—Blemished was much easier victor in the Ben Ali handicap opening day feature. C. C. Van Meter's Joey Bibb was third in today's feature.

But six contested the issue, Patricia Marian and Murky Cloud being late withdrawals.

Tannery covered the mile and 70 yards in 1:43 4-5. This time was not considered any too impressive as Pittsburgher, a 3-year-old, outstripped it by a fifth of a second Friday.

Tannery was an odds-on choice with the talent, rewarding at $3.54 for each $2 to win and $2.68 to place. The Collins entry, second in demand, paid $2.80 to place. There was no show betting.

Benny Friedman, Grid Star, Becomes Broker

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—Benny Friedman, former back field star at the University of Michigan and present professional player and back field coach at Yale University, is now a broker on the New York Curb Exchange.

Announcement was made today of the formation of a brokerage house, to be known as Louis F. Fecheimer & Co., with Friedman as a full partner. He has been working in Wall street since his graduation from Michigan in 1927.

Gar Wood Postpones Trial Due to Wind

Miami Beach, Fla., April 25 (A.P.).—Strong breezes today caused Gar Wood to postpone until Monday his attempt to wrest the world's speed boat crown from Kaye Don, of England.

Wood arrived here early this morning from New York to renew attempts to beat Don's record of 103.49 miles an hour. He went immediately to his home on Indian Creek and ordered his mechanics to prepare his boat, the Miss America IX, for the trials.

While waiting for the tide a breeze blew in from the ocean and ruffled up the waters in Indian Creek to such an extent that he announced he would wait until Monday with hope conditions would be more favorable.

Va. Rivers Replenished With Government Fish

Fredericksburg, Va., April 25.—Four hundred thousand yellow and ring perch from the Government fish hatchery at Fort Humphreys have been received by game wardens here for liberation in Spotsylvania and Stafford County streams for restocking purposes. The tiny fish hardly visible to the eye, arrived here in ten 40-gallon cans, each can containing 10,000. Most of the fish will be released in the Matt, Ti, Po and Ni Rivers in Spotsylvania County and Potomac Creek in Stafford. Thousands also will be loosed in privately owned streams and ponds. The drought last year killed off millions of fish in nearby streams, which the Government hopes to rehabilitate by liberating aditional game fish.

WORKMAN TO HAVE MOUNT TOMORROW

Ladder Shows Form in Tryouts for Preakness.

Special to The Washington Post.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Md., April 25.—Raymond Workman, of Washington, will resume riding Monday at Pimlico. He will be astride Equipoise in both the Preakness and Kentucky Derby, according to a statement made today by Trainer Hopkins.

Walter J. Salmon's Ladder is coming along fast for his Preakness engagement. The colt worked a mile in 1.41 3-5 this morning, while his stablemate, Mad Career, turned a half in 48 2-5.

There will be a scarcity of race riders during the Pimlico session, due to many of the boys leaving for Ohio, New York and Kentucky

There have been a dozen claims at this meeting, with W. J. Potter making the latest when he lifted Bosky for $2,000.

F. C. Brant is shipping San Presto and others of his horses to Kentucky.

Bosky is the latest addition to the schooling list. There are 20 bad actors slated to be carried from here to Pimlico.

Elmer Trueman shipped 28 horses he has in training to Pimlico today.

Jockeys F. C. Smith and J. Serio were restored to good standing today.

Night Grid Game Listed By North Carolina State

Raleigh, N. C., April 25 (A.P.).—A night game with an intersectional foe will be included in John "Clipper" Smith's first gridiron schedule at North Carolina State College.

Using the Rockne system, Smith, a product of Notre Dame, has extended spring training unusually late this year, and has added Catholic University of Washington, D. C., to the schedule for a night game here next fall.

A total of eight games will be played. Smith was elected coach here last fall after the close of the football season.

Surf Board Winner In Jamaica Feature

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., April 25 (A.P.).—Over a good track that was drying out fast, Surf Board, handsome colt from the Greentree Stable, raced to a scintillating triumph in his mile and a sixteenth Kings County Handicap and boosted considerably his stock as a Preakness and Derby candidate here today. The colt conceded weight by the scale to older horses and ran the distance in 1:45 2-5.

The first disqualification of the new season materialized when Reveille Boy, American Derby winner last year, was set back after finishing second, three-parts of a length off the winner. Jockey J Gwynne blocked Mokatam in the stretch and was suspended for five days by the stewards. With J A. Best's colorbearer removed, Mokatam, which finished a half length back, was awarded the place position. W. R. Coe's Maya was placed third. He crossed the line eight lengths back of Mokatam. Surf Board was a 2 to 5 favorite.

Virginia to Be Host To 500 Boy Track Stars

Charlottesville, Va., April 25—On May 1 and 2 the University of Virginia will act as host to more than 500 high and preparatory school pupils who will participate in the annual literary, track and tennis contests sponsored by the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League. The extension department of the university is making a determined effort to make the events this year the most successful in the history of the league.

Last year 335 boys took part in the track and field events and 35 in the tennis matches. From the viewpoint of records that meet was the most favorable ever held. Sixteen track and field records were broken, two of which had stood since 1916, and two other State records were tied. From reports coming in competition is going to be strong again this year. With the advantages offered by the Lady Astor Courts exhibitions of flashy tennis are expected.

Special entertainment in the form of trips to interesting and historic spots about the campus and city, receptions, dances and musical programs is always provided for the pleasure of the visitors.

POLO SEASON HERE OPENS TUESDAY

Matches to Be Staged Thrice Weekly; Two Tourneys in June.

FLASHING mallets and galloping ponies will again gladden the eyes of polo fans Tuesday when the annual polo season opens, weather permitting, on the Potomac Park field. From then until early October matches will be played every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. On Tuesday and Thursday play will start at 4:30 o'clock and on Saturday at 3 o'clock.

Complete arrangements for the season have not been made but it is already definitely settled that squads from the War Department and Fort Myer will figure in two tournaments in June. On June 1 a tournament will be conducted by the Sixth Field Artillery in Baltimore, and on June 15 the annual War Department Polo Association's tourney will be held here.

Fort Myer Soldiers Train Ponies.

For the past few weeks soldiers at Fort Myer have been busy training the ponies for the coming season. A few new horses have been added to the string and these with the old favorites that have cavorted before the thousands of polo devotees assures fast matches this season. New sideboards have been placed around the Potomac Park oval.

Col. Chaffee, a familiar and popular figure on the War Department White four, will not be seen here this season as he has been transferred to another post. Aside from being a flashy performer on the field Col. Chaffee was a guiding spirit in the promotion of the sport here.

HITTING OF NATS IS WEAK

Manush, Rice, Judge in Slumps

Johnson Pleased That Club Wins Despite Their Failure.

Spencer Batting Hero of Early-Season Contests.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Post Staff Correspondent.)

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—A notable feature of the Nationals' start in the current pennant race is the fact that the big bats of the veterans Heinie Manush, Sam Rice and Joe Judge have been practically silent. The advance dope naturally was based on this trio doing its share in the Washington attack and it is quite remarkable that the club has carried on as successfully as it has with these athletes not doing their bit.

While admitting that he has been somewhat disappointed at the failure of these three spark-plugs to get going, Manager Walter Johnson also is cheered by the fact that his club has broken even without them hitting at their natural gait.

"It just goes to show," the Nat leader remarked, "that we're a better club than many thought we would be. If we can carry on with little help from Manush, S. Rice and Judge, it stands to reason that we'll be mighty hard to beat when these three reach their batting stride. And don't think that these boys won't start getting their hits soon."

Trio of Natural Hitters.

Any one who has been following baseball knows that Johnson is right with respect to Messrs. Manush, Rice and Judge being natural hitters. All are good for better than .300 for the season and, no matter how slowly they start, they always manage to catch up before the finish. The only one who has an excuse for his poor start this season is Manush. He has been bothered with an upset stomach ever since the schedule opened, and this, no doubt, has affected his work.

Last year, all three of these players were off to a good start. Manush, a hold-out with the Browns, got away well, despite the fact that he was late in reporting, while Washington fans remember what Rice and Judge did. Until the halfway mark had been reached last year these two were frequently among the league's leading five hitters, with each topping the circuit on at least one occasion, and as all boast all-time stick marks of well over .300, there is no question but what they will be hitting in their real form before long.

As a matter of fact, all three of these veterans are showing signs of recovering their batting eyes. In the first few games, Manush looked particularly bad at bat, but he has been hitting much harder of late and indications are that he is likely to start "hitting them where they ain't" any day now.

Rice, Judge Hitting In Hard Luck.

Regarding Rice and Judge, they have been hitting the ball fairly hard but have been unfortunate in sending too many drives directly in the waiting hands of alien fielders. They, too, should start "busting loose" soon.

Where the Nationals have gotten a "break" is that, while the three on which they were counting so strongly have failed to come through, Catcher Roy Spencer, of whom not much was expected, has been looking like the best hitter in the world. And the beauty of Roy's bingles has been in their timeliness, for he has proved the most dangerous man on the Nats' team in the pinches.

Spencer batted less than his weight in 1929, his first season with the Washington club, picked up about 10 points on his average last year, and, after looking quite weak in the exhibition games down South, suddenly has developed into a mighty sweet looking hitter. As a matter of fact, Roy has been banging the ball so consistently to all fields that Manager Johnson now regards him as a real hitter, and is looking for him to add considerable strength to the lower part of the batting order over the balance of the route.

Harry Rice Pleases Johnson.

Johnson also is pleased with the manner in which Harry Rice has stepped in to fill Sammy West's shoes. "Harry's work both afield and at bat has proved to be exceptional," said Walter, "and I don't know of a player we could have picked up who could have filled the bill as he has done. His bat has helped us, too, while some of those we have counted upon heavily have failed."

Joe Cronin has been getting a few hits, but he, too, figures to do better. Buddy Myer was off to a slow start, but seems to have struck his gait, while Ossie Bluege, never a great hitter, has contributed a number of hard and timely pokes and probably is doing as well as expected of him. He is rated on his defensive work rather than on his attacking strength and does not figure to hit much better than .280 for the season.

So, followers of the Nats can figure that, if the Washington Club can win its share of games with Manush, Sam Rice and Judge way below their batting form, and with Cronin not quite up to his average, Johnson will have quite a club with a mighty bright future as soon as these four players hit their stride, which they are bound to do unless the heretofore undisputable law of averages is all wrong.

YANKEES AND NATS OPEN SERIES TODAY against in the current flag race, with the Yankees to be rated as a "dangerous third party."

Macks-Nats Game Starts Early.

Because of rain just in the offing and in the hope of getting at least a legal game completed before the clouds started emptying, today's game got under way twelve minutes before scheduled time.

A fair fan sitting near the Washington dugout was painfully injured in the first inning when hit in the face by a foul drive from Joe Cronin's bat.

Al Simmons seems to like the brand of pitching served up by Washington hurlers, as all three of his homers this season have been made while playing against the Nats. His first was off Crowder, in Washington. He poled out one yesterday off Jones, while in the second frame today he was credited with one off Brown. If the Nat flingers can not keep the ball out of Al's alley, it might be better for them to walk him every time he comes up, especially here, where the park is small.

Cronin was credited with one of the cheapest hits on record here today. In the third, he sent a high pop just back of the pitcher. The whole infield closed in on it and then pulled a neat "Alphonse and Gaston act," all stepping aside and letting the ball drop safely in the middle of their circle.

When Brown walked Walberg in the third, it marked the first pass he had issued in the 20 innings he had pitched this season—quite a stunt for a pitcher who only a year or so ago was as wild as the proverbial March hare.

Spencer, usually reliable on foul flies, was charged with an error when he missed one off Todt's bat in the fifth. No harm was done, however, for a fly to Harry Rice followed.

ATHLETICS TRIUMPH AS BROWN WEAKENS

turned into a run which tied the string at 2-all when followed by Haas' useful out and Cochrane's single to center. The latter was so pleased with himself at his hit that he wandered too far off first and a snap peg by Spencer nipped him before he could hustle back to the sack.

Bluege Walks, Is Out Stealing.

The lead-off men for both teams coaxed walks in the seventh. Bluege on four successive balls. He later was a double-play victim, being caught stealing as Brown fanned. Simmons, too, would have figured in a twin-killing, for Miller, next up shot a hard bounder to Myer who got the ball to Cronin in plenty of time, but the wet ball slipped from his hand as he was tossing to Judge for the second out and the hitter continued on to second. A good catch by Sam Rice prevented the A's from cashing in on this "break."

Myer opened the eighth with a single to right and, after S. Rice's intended sacrifice resulted in a pop to Bishop, he tried to steal and was the third victim of Cochrane's arm today

Then came a short lull until the home ninth rolled around when the Mackmen, who specialize in giving thrills in this frame, tucked away the verdict.

Babe Ruth Improves, Leaves Hospital Today

Boston, April 25 (A.P.).—"Babe" Ruth, New York Yankees' slugger, who was injured in a game with the Boston Red Sox a few days ago, is "making excellent progress" along the road to recovery, Dr. Francis Newton announced today. He probably will leave the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital tomorrow.

MARYLAND U. WINS 2 GAMES, TAKES LEAGUE LEAD

Virginia Poly Is Defeated, 9-4, 14-7

Darkness Halts 2d Game in 6th as Old Liners Take Lead.

McIlwee Triumphs in Opener; Final Game Is Slugfest.

UNIVERSITY of Maryland gained first place in the Tri-State league of the Southern Conference by handing Virginia Polytechnic Institute a double defeat, 9 to 4 and 14 to 7 at College Park yesterday. The second contest was called at the end of the sixth inning on account of darkness.

Prior to today, V. P. I. had won three games in as many starts in league play. The two losses dropped the visitors to a second place tie with North Carolina. The Terrapins have won six contests against three setbacks.

In the first game, Bill McIlwee, Old Line portsider, hurled cleverly to register a verdict over Reggie Mapp, V. P. I. star flinger. McIlwee allowed six hits and passed as many, but bore down with men on bases. Mapp was touched for eight bingles and walked six.

Old Liners Combine Hits With Passes.

The Old Liners combined hits with passes to gain their victory in the second game. Maryland used three hurlers, Batson, Hauver and Milburn, while the visitors used Land and Billingsly on the firing line. Only Milburn pitched effectively.

Mapp and McIlwee engaged in a pretty hurling duel for the first five innings of the first game at end of which the Terrapins were leading 4 to 2.

Maryland clinched the decision in the sixth frame when it counted four markers on singles by Berger and Derr, passes to Maxwell and Cronin, Bibbs' error, a passed ball and stolen base.

V. P. I. gained a four-run lead in the first inning of the second game on hits by Anderson, Nicholas and Palmer, walks to Bibb and Sutton, and Chalmers' error.

The Old Liners overtook the visitors in the second, counting six runs. Three walks, two errors, a single and Berger's home run turned the trick.

The visitors tied the score in the third, but the Old Liners again forged ahead in their half, counting two runs, and thereafter were never overtaken.

Nicholas, V. P. I. shortstop, was the leading batter, with three safeties in as many attempts.

Maryland Lacrosse Team Beats Syracuse

Special to The Washington Post.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 25.—Led by fleet Eddie Ronkin, Maryland today handed Syracuse the most complete drubbing it has ever received here in lacrosse, downing the Orange 12 to 2, in Archbold Stadium. A small crowd braved cold winds to see the Old Liners riddle the slow-moving Orange team.

Ronkin scored three goals, the first less than two minutes after the start. His next two, early in the second half, turned the affair into a rout with Syracuse consistently outflanked by the quick-breaking Maryland attack that followed each face-off. The Orange did not score until the last 10 minutes. Syracuse, all told, had only five shots at the net while Maryland took 33.

Massachusetts Tech Trails From Start at Annapolis.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 25.—A Naval Academy crew with plenty of power found itself today and cruised the Massachusetts Institute of Technology eight by two full lengths over the Henley distance on the Severn River. Navy's time was 7 minutes 10 2-5 seconds, while M. I. T. mark was 7 minutes and 18 secondts.

Almost left at the post, the Tar varsity bladesmen trailed by a full length after the first ¼ of a mile. It was then that Stroke Howard Shelton raised his from 34 to 36 per minute, and when half of the course of a mile and five-sixteenths had been covered the two shells were rowing on even terms.

Then, it was that the Navy boat load showed its real power and ability. Stroke by stroke it pulled away from the Engineers. Tech extended its beat to 37, but the Middies refused to be challenged and gradually forged ahead. After a mile there was open water and at the finish the Navy was racing along at its best clip of the season, a terrific stroke of 40. But at the same time well spaced.

Midshipmen Rally To Cause.

The fact that Coach Bill Haines, of the Engineers, had taken the lead seemed to fill the Midshipmen eight of old Dick Glendon with fire, and their exhibition today against a surprisingly strong and game New England opponent was one of the best in recent years.

The Middies and Engineers split even in the other two brushes preliminary to the varsity setto. The Midshipmen 150-pounders won by a length and a half under almost perfect conditions other than a slight wind on their backs. As was the case in all three races the visitors assumed a lead in the light-weight event, but were unable to retain it. The light-weight crews hit about 33 throughout a major portion of the pull, but better spacing was decisive for the Middies. The wininng time was 7 minutes 27 seconds.

Varied Card of 18 Events Faces Colleges This Week

9 Tennis Matches to Feature Program of Spring Sports.

THE hot pace at which local collegiate athletes pursued their sports last week continues this week in a program calling for 18 contests in baseball, tennis, lacrosse, track and golf. Something in the way of action is scheduled for every day, with Saturday listed as the banner day when Maryland holds its annual spring carnival at College Park.

Every Maryland varsity spring sports aggregation will swing into competition Saturday. The baseball team meets West Virginia, the racqueters play William and Mary, the track team engages Navy and Virginia in a triangular meet, and the lacrosse men oppose Penn State.

This gigantic program will get under way at 1 o'clock with the start of the track and field games, at which time also will be held the annual Maryland interscholastic track meet, the two events running concurrently. At 2 o'clock the baseball and tennis contests commence, while at 4:30 the lacrosse tilt opens. Only one admission charge will be made for the entire program.

Tennis Dominates Week's Card.

Tennis is the sport dominating the week's card in point of matches scheduled. No less than nine clashes on the courts are to be played with every local college net team participating.

The Hampden-Sidney College tennis team appears here three times, beginning tomorrow, when Georgetown will be the host team at Columbia Country Club. On Tuesday the invaders will meet George Washington, and on Wednesday Maryland. The racqueters of Pittsburgh University come to town later in the week to oppose George Washington, Thursday, and Georgetown the following day. American University's net squad sees action on Friday, entertaining Loyola of Baltimore on the A. U courts.

Four baseball games involving Georgetown and Maryland are listed with West Virginia University, providing the opposition in two of them. The Mountaineers tackle Georgetown on Friday on the Hilltop diamond and visit Maryland the next day.

Maryland's nine swings into action tomorrow against North Carolina State at College Park. This is the second meeting of these Tri-State League clubs. The invading team scored a decisive triumph over the Old Line three weeks ago at Raleigh, N. C., and Maryland is eager to square accounts.

Temple University's tossers, usually one of the strongest college baseball outfits in the East, are to battle Georgetown on Tuesday at the Hilltop. The Blue and Gray must win this game to keep its winning percentage above the .500 mark.

Golf and track bid for interest during the week-end. Beside Maryland's triangular meet at College Park, there will be a clash between the thinclads of Catholic University and Johns Hopkins at Baltimore on Saturday. Georgetown's golf team opens its intercollegiate league schedule in matches with Princeton Friday and Pennsylvania Saturday, both at Philadelphia.

TECH MEETS EASTERN ON TUESDAY

Game Ends First Half of High School Ball Series.

STANDING OF TEAMS.

	Won.	Lost	Pct.
Central	2	0	1.000
Eastern	1	0	1.000
Tech	0	1	.000
Business	0	1	.000
Western	0	1	.000

RESULTS TO DATE.

Central, 9; Tech, 4.
Eastern, 17; Business, 11.
Central, 12; Western, 4.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

THE half-way mark in the high school baseball series — that much maligned form of scholastic endeavor—will be reached Tuesday at Eastern Field when Eastern, several more degrees than hot favorite to retain its oft-won championship, meets Tech, beginning at 3:30 o'clock. The other series game of the week brings together two almost sure also rans in Western and Business. This business will be attended to Friday at the same time and place.

High school baseball has merits which many of the cynically-minded have overlooked. For instance, there is always the feeling that anything can happen during the progress of the eighteen hectic innings the schools combine to hand the public each week. "Anything" runs from a home run on such length and vigor that it might well go for a home run at Griffith Park, and errors of the sort which would bring a spanking to an 18-month-old foundling.

Lanahan and Buscher Are Mound Stars.

The series to date has produced baseball of good caliber every now and then. Dick Lanahan has shown better form than ever for Eastern on the hill, while a new star seems to be rising on the horizon in Emmett Buscher, of Central. Both have turned in admirable pitching performances albeit support of the collander type.

Flynn, of Business, is an outfielder who doesn't miss, and that's no idle boast. Snyder, Eastern's peppy catcher, is peppier and more expert than ever. Everett Russell is much bigger and stronger than he was last year, and during his stay in the box against Central, struck out the five men who faced him. "Snitz" Nau, also of Tech, playing his first game in the major league of local scholastic ball, is both a good hitter and a better outfielder.

The series, as young and tender as it still is, has already produced a player who is to the series what Dallas Shirley was to the basket ball series. This is Tony Mastomarino, Business catcher, who irks the fans no end by his pleasant habit of out-glaring umpire Watt and calling the opposing players things of an unprintable sort.

Central should be the team to beat Eastern, assuming that Eastern is going to be beaten. These two hook up on May 6. Give Central a little more punch at bat and anything is liable to happen. Eastern is taking things pretty easy this year, and would be great meat for an upset.

Baltimore Poly 5-to-4 Winner Over Western

Baltimore, Md., April 25.—Western High School's Baseball Team, from Washington, D. C., fell a fairly easy victim to the Baltimore Poly nine here today by the count of 5-to-1.

The visitors were for the most part baffled in their attempts to hit the brand of pitching served up to them. Western showed fair defensive work, especially in its infield.

VA. WINNER IN 2 TRACK MEETS

Varsity, Freshmen in Triumphs Over V. P. I. Teams.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 25.—In the final home meet of the season, Virginia's varsity and freshman track teams registered decisive victories today over the representatives of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. In the varsity clash, the Cavaliers scored 85 points against 41 for the Cadets, while in the freshmen contest the count stood 82 1-3 to 34 2-3.

A heavy track prevented any fast time in the races, but one field record was broken in the field events when Swart, sturdy member of the Gobbler football squad, hurled the shot 47 feet 2 inches. He also took first place in the discus, nosing out Kimball, of Virginia.

Capt. Wisner of Virginia won both sprints, but did not enter the broad jump. In all, the Cavaliers annexed ten first places.

Harold Osborne, Virginia Poly's coach, who holds the world's high-jump record, gave an exhibition, clearing the bar at 6 feet 4 inches.

The Virginia Freshmen won ten out of thirteen first places. Abramson was high scorer, with 15 points. He was first in both dashes and in the broad jump.

WATER POLO CAPTAIN.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 25.—That water polo will be continued as a regular sport at the Naval Academy was made certain today by announcement of the election of Midshipman H. W. Seeley, of Hammondsport, N. Y., as captain of next season's team. C. O. Cobb, Rochester, N. Y., was named team manager.

IN THE COLLEGE CORNER

—By JACK ESPEY—

THE reported move on foot among Catholic University students to seek permission of the authorities to reestablish baseball as a varsity sport seems consistent with the trend of the times among collegians. College baseball, despite the cries of the pessimists, is enjoying a new lease of life.

It has been said around the Brookland campus that baseball will be brought back to the intercollegiate curriculum once the students show enough interest. This condition evidently has been met by the students, for there are no less than eight teams playing in the university intramural league.

The present situation at Catholic University is far different than what it was in 1930 and in several years previous. Candidates for the varsity team in past years were so scarce that oftentimes it was impossible to hold an intrasquad practice game.

Freshmen Bear Future Hopes.

Hopes for the future are fastened on the freshmen who have been leading the intramural league under the coaching of Jack Clark. The frosh should prove fine material for a varsity team next spring, according to reports.

Baseball is well supported by the students at Georgetown University and not a little interest is being evidenced among outsiders. The attendances at the Hoyas' games to date have far exceeded those of last year for the same period of time and have also topped the figures for games played on the old Hilltop Field (located on the campus) in 1928 and 1929.

4,500 Saw Georgetown Play N. Y. U.

In other sections of the East, college baseball is well received by students and public alike. The recent Georgetown-New York University game in New York attracted more than 4,500 persons, the largest crowd to witness a New York U. diamond contest in many years.

In cities represented in the Eastern Intercollegiate League the attendances have been larger than heretofore. Philadelhia, New Haven, Ithaca, Hanover, N. H., and Princeton, N. J., besides New York, receive the sport with heartening enthusiasm. All in all, the persons interested in keeping the national pastime alive among the colleges have found nothing this spring to cause them to hesitate.

Ideal Site for Stadium At American U.

When and if American University produces a football team rating major league classification, it will be ready to accommodate the crowds seeking admission to its games. The Massachusetts Avenue Heights institution owns an ideal piece of real estate for a stadium. This is located about 100 yards west of Nebraska avenue on Massachusetts avenue.

No one yet has spoken authoritatively on the subject of the ascension of American University's football team, and, perhaps, the Methodists do not intend to seek the upper strata of gridiron society. However, plans are going ahead for a new field on the property mentioned. It may be in shape for the staging of the Methodists' only local game next fall.

Georgetown Basket Ball Schedule Attractive.

Should Georgetown's proposed new gymnasium be constructed by next winter, its large seating capacity might be taxed on the occasion of several games of basket ball already lined up. It is understood the Hilltoppers will meet some of the best college fives in the country next winter. The identity of these teams has not been revealed. More than 6,000 persons will be seated in the new gym, according to present plans.

PLEBE ATHLETES DIVIDE.

Annapolis, Md., April 25.—Naval Academy plebe tossers won from Mount St. Joseph, 5 to 4, here today, but the Plebe lacrossemen, opening their season, bowed to Baltimore City College, 6 to 3.

NAVY BEATEN BY W. & L. ON DIAMOND

Generals Bat Well Behind Jarrett to Win, 9 to 7.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 25.—Steady and effective hurling by Jarrett, except in one inning, and hitting in timely fashion, enabled Washington and Lee to defeat the Annapolis Midshipmen on the diamond here today by a score of 9 to 7.

The Tars were helpless before the offerings of Jarrett in the first five innings, three bingles scattered over as many frames being the limit of their attack. Meanwhile, the Generals were out in front with four runs. The Middies managed to shove one run across in the sixth as the result of a single by Hodgkins, an error by Mattox and a wild pitch by Jarrett. The visitors increased their tally to six with a pair of runs in the seventh that came as a result of an error, fielder's choice, a single by Richardson and a double by Stapleton.

The same session all but spelled disaster for the Virginians. The Tars began to get to Jarrett's slants. They found him for a total of four safe drives, one a two-bagger by Hodgkins, and with the aid of two errors in the outer garden, five runners crossed the rubber, to knot the count at 6-all.

The Middies went in the van by one run in the eighth when Hunter singled, got to second on Mattox's passed ball and scored when Routon messed up Engelhardt's grounder.

Navy's hopes were short-lived, however, as the Generals came through with a trio of runs in the ninth. With one out, Richardson started the rally with a single to right. Engelhardt had a wild heave to first after taking Stapleton's grounder, and Richardson got to third and Englehardt to second. The former scored on Violett's fielder's choice; Stapleton got home on Jarrett's single and Violett scored on Routon's sacrifice. Navy got two men on the paths in the ninth, but could not produce the necessary hit.

METHODISTS WIN OPENER.

Hyattsville Southern Methodists, appearing in uniform for the first time this season, turned in a 4-to-3 victory over the Wheaton Nine yesterday at Hyattsville. A big third-inning rally on the part of the Methodists broke up a pitching duel between Bellman and Windsor.

Bellman was the feature player of the game, holding the Wheatonites to eight well-scattered hits and driving in the winning run.

V. P. I. Freshman Nine Defeats V. M. I. Cubs

Special to The Washington Post.

Blacksburg, Va., April 25.—A drive to center field in the ninth inning with the score tied sent Jennings, Goblet pitcher, across the plate and gave V. P. I. Freshmen a 6-to-5 victory over V. M. I. Freshmen nine in Miles Stadium this afternoon.

After blowing up in the second frame, when the Little Keydets filled the bases and worked two squeeze plays for three runs, the Tech yearlings settled down and blanked the Lexington visitors for the remainder of the contest.

MARKS FALL IN DRAKE GAMES

11 New Records Set as Tolan, Sentman Are Defeated.

DRAKE STADIUM, Des Moines, Iowa, April 25 (U.P.).—Eleven records came tumbling down today at the twenty-second running of the Drake relays. Outstanding among the new college marks was that of Clark Chamberlain, of Michigan State, in the 2-mile run. The slender athlete finished in 9 minutes 23.1 seconds.

Peyton Glass barely beat out Eddie Tolan, Michigan's famous Negro runner, in the 100-yard dash. Glass, a 19-year-old sophomore at Oklahoma State College, was timed in 9.7. Hugh Rhea, of Nebraska, who broke the meet record in the shot event yesterday in the preliminaries, allowed his own mark to stand only 24 hours. Today he made still a better throw of 50 feet 7.2 inches.

Lee Sentman, Illinois, was a favorite in the high hurdle event, but Hager, of Iowa State, ran the smoothest race and finished inches ahead to set a meet record of 14.7.

Tolan proved a precious addition to the Michigan Relay Team that broke the 880-yard record by setting a mark of 1 minute 27 seconds. Other new records that fell: Two-mile college relay, Abilene Christian, 7:57.9; football relay, Texas University, 43.2; sprint medley relay, Wichita University, 3:30.9; distance medley, Iowa State, 10:21.6.

Gonzaga Nine Beats Hyattsville High, 5-4

Subjugating a last-inning offensive on the part of Hyattsville High's Baseball Team, Gonzaga captured a 5-4 victory over the suburbanites yesterday afternoon at Magruder Field in a game which was called at the end of the seventh inning by the mutual consent of both coaches.

Going into the last inning with a lead of 5-3, comfortable in that Cleary was hurling a brand of air-tight ball, Gonzaga was given a scare when a hit by Pepper, and subsequent errors, shoved him across the plate. Cleary halted the late rally by striking out Newell.

It was a light-hitting game, no player going into the multiple hit column. Cleary's work in the box was the feature of the contest.

TECH BEATEN ON TRACK, 70 TO 52

Woodberry Forest Is Winner in Ten Events.

Special to The Washington Post.

WOODBERRY FOREST, Va., April 25.—Capturing ten first places and tying for another, the Woodberry Forest Track Team defeated Tech High School, of Washington, here this afternoon, 70 to 52.

Jimmy Gwinn, Bill Myers and Wallace Sanford, of the locals tied for high-point honors, with two firsts apiece. Cold, raw weather did much toward slowing up the performances in the running events.

The mile relay race went to Tech by a wide margin, while Woodberry Forest was hard pressed to win a special half-mile relay when Schrivner all but overtook Haywood on the last leg of the race.

CAPITAL CITY UNLIMITED NINES AWAIT OPENING

Banner Race Starts Next Sunday

Two Days Remain to Complete Entry in Title Play.

Younger Age Classes Also Planning for Start of Play.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

THE last Sunday before the opening of the unlimtied section of The Post's Capital City League finds the numerous pilots applying the final touches to their teams in anticipation of one of the closest races ever to be fought on local sandlots. A record number of entries, more evenly matched clubs, and the desire to win the gold baseballs emblematic of the city championship, offered by The Post, form the basis for the predictions that the league battles will wax hot this season.

With Capital City League opening day scheduled for next Sunday, only two days remain for the managers in the unlimited division to get their players' contracts and franchise fees into the league secretary at The Post. Several of the clubs have already posted these, but the majority have taken advantage of time offered them by league officials, to make the final decisions that will cut some of the players adrift and bind others to their teams for the current season.

Better-Balanced Play Expected.

On paper, the prospects for a close race are exceedingly bright, with the leaders of last year having equally formidable machines, and the weaker nines adding strength to their line-ups. Several combinations, which last year competed in the senior league, have cast their lot with the older nines this season and their progress in the pennant chase will be observed with both interest and fear by the others.

Frank Cinotti's St. Joseph outfit ranks as the dark horse of the series. Frank is keeping his line-up under cover, awaiting actual play before announcing his roster. One thing is certain, however, that the St. Joseph team will be on par with those of the past years, which means the men from the Terminal neighborhood will be a strong contender for the honors.

Tony Burroto's Ciro crew must also be reckoned with when it comes to dividing the spoils. Sergt. Brown's Army Medicos, an annually strong club, has appeared in only two contests to date, both of which were of a practice variety, and the real strength of the Soldiers is not known. A new athletic officer and new faces in the line-up are sure to improve the Medicos' play, however.

Other Teams to Figure In Race.

The remainder of the teams in the race all possess potential batting strength, while from a defensive angle they are well drilled and capable of making a good appearance. The Phoenix-Blue Coal, Majestic Radio, Langley, Dixie Pigs, Potomac Food Distributors, Columbia Heights, Congress Heights, Capitol Heights, Ross Council, Foxall and Saks aggregations represent the cream of the local talent. Manager Edwards' Columbia Heights nine and the Ted Otte's Congress Heights Club will provide a pretty duel for those fans who love a contest between bitter though friendly rivals. The Congress gang bested the Columbians last year in a driving finish for the championship.

The senior, junior, midget and insect teams have three weeks before their respective sections begin play. The managers of teams falling in any one of these classes are urged to submit their players' contracts and franchise fees as soon as possible in order to facilitate the drawing up of the schedule.

SANDLOT DUST

TWO of the leading contenders for the unlimited honors of the Capital City League are scheduled to clash today when the Potomac Food Distributors face the Foxall A. C. on the latter's diamond at 3 p. m. Manager Carl Dennison, of the Potomacs, plans to use either Bernie Jackson, a 38-year-old veteran, or Cole, a new member of the team, against the Foxall diamonders.

The Ross Jeweler juniors face a double header today, meeting the "Y" Flashes at 11 a. m. on diamond No. 1 of the Monument Grounds, and the Meridian juniors at 3 p. m. on the South Ellipse. Manager Lawrence requests both players and coaches to be on hand a half hour before each game.

The Lansburgh store's entry in the Department Store League is diligently working out in anticipation of the league opening on May 17. The following players will uphold the Lansburgh colors: Jack Bogan, manager; H. Darby, coach; J. Hines, C. Vance, C. Roper, M. Bowman, M. Wright, C. Langby, J. Vivel, A. Gibson, J. Kerr, C. Hanback, H. Vangrider, M. Pulaski, P. Jones, A. Tatala and C. Johnson.

The Capital Heights Jr. O. U. A. M. baseball nine will drill today at 2 p. m. on the Maryland Park Field. All players are requested to report promptly.

The Lindbergh Seniors will open their season today at 2:30 p. m. on the Mount Rainier diamond, opposing the Miller-Roamer Team, which is entered in the Capital City League.

The DeMolay Baseball Team, a dark horse in the unlimited race of the Capital City League, will oppose the Indian Head Cardinals at 2:30 p. m. today on the Cards' field. Manager Jack Bierach would like to arrange games with other Capital City League teams. He can be reached at Lincoln 4386.

The Capitol Heights A. C. which team won the Capital City League flag last year as the Anacostia Eagles, will seek its second win of the season today when it tackles the Seabrook nine at Seabrook. Eddie Hutchinson, who whiffed eighteen batters last Sunday, will toe the mound for the Heights team. Manager Link requests all players to meet at Sixty-first and Central avenue, southeast, at 1 p. m.

The Langley A. C., Capital City League hopefuls, will invade Kensington today for a game with the Kensington Fire Department nine, which is entered in the Montgomery County section of the league. All Langley players are requested to report at 651 Columbia road northwest, at 1:45 p. m. All players who have not as yet returned their contracts are asked to turn them in today.

The Hyattsville A. C. will cross bats with Ciro's Italian Villagers today at 3 p. m. on the Riverdale field. Manager Hiser requests all players to report promptly. Bailey will probably pitch for Hyattsville, with Ready doing the receiving.

The Palace Seniors will attempt to make it two straight when they engage the Fort Meyer Baseball Team in the soldier's backyard today. All Palace players are requested to report at the Hoover Playground at 11:30 a. m. for a short drill before leaving for the game which is scheduled to start at 2 p. m.

The Lionel Juniors will make their third start of the season today, opposing the Meridian A. C. at 1 p. m. on the West Ellipse diamond. At 3 p. m. the Lionel Seniors will stack up against the Franc Jewelry Co. Nine. Mrs. A. K. Palagrove wants her boys at the field a half hour before each of the games.

"Wee Willie" Glascoe's Phoenix-Blue Coal Team will play for the first time on their home grounds at Trinidad avenue and Oates street northeast, when they play host to the Cubs A. C. in a game scheduled to start at 3 p. m. Manager Glascoe desires all of his players to report at the field at 2 p. m. for a light pregame drill.

The Neighborhood House Senators will hook up with the Nash Post Midgets at 1 p. m. on the Congress Heights diamond today. Manager Burton requests all Senator players to report at 12 noon at Sixth and I streets southwest.

STRONG CONTENDERS FOR CAPITAL CITY LEAGUE TITLE

Warring Perpetuates Club For Race in Cap. City League

Tris Speakers' Pilot Organizes Stewarts in Junior Class.

By LEWIS T. ATCHISON.

"THE show must go on," say the folk associated with the stage, and now Milton "Stump" Warring has borrowed the phrase, slightly revised it to fit his particular case, and brought forth the good news that the "Tris Speakers will go on," only the 1931 edition of the team will compete under the sponsorship of Stewart's Pharmacy, and will be in the junior section of the Capital City League.

It isn't so long ago that the Tris Speakers were just a nondescript bunch of kids with two good bats, one sadly cracked bludgeon that was used especially for bunting purposes, a borrowed catcher's mitt, mask, and two battle scarred baseballs, and were one of a trio of pennant contenders for the Insect championship of The Post's Capital City League. "Stump" Warren was then, as he is now, captain, manager, coach and general manager of the team, in addition to holding down the regular catching assignment. The nine entered in upon its first season in 1928 with no definite goal in view just the desire to play baseball.

Coleman Takes Team Under Wing.

Then "Spud" Coleman appeared on the scene. "Spud" chanced upon the team at practice, one day, and when the boys chose sides for a game he agreed to act as umpire. It wasnt long before Coleman had taken the Speakers under his paternal wing and entered them in the Post's league. That was in 1928. The race in the Insect class narrowed down to a three cornered affair involving the Speakers, the Brookland Boy's Club and the Royals. At the conclusion of the regular schedule all three clubs were deadlocked and a play-off was ordered by league officials. The Speakers met the Royals in the first contest and were eliminated 9-8 in an eleven inning contest. The Brookland team then defeated the Royals 10-0 for the championship. But that's getting away from the story.

The following year found the Speakers enrolled in the American Legion series as the Spengler Post team, under the management of Jim Hayre. The gods of the diamond failed to smile on the boys and the season ended with them in the second division. Failure to win a championship did not dishearten them, however, their one desire was to play baseball, and play they did, sometimes winning, sometimes losing, but always playing the game for all they were worth.

Parting of Ways Last Year.

1930 meant the parting of the ways for many of them due to a slight difference in ages. The strict American Legion rules, working in cooperation with The Post, barred some of the players because their ages did not fall within prescribed limit. The welfare of the team came first with those members who were ineligible, however, and rather than disband they remained intact as a club with those who were eligible participating in league play, and the others encouraging them.

The result of the cooperation is down in the record books of the league in print that will ever be cherished by the youth of Washington, for Spengler Post triumphed over all the teams in the District, and then went on to the State finals. It was not a triumph of the team alone, however, it was a signal victory for the entire club, the old gang that knew no other creed save to give their best, not for personal glory, but for the welfare of the other fellows.

This season Jim Hayre has agreed to act as advisor to the team, although his duties as coach and manager of two other teams entered in the Capital City League midget section, will prevent him from assuming the active direction of the club. Warring has signed a bevy of well-known sandlotters for the Stewart team. It is an odd coincidence that almost all of the players were on the roster of one of the trio of clubs that battled so valliantly for the insect title in 1926. The roster is as follows: Pohl, McGuire, Virnstein, Luebkert, Valentine, Hawkins, Thompson, McNally, Nock, Thomas and Facchina, while "Stump" and Turner form the vanguard.

"Stump" isn't making any wild predictions about what his team will do in the junior section. He wants the team's performances to speak for the club.

London Girls' School Advertises For Athletes

London, April 25 (A.P.).—Shades of the Carnegie report!

A London paper recently carried an advertisement signed by a prominent and ultra exclusive girls' school, stating the institution was prepared to give a liberal discount to a girl tennis player capable of representing the school in junior open tennis events.

Recent increases in attention paid to sports by the British schools is credited with a wave of proselytizing athletes, but this is only one of the rare examples of advertising for them.

BATTERY A WINNER.

Battery A of the Sixteenth Field Artillery, defeated the Indian Head Marine nine in a slugging bee yesterday, by a score of 13 to 7. The game was played at Fort Meyer.

Zelinsky put down an alien rally in the eighth inning which netted the visitors four runs, to win his game. The game was close until the seventh when both nines went on a batting rampage. The batteries were: Moaney and Hood, for the Marines, and Zelinsky and Gorman for Battery A.

MAJESTICS BEATEN.

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., April 25.—After trailing most of the way, Alpha Delta Omega's nine defeated Majestic Radio, of Washington, 5 to 4, here today in a seven-inning game. Kersey's hit scored two runs in the sixth to gain the decision. De Nanna's fielding and hitting featured for the Capital team.

MICHIGAN NINE WINS.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 25 (A.P.).—The University of Michigan Baseball Team converted twelve of seventeen hits off two Iowa pitchers into runs today to win the opening Big Ten game with a score of 12 to 5. A hitting rally and two Michigan errors in the eighth gave Iowa its best inning.

Seven Local Amateurs Compete in N. Y. This Week.

WASHINGTON'S bid for national amateur boxing honors will be carried to New York tomorrow by a sturdy band of six youngsters who hold various local amateur ring championships won during the past winter. The Capital color bearers in the tournament that opens tomorrow night and continues to Thursday night in Madison Square Garden are as follows:

Louis Gevinson, flyweight, Boys Club; Leon Shub, bantamweight, Jewish Community Center; Mike Tardugno, featherweight, Jewish Community Center; Robert Boyle, lightweight, unattached; Michael O'Connor, Red Sox A. C., middleweight, and Leroy Bordeau, Jewish Community Center, light heavyweight.

McNamara Seconds Boxers.

The group will be accompanied by Jim McNamara, coach of the Jewish Community Center, who will act as trainer and second, and Edward Rosenblum, chairman of the boxing committee of the District of Columbia Association of the A. A. U. The entire party will be quartered at the Victoria Hotel.

For Tardugno and O'Connor this is the second trip to a national tournament, this pair having fought in the junior tourney at Boston early this month, along with Jocko Miller, J. C. C. welterweight, and Ralph Carpenter, J. C. C. heavyweight. The latter two sustained injuries which will prevent their appearance in the New York bouts.

A seventh Washington boy, Bobby Goldstein, Southern Conference lightweight champion, also will make the trip. Goldstein represents the University of Virginia, where he is a sophomore. He formerly was the star of the Jewish Community Center Team.

More than 200 boxers from all parts of the United States and from Canada, Nova Scotia and Hawaii have entered the tournament.

WASHINGTON LADIES LEAGUE.

Putting the finishing touches to a successful year on the alleys, Lorraine Gulli added two pins to the high game mark of Billie Williams in the Washington Ladies League, last week. The new record is 149. Miss Gulli failed by eight pins to shatter the high-set mark held by Madeline Burke which is 358. Irene Scott almost equalled the record breaking performance of Miss Gulli, but she fell down in her final box. Both had scores of 136 in the ninth box.

307 ENTER GOLF TOURNEY AT WASHINGTON CLUB

Year's First Meet Opens Tuesday

Stevinson to Defend Title in Field of Notable Players.

Five Flights to Qualify; Defaulters to Be Blacklisted.

THE annual spring invitation tournament of the Washington Golf and Country Club, signaling the start of the tournament season here, will begin next Tuesday morning with 307 entrants. Tuesday and Wednesday will be devoted to a qualifying round of eighteen holes, with the field divided. Five sixteens will qualify, with match play rounds on Thursday and Friday.

The entry list includes all the well-known golfers in this section, with many contestants from other cities. Miller B. Stevinson, who won the tournament last year, and Henry D. Nicholson, who was runner-up, are entered. The event will be played under summer rules and the golf committee has decided to blacklist any player who qualifies and is paired for match play and then defaults his opening match.

Golfers from virtually every club in the Washington group are entered, including the host club, Columbia Country Club, Chevy Chase, Congressional, Manor, Bannockburn, Indian Spring, Woodmont and Georgetown University.

TO PLAY ABROAD

GEORGE VOIGT

Voigt to Compete In British Amateur

George J. Voigt, formerly of Washington, will compete in the 1931 British amateur golf championship, he announced yesterday. He will sail from New York accompanied by Cyril Tolley, former British amateur champion, on May 9. Voigt was in Washington yesterday attending the funeral of his oldest brother.

G. U. GOLFERS WIN FROM PITT, 4-2

Parks, Visitors' Star, Shoots 73 to Beat Capt. Beger.

THE Georgetown University golf team added to its string of victories the team of the University of Pittsburgh on the course of the Manor Club yesterday by a score of 4 to 2. Competition was played in foursomes, with 1 point for each individual match and 1 point for best ball in each foursome.

The hero of the contest was Samuel M. Parks, jr., of the visiting team, who negotiated the course in 73, playing it for the first time, and who defeated F. J. "Chick" Beger, captain of the Hilltop team, 4 and 3.

Beger started with an eagle 3 on the first hole, Parks following with a birdie 2 on the second, when he chipped his ball into the cup from off the green, but when the turn was reached Beger was 3 down, going out in 39 to Parks' 36. Parks was the only individual winner for his team, but his fine work gave the best ball to his side in the foursome.

The summary:

Samuel M. Parks, jr., Pittsburgh, defeated F. J. Beger, Georgetown, 4 and 3. Richard Wilson, Georgetown, defeated J. Rosenberg, Pittsburgh, 3 and 1. Best ball—Pittsburgh, 2 and 1.

John Slattery, Georgetown, defeated Charles Wolff, Pittsburgh, 4 and 2. Peter Monahan, Georgetown, defeated Miles Bruno, Pittsburgh, 5 and 4. Best ball—Georgetown, 5 and 4.

Next Friday the Georgetown team will play against Princeton on the Huntingdon Valley course, Philadelphia, and on Saturday they will meet the University of Pennsylvania on the course of the Manufacturers Club.

Bliss Ties Franklin In College Net Loop

Bliss moved into a first place tie with Benjamin Franklin in the Washington Collegiate Conference Tennis League yesterday at the Bliss Electrical School's courts by taking three out of four matches in its contest with Columbus U.

Ben Franklin could do little with the Strayer's Business College team, and split even, two matches all.

BEN FRANKLIN, 2; STRAYERS, 2.

Singles—Shore (B. F.) defeated Flynn, 6—1, 6—1; Rome (S.) won by default; Pierce (S.) defeated Litman, 6—2, 6—3. Doubles—Shore and Litman (B. F.) defeated Flynn and Rome, 6—4, 3—6, 6—2.

BLISS, 3; COLUMBUS, 1.

Singles—Middleton (B.) defeated Cozzens, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3; Dolan (C.) defeated McCarty, 9—7, 6—3; Seibert (B.) defeated Daly, 6—1, 6—4. Doubles—Flemming and Louden (B.) defeated Cozzens and Dolan, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5.

WETSERN GOLFERS TIED.

The golf team match yesterday on the course of the Columbia Club between Western High School and Woodberry Forest resulted in a tie, each team scoring 3 points.

The summary:

John C. Holzberg, Western, defeated P. T. Tobies, Woodberry Forest, 1 up; R. W. Monsted, Woodberry Forest, defeated William E. Shannon 2d, Western, 2 and 1. Best ball—Western, 1 up.

Wilbur Garrett, Western, defeated J. D. Ford, Woodberry Forest, 4 and 3; J. W. Mott, Woodberry Forest, defeated Richard Groettum, Western, 8 and 6. Best ball—Woodberry Forest, 1 up.

G. HERRMANN, BALLFIGURE, DIES AT 71

Former Head of Reds and National Commission Expires.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 25 (A.P.). August "Garry" Herrmann, the father of the world's series and formerly one of the great powers in baseball, died unexpectedly today at his home. He was 71 years old. Death was caused by infirmities and complication of diseases.

Herrmann, the Kenesaw Mountain Landis of his day, was chairman and ruler of the old National Baseball Commission for fifteen years, president of the Cincinnati Reds for 25 years and interleague diplomat.

He was a politician, financier, member of the International Typographical Union, former grand exalted ruler of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, a high Mason, and one time president of the National Bowling Congress.

To Lie in State At Elks' Temple.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at the Elks Temple, built largely through Herrmann's financial leadership. The body will lie in state on that day from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. Burial will be in Vine Street Cemetery.

"Garry's" passing marked the third removal by death within one month of nationally prominent baseball figures. On March 27 Ernest S. Barnard, then president of the American League and former president of the Cleveland Indians, died at Rochester, Minn. One day later Byron Bancroft Johnson, one of Herrmann's triumvirates on the national commission and forceful ruler of the American League for a quarter of a century, succumbed to a long illness at St. Louis.

It was Hermann's prerogative as national chairman to hand down all decisions and although he acted with impartiality and sound judgment, he incurred powerful enmities. His decision which sent George Sisler to the St. Louis Browns rather than Pittsburgh caused a break with one of his closest friends, Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pirates.

National Commission Ends With Scandal.

The world's series in 1919, between the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox, produced the greatest scandal of modern baseball when eight Chicago players were expelled from the professional game for life on charges of accepting money to throw the series, the national commission was abolished, but Herrmann remained as president of the Reds.

In 1927 Herrmann showed first signs of approaching deafness and physical ailments that proved handicaps to him. The beginning of his sudden end as a powerful baseball magnate was evident during the world's series of that year between the Yankees and Pirates.

Previously Herrmann's appearance at world's series was the signal for gatherings of baseball's great. He was a generous and lavish host. During the 1927 series he preferred not to be visited by associates because of physical defects and remained alone in a hotel.

$10,000 Pension Is Voted.

Several months later he sold his interests in the Reds to C. J. McDiarmid and led a secluded life until death. In appreciation of his long service McDiarmid and the clubs stockholders voted Herrmann a $25,000 bonus and a $10,000 annuity. Later Sidney Weil bought control of the club and likewise continued Herrmann's $10,000 annual pension.

Last January executives of both major leagues voted him a $500 monthly pension.

Despite the pension benefits, Herrmann's health was undermined to such an extent his last year of life that his friends said he believed he was penniless and applied for and received an $8 a week allowance from the International Typographical Union.

Bannockburn's Golf Dates Are Announced

The golf committee of the Bannockburn Golf Club announces that the season will open with a springtime inaugural handicap, the details to be announced at a later date. Argentine Wins First From Chile in Tennis

Santiago, Chile, April 25 (A.P.).—Argentina won the opening match of of the South American zone Davis Cup final tie today. The Argentine doubles team of Andriano Zappa and Lucilo del Castillo, easily defeated Roberto Conrads and Herbert Mueller, of Chile, by scores of 6—0, 6—1, 6—0.

Speaking of Tennis

By BOB CONSIDINE

THIS is the time of the year when gnarled old trees suddenly are swathed in the pinkish glow of spring, and Capt. Al. Gore, Clarence Charest, Commander C. C. Gill and Jack Purinton turn once more to tennis. Like Melba and Battling Levinsky, they have made on an average of three farewell tours apiece, but each year finds them once more on the job, brandishing their racquets in the same old unorthodox way, and making you like it.

Here's a quartet of tenors which aggregates an age of about 200 years and still produces much of the dignity and, indeed, much of the good tennis manufactured hereabouts. Several of these gentlemen have gained fame from a national viewpoint. Charest won the national veterans tournament in 1929 and had his picture in the newsreel, which was pretty swell, even if the announcer did introduce him as Mr. Char-est.

Capt. Gore is best known for the fame he gathered in the national veteran's doubles championship of 1926, when he gained the coveted finals prize after one of his opponents broke a leg in the last set.

Gill's Tennis Known Far, Wide and Long.

Time and tide, and a lot of each, has seen Commander Gill lope across tennisdom in easy 10,000-mile jumps. He has been the best player in Tientsin and Bahia, Teneriffe and Addis Ababa. He is best known for having gained the finals of the national veterans singles last year, and for being the reason why a new ruling has been passed by the U. S. L. T. A., advocating the starting of the national vets finals at noon on the day of the real finals. Last year Gill and his crotchity opponent held up the Doeg-Shields match until the rougher element in the stadium just hauled off and voiced its desire that the two old boys be led away to continue their feud in peace.

Off and on, Jack Purinton has been one of the best players hereabouts. His feats have been many, but the one that impressed me most was an episode in the Wardman tournament of 1926. He was seeded No. 4 and had to play me, then, as now, pretty much of a nonentity. I managed to win, 6—2, 6—1. Leaping to the net in bright-eyed expectation, assuming that we were to go through the customary handshake and "Nice match, old pal!" stuff, I was rather abashed by the sight of his approaching me with most unhospitable mien.

Stranger to "Ethics" Of Tennis.

I regret to report that Mr. Purinton was outspoken in the extreme. He said that I was a stranger to the "ethics" of tennis and several other accusations of similarly grave import. But since no really definite assertions were being made, I finally asked him to tell me all.

"'You got on my nerves," was the astounding reply. "You're just another one of those public parks players." This was a pretty serious charge in those days, but the final ultimatum ran, "And besides, you didn't pick up the loose balls and hand 'em to me when we crossed over on the odd games."

These four are dispellers of two great traditions in tennis. One is that you are no good after 32 and another is that good form is essential if one is to make his mark, however light, in tennis. Charest has been volleying for 20 years with a grip that would break the wrist of any young player in town. He learned to hit a backhand correctly when he was 42.

Capt. Gore can still beat a good many players here in town on the sole merit of his forehand drive. Unable to get around the court at a speed of more than 20 miles a fortnight, the captain makes up for this whenever he comes in contact. I shan't attempt to describe his serve.

Gill Is Sprightliest Local Player.

Whether you think so or not Commander Gill is the sprightliest player in Washington. None can run faster, or stop faster—which is just as important. He plays a great deal like the Japanese do, with exaggerated lifting strokes. He has a queer reverse service, and volleys as expertly as he does unorthodoxically.

Mr. Purinton is the Corinne Frazier of local tennis, in that he can use his left hand almost as well as his right. If you have never played against him he is most likely to pass you when you hit to his backhand and callump up to the net. A quick shift of the racquet gives him two forehands.

I don't know what it is that keeps these old boys going. What national fame Washington has had since the retirement of Connie Doyle as a place wherein good players reside and pay taxes has been built by the work of these four, in the national veterans tournament for the greater part.

College Tennis Headed For "Major Sport."

Even an unsuccessful visit to the University of Virginia evinces the fact with a capital F that tennis is headed for "major sport" consideration by the collage athletic boards. After more years than it is handy to compile, the colleges are beginning to realize that they ought to sponsor what is called "take out" sports.

Tilden has a good argument for tennis and golf in college. They are individual sports and build up admirable qualities in a man. I'm not certain that they develop character to any alarming degree, nor am I certain that there are lessons to be learned on the court or the fairway which will come in handy once you have been ousted from dear old Ditchwater, but the best argument for them is that they are games which demand few accomplices and give you a workout in quick order. I'm speaking of tennis mainly, of course.

Visualize the spectacle of a former college football star calling up 21 of his pals to get up a game some afternoon, for the ball players wiring 17 old grads for a dose of the old national pastime.

Virginia is spending a lot of money on tennis, and is being helped at the same time. Lady Nancy Astor has just given the school 20 new courts, which brings the total up to about 50. All of them were filled when we played there, which, while it doesn't say much for the attention-drawing propensities of our games, still seems to be pretty foreshadowing.

Little Peggy Keyser Fine Prospect.

The finest prospect in recent years in local women's tennis is Peggy Keyser, 14, a little bandy of a girl, who bangs the old compressed air off her left side. Last year, at 13, she reached the semifinal round of the Wardman tournament, where she was defeated by Jo Dunham.

Peggy learned her tennis at the Central Presbyterian courts, Fifteenth and Irving, which has served as the incubator for such players as Miss Dunham, the Sherfy twins, Snooks Uhler, former D. C. junior champion; Bob Caffee, Pitt player, and others who must suffer the penalty of a bum memory.

She was 11 years old when her brother Paul interested her in the game. A natural ball player she soon caught on to the hang of the game, and for the want of a better coach, easily slunk into the habit of chopping, a natural state of affairs for a left hander.

Improving rapidly, however, she soon began taking the measure of older players, attracting the notice of Corrine Frazier and Josephine Dunham. Playing against this slightly better brand of competition she gained in aggressiveness and courtcraft. Last year she entered Central and won both singles and doubles. She played in most of the local tournaments last summer, and intends doing the same this year.

Besides having an excellent chance of becoming a really good player, the little brown gal might also fall into a slump whence she can never recover. She is doing a lot too much chopping ever really to amount to many shakes as a player. She could use some lessons. Already equipped with a service that is hard and accurate, and a good enough volleying game, she needs straightening out. She should learn to drive. If she can do so, and hold her natural tennis instinct, Washington might some day produce a woman player worth taking a bus ride to see.

G. U. and Carolina to Meet Here Saturday.

One of the best matches of the year will be on view next Saturday at Columbia Country Club when Georgetown and North Carolina play. There will be three matches played, which promise to produce pretty near the best tennis of the year. First, of course, is the contest between Gregory Mangin, of Georgetown, and Bryan Grant. Mangin, the sixth ranking player in the country, will be meeting the national clay court champion.

While most of you are vaguely acquainted with the type of game Mangin plays, Grant will be seen here for the first time. He is the smallest good player in the world. He looks like he's standing in a ditch all the time. Besides being the smallest, he is the best court coverer in amateur ranks, and certainly as good as Kozeluh in this line of endeavor.

If Mangin is to be beaten, Grant seems to have the game which will turn the trick. Shields beat Mangin, according to legend, last year in the quarter finals of the national singles, after losing the first two sets, by starting to hit the ball easy. Grant is a soft ball artist from pole to pole. While his balls are easy to hit, he seems impossible to ace, so speedy is he afoot.

Mitchell May Oppose Wilmer Hines.

Unless the teams resort to the ancient and honored art of juggling, Dooly Mitchell will be stacked up against Wilmer Hines in the remaining singles match of note. Hines is the national junior champion and pretty hot stuff, but Mitchell can usually be depended upon to put on a good show.

Eddie Yeomans will be with the Chapel Point Team, in No. 3 place. He probably will meet Freddy Doyle. It will be the first glimpse of Yeomans since his list of near-upsets in the spring tournaments.

Not the least interesting of this set of matches will be the doubles brawl between Mangin and Mitchell and Grant and Hines.

After all the trouble the schedule committee of the Washington Tennis Association went to in an effort to see that no local tournament interfered with a big out-of-town event, they went and scheduled the District championship to be played just when Wimbledon will be running.

SUTTER WINS OVER LOTT IN 5 SETS

Davis Cup Player Is Beaten After Evening Match.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 25 (A.P.).—Clifford S. Sutter, New Orleans, fifth ranking player in the United States, won the Mason-Dixon tennis title here today by defeating George M. Lott, jr., Philadelphia national doubles champion and member of this year's Davis Cup doubles team, in a five-set struggle.

The match was witnessed by one of the largest galleries in the history of tournament. Sutter won by 7—5, 2—6, 6—1, 3—6, 6—4.

The final set developed into fierce combat, the seventh game alone going to deuce points eight or ten times before Lott won Sutter's service. The New Orleans player had been leading at 4—2 and stood within a point of 5—2 more than a dozen times, only to lose out in the end. It was believed the loss of this apparently vital game would have a disastrous effect on Sutter's morale, but he surprised the gallery by rushing through Lott's service for a love game.

Lott Forced to Ease Up.

Lott, it seemed, had expended his last ounce of stamina in taking this game and was compelled to let down to gain his wind in the eighth session. He managed to come back sufficiently to win the ninth, but Sutter clinched the match by taking the tenth for the set and the championship. Mrs. John Van Ryn, East Orange, N. J., won the women's singles title by defeating Miss Virginia Rice, Boston, 3—6, 6—2, 6—1. The new champion, after losing the opener, due to Miss Rice's brilliant volleying, swung into her top form and ran through the next two sets with ease.

Lott and John Van Ryn defeated Jack Wright, Montreal, and Marcel Rainville, Montreal, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2, to win the men's doubles championship. Miss Rice and Sutter defeated Mr. and Mrs. Van Ryn, 6—4, 6—3, in the mixed doubles.

Schoolmaster Winner In Briton's Golf Event

Hunstanton, England, April 25 (A.P.).—Leonard Crawley, young English schoolmaster, who learned his golf at Cambridge University, today won the British native golf championship, defeating William Sutton, Irish open champion and former native titleholder, by one hole in the final round.

Britons Rout Monaco In Final Cup Singles

Plymouth, England, April 25 (A.P.). Great Britain completed its conquest of Monaco in Davis Cup competition today, winning the final two singles matches. Monaco failed to win a set during the three days' play.

In today's matches, H. W. Austin defeated Gallepe, 6—0, 6—1, and Charles H. Kingsley turned back Landau, 6—0, 6—1.

Mexican Tennis Team May Lose Unda, Star

Mexico City, April 25 (A.P.).—Alfonso Unda, one of the Mexican Davis Cup players, is ill and may not be able to play against the United States youngsters in the first round tie of the North American zone, beginning May 1.

Unda told the newspaper Excelsior that he could hardly hope to regain his strength in time to play, even if his condition should improve immediately.

The illness of Unda leaves only one veteran on the Mexican team, Ricardo Tapia, the veteran doubles team of Llano and Mariano Lozano having been superseded by the youngsters Carlos Tapia and Jorge Acosta.

Unda has been one of the ranking singles players of Mexico for several years.

Bobby Jones to Play Charity Match Today

Los Angeles, April 25 (A.P.).—Robert Tyre Jones, jr., amateur golf's champion emiritus, teamed with Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente professional, will meet the Dutra brothers, Mortie, of Long Beach, Calif., and Olin, of Santa Monica, Calif. in an 18-hole match here today.

Olin Dutra was substituted for George Von Elm, of Los Angeles, today when the business man golfer dislocated his left thumb in practice and announced he would not be able to play.

It will be Jones' second public appearance since he came to California to work in the movies. In the previous match, the Atlanta, Ga., lawyer and Diegel lost to Mortie Dutra and Von Elm 2 down over the Agua Caliente course.

One other match is listed on Bobby's schedule. He will appear in a team match with Diegel at San Francisco May 3. The matches are being staged for charity.

Old Line Tennis Team Bows to W. Maryland

Westminster, Md., April 25.—Western Maryland College defeated University of Maryland in tennis today, five matches to four.

The No. 1 doubles proved to be the deciding match, as Bussard and Campbell, of the Green Terrors, triumphed over Wilk and Medley, 8—6, 6—3.

All of the contests were easily settled, none being forced to go a third set.

Summaries:

SINGLES—Bussard (Western Maryland) defeated Medley, 6—4, 6—2; Tuckerman (Western Maryland) defeated Bischoff, 6—0, 6—2; M. Wooley (Western Maryland) defeated Wilk, 6—2, 6—2; Roberts (University of Maryland) defeated Campbell, 6—0, 6—1; Busick (University of Maryland) defeated Willey, 6—2, 6—2; Goubeau (University of Maryland) defeated D. Wooley, 6—0, 6—2.

DOUBLES—Bussard and Campbell (Western Maryland) defeated Wilk and Medley, 8—6, 6—3; Tuckerman and M. Wooley (Western Maryland) defeated Bischoff and Busick, 6—0, 6—2; Goubeau and Roberts (University of Maryland) defeated E. Palmer and V. Palmer, 6—0, 6—3.

G. W. NETMEN IDLE.

Rain compelled the George Washington University Tennis Team to cancel its match with Duke yesterday, scheduled to be played at Durham, N. C.

The Colonial Team was informed by long distance phone of the condition of the Duke courts at Farmville, Va., where Hampden-Sidney was played Friday. The trip was terminated, the team returning to Washington late yesterday afternoon.

From Tee to Green

Henry Litchfield West

During all the countless ages, since the world was first created,
Dame Nature has been striving to secure a perfect earth;
It's a slow and tedious process, though I know it's calculated
To produce in distant future things of merit and of worth.

As we regard the centuries we can not help but seeing
That in man she has developed both intelligence and skill;
For he used to be a cave man, a wild and woolly being,
Whose only occupation was to hunt around and kill.

We have seen the world move forward, in a way that's past conceiving,
A steady upward movement with perfection as its goal;
So we render thanks to Nature for her manner of achieving
By slow degrees a progress that must gladden every soul.

But Nature has worked steadily, with patience near exhausted,
Upon the toughest job she's had on land or sky or sea;
Nor do I think, though she keeps on until my hair is frosted,
That she'll succeed in making a good golfer out of me!

IN ALL the comment about the new larger and lighter golf ball one fact is prominent. There is talk, of course, about the behavior of the ball in the wind but the greatest trouble seems to be with its conduct on the putting green. Many golfers have been compelled to acquire a new putting touch and stroke in order to reduce the number of their putts.

When Glenn Spencer, the professional of the Maryland Country Club, is now carrying four putters in his golf bag in order to experiment with the new ball; when the women players in their tournament at Chevy Chase and in the Phyllis Keeler Memorial trophy competition at the Washington Golf and Country Club have no end of stories about three or four putts on almost every green; when Helen Hicks fails to break the record on the Hot Springs course because of three-putt greens, and when a professional in an event on the Indian Spring course has four three-putt greens in succession, it is evident that there is a marked difference between the old and the new ball when the putter is taken in hand. "Putting was extremely difficult," says the golf writer of the London Morning Post in describing the recent elimination round for eligibility to play on the Ryder Cup team.

Dick Wilson Sums Up Situation.

Dick Wilson, the well-known amateur of Southern Pines and second on the Georgetown University golf team, accurately summed up the situation the other day when he said that on a fast and slippery green it was practically impossible to control the putt, while in numerous instances the ball lips the cup. The latter experience is almost universal. The old ball would drop into the cup from any angle with a delightful thud, but the new ball either stops away short of the cup or, if it hits the side of the tin, bounces out and lands on the edge. Frequently it rolls around the side of the cup instead of keeping its straight path. Putting with the new ball has to be on a line directly for the center of the hole or the putt will not go down.

Criticism of the new ball continues in force in Great Britain, based very largely upon its erratic action during a strong wind.

Players Develop Slice.

"Players who endeavored to get a slight cut on their long shots found themselves developing a bad slice and approach shots were uncertain," says one writer, and another remarks that the ball went not where the player intended, but where the wind dictated. The effect of the wind upon the ball was strikingly illustrated on two holes. On the seventh hole, 543 yards, against the wind, players were not home with three full wooden shots. On the still longer eleventh, 599 yards, the big hitters were almost home in 2. Even though gales of wind are not often encountered in this section, many golfers are now endeavoring to learn how to hit long low drives—"wind-cheaters," as they are called—because a ball hit high into the air against the wind is perceptibly checked, with serious loss of distance.

The new ball is not greatly bothering the average player who takes three to reach a green 400 or more yards away, a result not difficult to accomplish even with the new ball. It is only when he takes three putts after he reaches the greens for a disastrous 6 that he wishes he had the old ball back again.

480-Yard Drive On Dog-Leg.

Speaking of long drives, take off your hats to J. Logan Hopkins, of the Washington Golf and Country Club. He has a record of a tee shot that eventually rolled to a green 480 yards away, and it was not a drive on the ice or frozen ground, although he admits that the fairway was like concrete.

"I was playing on the Ridgeway course at Columbia, S. C.," he said. "This particular hole of 480 yards is a dog-leg slightly to the left. A drive of 200 yards carries past the corner and then there is a long down-hill slope. In my case the ball ran like a scared rabbit until it finally landed on the green. It was the longest drive I ever made. I would like to duplicate it on the Washington course."

The opening day of the Congressional Country Club will be held in the near future, as the course is fast rounding into shape. Dr. Bruce L. Taylor, chairman of the golf committee, went over the course last week and approved several contemplated changes. These consist mainly of widening the fairways on the long holes so as to give greater advantage from the tee and narrowing the fairways on the short holes in order to compel accurate playing to the green. The mowing of the course, now in progress, will follow these new lines.

Gen. Drake's Handicap Reduced.

The winners of the tombstone tournament of the Seniors' Association of the Chevy Chase Club were Gen. C. G. Treat, Gen. D. C. Shanks and John C. Letts. The winner of the Wagenhorst cup was Gen. C. B. Drake, with a card of 90—12—78. In recognition of his fine shooting his handicap was immediately reduced from 12 to 10. E. O. Wagenhorst, Maj. H. A. Gillis and Walter G. Peter won the putting contest.

Competition for the plate presented by the president, Judge George C. Perkins, is now in progress with match play rounds, and during May there will be a cup presented by H. A. Gillis for the best medal score. For the best putting score during May there will be a cup awarded by Gen. D. C. Shanks.

The Columbia Club is not alone in the distribution, chronicled last week, of having three birdies scored on one hole at the same time. Last Sunday, at the Woodmont Club, Max Weyl, Gilbert Hahn and Howard Nordlinger made birdie 3s on the first hole. Albert E. Steinem, who was the fourth member of the quartet, holed out a par 4 and lost the hole.

The story of three birdies on one hole reminded Basil M. Manly, of the Indian Spring Club, that some time ago he was playing on the Columbia Club course with Norman B. Frost and Fred McLeod and all three scored birdies on the first hole, Manly chipping his ball into the cup from off the green.

First Eleven Holes Halved.

An interesting match was played on the Washington course last week between Dr. J. T. McClenahan and J. L. Hopkins, paired against C. W. Healy and V. Calvert Dickey. The first eleven holes were halved, which was something in the nature of a record performance. McClenahan won the twelfth with a birdie 3 and Dickey squared the match with a birdie 3 on the thirteenth. With the fourteenth halved, Dickey made his side 1 up with a birdie 4 on the fifteenth and then he won the seventeenth, closing the contest in favor of his side, 2 and 1.

"The Mystery of the Lost Golf Ball" ought to be the title of a Sherlock Holmes story.

Some players on the Indian Spring course last week discovered a golf ball lodged in a tree on the side of the fairway of the third hole. No one knows how long it had been there, or how it landed in its curious position. Claimants for a ball lost on the third hole can now come forward, prove property and take it away. No charge for the advertisement.

Suppose, in a four-ball match, one of the players plays an opponent's ball. What is the penalty, if any?

In the rules governing four-ball matches nothing is said about playing an opponent's ball, although provision is made for a penalty if one of the contestants plays his partner's ball. There is another general rule, however, which says that "in all other cases where a player would by the rules of golf incur the loss of a hole, he shall be disqualified for that hole but the disqualification shall not apply to his partner."

Two Exceptions To Rule.

Turning back to rule 20, governing "playing opponent's ball," it is stated that "if a player play the opponent's ball his side shall lose the hole." There are two exceptions—the first, that if the opponent then play the player's ball the penalty is canceled and the hole shall be played out with the balls thus exchanged; and, second, if the mistake occur through wrong information given by an opponent or his caddy, in which case there shall be no penalty.

This seems to leave the question still up in the air. One rule states that only the player who makes the error shall be disqualified for that hole, while the other rule distinctly affirms that "if a player play the opponent's ball, his side shall lose the hole." Which rule obtains? And suppose that after a player has played the ball of his opponent, would not the latter have a right to refuse to play with the other ball and thus enforce the penalty of a lost hole? It might not be good sportsmanship to do so, but in a close match it might decide between defeat and victory.

Ordinarily, when a player plays an opponent's ball, he is allowed to have the wrong ball brought back, and then plays his own ball, while the match goes merrily on, with no technicalities invoked. There seems to be no warrant for such action in the rule, but what are the rules of golf between friends?

Rodgers Forge Scene Of Tourney.

The first Maryland State Golf Association tournament will be played on the Rodgers Forge course next Tuesday. Officials of the association would be glad to welcome a representative crowd of golfers from this section, with the assurance that a good time will be had by all.

A real golf match was played last week on the Beaver Dam course with W. H. White and D. G. Morris paired against J. R. Miller and M. H. Maier. The first nine holes were won by White and Morris by 1 up with a best ball of 37, one over par, but the tables were turned on the second nine by Miller and Maier, who won the second by 2 up and the match by 1 up. The best ball of Miller and Maier was 35 for the last nine and a combined best ball of even par for the eighteen holes, which is most excellent golf on this difficult course.

On the long sixteenth hole Maier had a momentary thrill to see his chip shot from off the edge of the green go up to the cup and disappear for what appeared to be an eagle 3, only to see it come out again and stop on the very lip of the cup. As White's putt for a birdie 4 did not go down, his side became dormie and the match terminated on the next green, when both Miller and Maier scored pars. On the incoming nine Miller had a par 37 with a 6 on the eleventh par 4 hole, when his apparently perfect approach hit the green and rolled off into the woods into an impossible lie.

D. L. Thomson, president of the District Golf Association, entertained the officers and executive committee of the association at the Manor Club last Wednesday. The golf competition ended on the first nine with everybody soaked to the skin. After dinner a meeting was held, at which it was decided to consult the high school teams in order to determine whether they desired the association to sponsor their team matches, with a championship tournament in the fall.

LEE ROAD SAMPLE TO BE CONSTRUCTED

Exhibit Will Be Ready for Ground-Breaking Exercises on May 1.

A short typical section of the Lee Memorial boulevard is to be constructed at Fort Buffalo, Va., showing the proposed layout of the roadway, in time for the ground breaking ceremony, May 1, according to plans now being made by W. S. Hoge, jr., a member of the committee of 100 on securing the right of way for the boulevard and also of the central committee of the National Boulevard Association, which is arranging the May Day celebration at Fort Buffalo.

Henry G. Shirley, of Richmond, chairman of the State Highway Commission of Virginia, has authorized J. C. Albright, district engineer of Culpeper, Va., to arrange for the carrying out of this plan through the construction camp in Arlington County, which is already engaged in clearing the right of way of the proposed road.

Details of Sample Stretch.

It is planned to show the central speedway, 60 feet wide, flanked on either side by a strip of parkway for ornamental planting, 30 feet in width; these in turn flanked by the 30-foot roadway for slow travel; and bordered by a 10-foot strip for sidewalks and planting; with a 60-foot setback on both sides of the road to the building line, making a total of 320 feet in all, 200 feet of which will be the right of way of the boulevard

This exhibition is expected to be of great interest to those attending the exercises at 2:30 o'clock next Friday afternoon. From interest already expressed the committee anticipates the attendance of a record crowd, and announces that no tickets of admission are required to the grounds where the ceremony will be held. A small stand for the seating of officials and distinguished guests is being erected under the direction of Louis C. Carl, chairman of seating on stands.

Members of Committees.

George A. G. Wood, of this city, is chairman of the central committee which is working in cooperation with Dr. S. M. Johnson, president of the National Boulevard Association, in planning Friday's ceremony. The special committees which together form the central committee, include, program and arrangements, George V. Graham, chairman, T. S. Settle, Grant Leet, Miss Bessie Christian, Mrs. Earl Chaffee and A. K. Shipe; publicity, Mrs. Daniel C. Chase, chairman, Gen. Anton Stephan, Mrs. Philip D. Swing, Elwood Street, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson and Mrs. Charles W. Allen; seating on stands, Louis C. Carl chairman, Ashton C. Jones, James E. Colliflower, Charles N. Frame and L. P. Daniel; traffic and parking, Leon Arnold, chairman; John Rust, F. W. Huddleson, Mrs. Vosbury and W. S. Hoge, jr.

For those attending the exercises traffic will be routed across Key Bridge out Lee Highway to Falls Church, turning left at the traffic light and proceeding one mile to Fort Buffalo. On the return trip to Washington, traffic will go south along the Alexandria-Leesburg road to the Columbia Pike, east along Columbia Pike to Glebe road, west on Glebe road into Washington, via Chain Bridge.

Young Wife Found Dead of Gas Fumes

Mrs. Virginia M. Scates, 26, Asphyxiated in Home at Chevy Chase.

With gas flowing from two burners in the kitchen stove, Mrs. Virginia M. Scates, 26, was found asphyxiated in her Chevy Chase, Md., home yesterday morning. Her husband, Kenneth D. Scates, discovered the body. He is employed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

According to the report of County Policeman Windsor Poole, the woman was lying across three chairs in front of the stove, with a pillow under her head. He said that all the doors and windows in the room were closed. Mr. Scates said that his wife had no reason to end her life and denied that she had committed suicide.

The couple only last Monday had moved into their Chevy Chase home from Washington. After members of Chevy Chase and Bethesda volunteer fire departments and No. 2 rescue squad had worked for more than an hour to revive Mrs. Scates, but in vain, she was pronounced dead by Dr. Thomas K. Conrad.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the W. W. Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest. Interment will be at Fairfax Court House, Va.

Goldenberg Executives Hold Monthly Dinner

The Executive Club of Goldenberg's department store, composed of the establishment's officials and buyers, held its monthly dinner last night at the Hotel Occidental. Addresses were given by Leo Baum, comptroller, and Arthur Abbott, general manager. Charles L. Finney was master of ceremonies.

Officers of the club are Julian Behrends, president; Louis Mintz, vice president; Arthur Baum, treasurer, and Mrs. Jesse Meredith, secretary.

Nerve Strain Held Race Suicide Help

Smith Professor Says That Social Pace Is Cutting Rate of Births.

New Haven, Conn., April 25 (U.P.). Nervous strain, resulting from the rapid pace of modern society, is reducing the birth rate and is heading man toward race suicide, Prof. Frank H. Hankins, of Smith College, told delegates to the second annual Eastern Sociological Conference at Yale University tonight.

"Nearly all vocations require more special knowledge and technique, a higher degree of mental alertness and greater constancy of attention and mental concentration," he declared.

"We find a progressive increase in the percentage of childless unions in all social classes. Especially since 1850, with larger proportions in city than in country, among upper than lower classes, and among native white of native parents than among the other nativity classes. If one can rely on genealogical studies, the per cent of childless unions is now fully six times higher in this country than in the eighteenth century; for college graduates it is ten times as high."

German Fellowship Is Won By Howard U. Graduate

S. L. Wormley Is Chosen to Study in Leading Universities.

STANTON L. WORMLEY.

Stanton Lawrence Wormley, a graduate of Howard University, was informed yesterday by the committee on selection of the American-German Student Exchange that he had been awarded a fellowship for study in Germany during 1931 and 1932. The aim of the fellowship is to create international good will by creating a tradition of reciprocity and cooperation between the United States and Germany through the study of the institutions and psychologies of the two countries.

The fellowship is available at the Universities of Berlin, Bonn, Breslau, Frankfurt, Freiburg, Gottingen, Halle, Hamburg, Heidelberg, Kiel, Koln, Leipzig, Marburg, Munich, Munster, Tubingen and Warbard, to one or several of which Wormley will be assigned, under auspices of the Institute of International Education.

Wormley was awarded a general scholarship from Dunbar High School to Howard University in 1926, won a partial scholarship in German there the following year, and is now a university fellow in English. He was captain of the university rifle team for four years, major in the Reserve Officers Training Corps, president of the Officers' Club, president of the Howard Glee Club, member of the National Honor Society, and of the Kappa Mu, which corresponds at Howard to Phi Beta Kappa.

He is the son of Lawrence R. and Mary B. Wormley, of Oakland Crest, Md., and the grandson of James T. Wormley, who operated the famous National Hotel here during the reconstruction era on the site which is now occupied by the Union Trust Co.

White Way Wisdom

By BIDE DUDLEY

NEW YORK, April 25.—Years ago there was a most attractive little prima donna cavorting about in operetta, musical comedy or whatever else you might like to call it. She was extremely popular for a long time and then she dropped from view. And many theatergoers asked: "What's become of Alice Nielsen?"

The other day I learned Miss Nielsen was living in New York and, after arranging matters by telephone, dropped in to her apartment for a call. I was surprised. Alice Nielsen doesn't look much older than she did eighteen years ago, or thereabouts, when I saw her at the Broadway Theater, Denver. She has gained just a teeny weeny bit of weight, but there isn't a line in her face and her smile is just as fetching as ever.

"Well, you!" I said, rather commandingly, "you sit down and tell me what your plans are, if any."

Intends to Sing Again.

"I intend to sing again," she replied. "My voice is fundamentally just as sound as it ever was, but there is rust on the vocal cords. I'm having that removed by a competent vocal instructor and it won't be long now until I blossom forth again."

"Do you mean you're going to do some more operettas like 'The Fortune Teller?'" I asked.

"No—the stage is not for me any more. I'm going to do radio and concert work. I may make another concert tour, but that's all. Modern musical comedies are not for me. I couldn't play Winnie the Poo in 'The Ice Man's Bride' to save my neck."

Miss Nielsen has living with her a young woman named Stella Power, who was a protege of Melba's. Now she is being looked after in a musical way by Miss Nielsen, who was a great friend of the noted Australian diva. So popular is Miss Nielsen with the social sets hereabouts that she seems to spend half her time at parties.

"I called you up three times yesterday," said a man to her recently, "and each time I was told your were out having a whack at the social whirl. Why don't you stay at home now and then—kid?"

On a "Follies" Piano.

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD has engaged Helen Morgan, who is America's best piano-sitting moaner, to appear in the new "Follies." He has promised to star her in a musical comedy after she plays this engagement. It is understood Miss Morgan has requested a gold-cloth pillow to use in sitting on the piano. Mr. Ziegfeld will have in the show, also, Hal Le Roy, the dancing sensation who knocked Broadway a twister in the late lamented "The Gang's All Here."

Incidentally, George White, who is staging an edition of his "Scandals," has had an eye cocked in the direction of the Ziegfeld bailwick and is doing some engaging of "names" himself. He has signed Everett Marshall, barytone, who recently resigned from the Metropolitan Opera Company. Also engaged for the White show is Betty Compton, who is not unknown to fame. It looks as though the Messrs. Zeigfeld and White are in a race for talent. They never send each other greeting cards at Christmas time.

"Private Lives" Continues.

ALTHOUGH Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence are to step out of the Coward comedy, "Private Lives," now at the Times Square Theater, on May 9, the play will go on. At that time the American rights will become the property of Archie Selwyn and he will put Otto Kruger and Madge Kennedy in the abandoned parts. Next season this pair will tour and there probably will be other companies presenting "Private Lives." Mr. Coward and Miss Lawrence, when they first opened here, promised to play only twelve weeks. They love their leisure in the good old summer time.

Brian Drops In.

Donald Brian dropped in to see me the other day and began reminiscing He went back to the opening of "The Merry Widow," in which he won much fame as Prince Danilo, and told me some curious facts. He said that his salary was only $100 a week and that of Ethel Jackson, the original Sonia, only $75. The highest salary in the company was paid Robert Graham, comedian. It was $125 a week.

"In those days," said Mr. Brian, "that was real money."

"What would you ask to appear as the Prince now?" I queried.

"Oh, $1,000 a week might tempt me," he replied.

Ethel Jackson, by the way, is still acting now and then, but she has not attempted to sing for a long, long time. For several years she conducted a theatrical agency in Philadelphia Now, however, she is living in New York. Brian is just finishing an engagement in a comedy called "Joy of Living." He sang not, neither did he dance in it. The play did not ring the bell, but it wasn't the fault of the cast.

Too Many Toots.

LEE SHUBERT has requested Dr. Henry Moscowitz, head of the League of New York Theaters, to suggest to Police Commissioner Mulrooney that he have his bluecoats order the taxi drivers in the theatrical district to stop tooting their horns unnecessarily while plays are going on. Mr. Shubert says the noise constitutes a nuisance that interferes with the shows. He's right, too.

The other night I came upon four taxi men all tooting. I asked one what was the matter.

"Nothing!" he replied. "We're just trying to harmonize 'The Last Rose of Summer.'"

Big Benefits.

The Lambs had their annual public gambol last Sunday night at the Metropolitan Opera House and cleaned up something like $25,000. Next Sunday the National Vaudeville Artists will put on a big show at the opera house. They expect to make it pay handsomely for their sick and benefit funds.

Burlesque Everywhere.

Burlesque still has Manhattan in its grip. There are two shows in one block on West Forty-second street, two in Harlem, one on the lower East Side and one at the old Fifth Avenue Theater at Broadway and Twenty-eighth street. They all report fair business. And are they hot?

In addition to all this, Bernard Sobel, the gentlemanly Ziegfeld press agent, is writing a book called "Burlicue," which will trace the honorable and undraped profession of burlesque from its inception to its present-day splash.

than those actuating Josephus and Cam. They are against Raskob because he is wet and wants the Democrats to write a wet plank into their platform next year. Jim is against Raskob in spite of the fact that he is a wet. Jim has no complaint at all to make against Raskob's wetness.

Jim's objection to Raskob is that he is too Republican. He contends that Raskob is a Democrat only in his capacity for stirring up trouble. Raskob's economic beliefs, says Jim, are those of a Republican Old Guardsman. He wants an old-fashioned, low-tariff, trust-baiting Democrat in the chairmanship.

I look for Raskob to walk the plank a day or two after the Democrats adjourn their 1932 convention.

Saturday.

Dr. Joseph Irwin France, of Maryland, announces his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination and there you get a fair measure of the opposition to President Hoover's renomination within the Republican party.

Dr. France's candidacy is, in fact, a joke. In the language of one of my slangy young colleagues, it won't get to first base. He won't have the Maryland delegation behind him and I am willing to wager that he won't get half a dozen votes in the Republican convention next year.

France is a former senator. I knew him well when he served from 1917 until 1923. He went down to defeat before William Cabell Bruce, who in turn lost out in the Hoover landslide of 1928. It is somewhat difficult to classify France politically. There is a good bit of the radical about him and if he were in the Senate today he probably would be a member of the insurgent bloc. But when he held office his inherent Maryland conservatism asserted itself every now and then and lined him up on the side of the Old Guard.

As a speaker he is a great desk-pounder. In the Senate he was a filibusterer par excellence. On at least one occasion, he proved a valuable ally to old "Fighting Bob" La Follette in forcing an extra session of Congress. That was in 1919, when the League of Nations was the burning issue of the hour.

The surprising thing about Dr. France's announcement is that he got it on the front page of nearly every newspaper in the land and that, it must be conceded, is something of an achievement for a former senator after eight years in retirement.

Jouett Shouse is in the West pleading for the manumission of the farmers. That's a good word for the farm relievers to take up and hurl from the hustings at the bewildered voters next year It is just as euphonious as debenture and equally as entrancing as equalization fee. of a spring coat, owned by Mrs. Jones, for the purpose. She perforce had to buy another, for Joe would not be displaced. He has started filling the pocket with scraps of paper he has found about the place. When anything is put in the pocket which he does not like he immediately takes it out, with much complaining chirping.

The bird takes his bath under a running tap in the apartment bathroom. When the bath is completed to his satisfaction he flies to Mr. Jones' hair, which he uses as a turkish towel. Having dried his feathers, he then disports himself about the apartment in sheer exuberance of joy.

At breakfast time he insists on sharing Mr. Jones' toast and eggs.

The family canary is kept in a cage because on the occasions when he has been released to fly about the apartment he has become so frightened as to injure himself. He and Joe are famous friends, however, and the canary always has an appreciative audience in the other bird when the songster trills one of his liquid lays. Joe can not sing, but he knows good music when he hears it.

"I can not decide," Mr. Jones said, "whether Joe thinks himself human or that I am just another bird, without wings. I really believe that he sometimes tries to induce me to share the nest he has built in my wife's coat pocket."

Toward strangers the bird is quite friendly and joyfully lights on their hands, feet and shoulder. He likes their attention and fairly outdoes himself to show them all of his tricks. He likes to show them his nest and the treasure trove of strings and bits of paper he has stored there.

Mr. Jones plans to take the bird to Europe with him, as Joe is quite contented in even strange places if his human friends are about to care for him.

Sentences Imposed In 10 Liquor Cases

Heavy Fines or Imprisonment Are Meted Out in Police Court.

Ten violators of the liquor laws were sentenced in Police Court yesterday. Several drew down stiff sentences. Assistant United States Attorney David Hart, who prosecuted the cases, almost cleared up his docket with the ending of the ten cases.

Thomas Woodstock, 21 years old, was given the option of paying a $350 fine or of spending 90 days in jail on a charge of possession. Robert E. Coleman, 25 years old, was given $200 or 60 days on two charges—transportation and possession.

Two Negroes, Thomas Gorham and Raymond Newton, were awarded each $500 or 60-day fines for possession. Earl Thompson was sentenced to $200 or 60 days, and Lewis E. Carter was told to pay a fine of $350 or do 90 days. On a second offense of possession, Raymond Diggs was informed he might pay a fine of $300 or serve 60 days. William F. Dorsey and Arthur Thomas Wood each got $100 or 30 days, and Charles Harris Gordon was awarded $50 or 30 days for possession.

NEW CHART SHOWS GROWTH OF CHILDREN

on under grinding teeth of elephants has been increasing. The enamel grows in ridges.

If these ridges could be stretched out like an accordion, the length of enamel a million years ago would be about 2 feet. But it had lengthened to 26 feet by the time of Cro-Magnon man, which was about 12,000 years ago. Dr. Osborn stretched paper samples of his accordion calendar before the scientists, and the longest were nearly as wide as the room.

"This length had grown centimeter by centimeter during the estimated 1,000,000 years of the age of man," he said. "As the research proceeds we shall probably be able to ascertain just how long it took to produce a centimeter of enamel length."

Such timing will make the calendar. It can be applied to dating man because his bones have been found principally in association with the bones of ancient elephants. Elephant records go back 20,000,000 years with man found thus far mostly in the last million.

The enamel calendar, said Dr. Osborn, gives the age of the Piltdown fossil man in England as about 1,250,000 years. The Peking man is believed contemporaneous with this Britisher, but the elephant calendar has not been used in China.

Dr. Hobbs told of winter sandstorms in Greenland as bad as those of scorching deserts. They occur at the edge of the glacier, near a University of Michigan observation station, where they are laying down rich deposits of top soil. Dr. Hobbs said the Greenland sandstorms probably duplicate the glacial action which deposited the $300-an-acre farm land of the Mississippi Valley thousands of years ago.

U. S. EMPLOYES ADD TO EMPLOYMENT FUND

$1,655.03; 3,327 averaged $1,913.31; 971 averaged $2,228.88; 324 averaged $2,511.25; 119 averaged $2,847.67; 78 averaged $3,128.53; 35 averaged $3,433.25, and 66 averaged $4,226.74.

A total of 27,757 employes have been retired in the ten years. Of this number 20,892 were retired for age and 6,865 for disability, but the age figure includes involuntary separations and it is estimated that not more than 19,000 have been retired actually because of age.

Of the total put on the retirement rolls in the ten years 9,513 have died. The average age of the 949 persons retired because of age in 1930 was 76 years.

Of the annuitants 34.3 per cent died prior to last June 30. Nearly 40 per cent of those retired for disability have died and it is estimated that the death rate will continue to be high because of the advanced age of so many.

RUSSIAN SLAVERY CHARGED

saw before. He probably has done all of his peeping by now and has found that cagey Russia has simply loaded up a cargo of good, honest, union timber at Leningrad and sent it on over here, while Stalin slyly thumbs his nose at Secretary Mellon and the White House and the powerful lumber writer, Mr. Frank A. Connolly.

One cargo never made a case against Russia any more than the proverbial swallow foretold the advent of spring. A dozen of the pesky birds were tugging away at my sweet peas a week ago, and then came this cold wave. But the potential thing is that Russia has defied Uncle Sam under the law and has begun his threat against the American lumber industry, to be followed by his threat against American agriculture and American labor.

Your head runs round and round as you listen to the importance of the lumber industry in the general economy of American society at large. It is an $8,000,000,000 industry: it employs 400,000 people; it pays the railroads $400,000,000 a year in freight rates; it sustains probably one-tenth of our 120 millions of population.

Can Also Dump Rye.

American agriculture takes a squint at these figures and says that she must take a hand in the game, as she feeds those ten or twelve million people. And more than that, if Soviet Russia can dump lumber into America to demoralize and paralyze the industry, she can also dump wheat and rye.

And those industries which work in metals shiver when they think of the peril if ever Russia is enabled to dump her manganese and iron and copper ores into the hopper where we draw our raw materials.

Not the least vibrant of those who have joined in the terrible hissing against this invasion of American markets with slave-made goods and convict-made products is organized labor, which sees some of its own imperilled by the threat against the lumber industry.

We may think that we can live an isolated life, far apart from other countries, able to feed and clothe ourselves and live off each other; but this Russian threat rather knocks that thought into a cocked hat. We are a part of the world family, and we can not disown the relationship.

Many Affidavits Filed.

However, that is international politics, which belongs in another realm of thought. The question now is: How do we know that Russia has enslaved her people and that she is trying to dump on the world convict-made goods at prices below the cost of production in this country, even minus the cost of freight to the nearest port?

Somewhere in the archives of the State Department there are enough affidavits and there is enough cumulative evidence to prove the case against Russia. With all of her foresight and marvellously efficient espionage system, Russia has not been able to keep spies out of her borders nor succeeded in preventing those whom she has enslaved in one form or another from letting the outside world know what is going on inside of the wall that hedges about the czar's once broad acres. In the very shipment that lies at the dock at Providence there may be just one board on which some convict or some person cruelly forced to servile labor has written a heart-breaking story of the suffering of himself and of his fellows in the slave and convict camps of Russia. More than once such a board has turned up in the various ports of the world.

Much of this forced labor is composed of political prisoners, who are sent into exile or to those horrible camps under this section of the criminal code, amended June 28, 1929:

"* * * Refusal to do forced service, national tasks or work of national importance; for the first offense—a fine imposed by the pertinent government organ up to five times the value of the imposed task, compulsory service of labor; for the second offense—imprisonment or compulsory labor for a period not exceeding one year. For the same acts committed as a result of a conspiracy of a group of persons, accompanied by active resistance to the government organ in charge of the enforced service, tasks or work—imprisonment not exceeding two years with confiscation of the whole or part of property with or without banishment from locality."

400,000 Political Prisoners.

Under this cruel, cruel law as many as 400,000 political prisoners, it is asserted in affidavits, are at work in the lumber camps in Siberia and in Russia, cutting timber for which they are paid no wage, fed a pound of black bread and a few cups of cabbage soup a day and clad in tatters.

Mr. Bahr went all over Europe and spent several years collecting evidence in the form of sworn statements from escaped Russian convicts which bear out the general charge of cruelty and peonage and slavery and forced labor. This evidence he filed with the State Department, and much of it has been given to a committee of the House of Representatives which is making a study of the whole question, pending action on the Kendall Bill, which is Uncle Sam's final answer to the Soviet threat.

Frank Connolly, after digesting and sleeping with these affidavits, has summarized the whole body of evidence for the lumber industry in this pregnant paragraph:

"Soviet Russia can afford to sell much of her produce, especially her lumber, in any of the world's markets at little more than the cost of freight on the cargoes. The lands on which her timber grows—and her timber lands alone are larger than the whole area of the United States—are confiscated. The raw material costs her nothing. Her labor for turning trees into timber and timber into lumber and then loading it on boats costs the price of a few cups of cabbage soup and a loaf of bread per day for each required laborer.

"Such laborers work from sunup to sundown and through the night if their allotted tasks are not finished. They are clothed sparsely, often in rags. If they disobey their guards, they are whipped, put to severer tasks that frequently bring on death, put to death for trying to escape or for certain forms of disobedience and their scarred bodies left before the doors of the labor billets to be walked over by other laborers entering and leaving as a lesson in discipline."

Reads Like Abolition Literature.

If you did not know that Mr. Connolly is an Irishman, and has to carry around with him a translator to interpret his parts of speech, you might get the idea that he was working on an old abolition typewriter. This reads exactly like the abolition literature of the hectic age of 1830-60; but in this case it is gospel truth, as is borne out by the reports of hundreds and hundreds of other writers, who need no interpreter and who write on portable machines which were not even invented in the nineteenth century.

Forty years ago, in the year 1890, to be exact, our Government took action, by passing a law, to prevent unfair practices against American labor and American industry. This law was strengthened in the Hawley-Smoot tariff act. Of course what was in the mind of Senator Smoot and his associates when they put that set of teeth in the tariff act was forbidding the entry of rubber from Sumatra and the tobacco from the same island, the former going into our tires and the latter into our 5-cent cigars.

There was a report circulated about the lobby of the Senate that slavery in one form or another existed in Sumatra. It would never do, then, to let Sumatra wrapper enter America and compete with the Connecticut wrapper and the Alabama and Florida shade wrapper. That was one time the North and the South shouldered arms and marched together from "Baxter street to Avenue A."

No thought was given to Russia lumber in the framing of that clause, reliance being placed on the old law of 1890 to protect lumber. But when Russia made her grand threat to seize and hold the American lumber industry by underselling the American market, the realization of the menace became a fact, and a new law, known as the Kendall Law, was framed and passed the House, only to die in the Senate for lack of time to get it off the calender. The Kendall Law is quite another thing. It may be means of emancipating the slaves of Russia. At least it will keep Russia out of the American lumber market.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER.

It is doubtless safe to assert that the conclusion of the District of Columbia Chess League's five-man team tournament left its 66 participants with a feeling of regret that the end was at last reached. It would appear that the entrants in the event are well nigh unanimous in their intent to enter the league's five-man tournament scheduled for next year and it is expected that several teams, not entered this year, will contest in the next tournament.

As we see it, tourneys of this type are much more productive of local chess enthusiasm than are those in which the entrance list is limited to players of recognized ability. One of the prime motives for the team tourneys should be, in fact, to make it possible for players, particularly players who do not habitually take part in tournament play, to enjoy an occasional evening in competition with their chess brethren similarly inclined. The participation of this type of "occasional" chess player in an event of interest not requiring too much of his time should be paramount even to the tasks of assembling "winning" teams composed of "strong" players. Should efforts in the latter direction become too prominent, it is to be doubted whether the team tournaments will fulfill the mission for which they are intended.

In the tourney recently concluded, for example, it seems to us that of all the teams entered, Friendship Heights and Chevy Chase are the ones deserving of greatest praise. Both these teams were composed essentially of the type of player which the tournament was intended to attract. And the fact that the Friendship Heights players, despite their final showing as a team, enjoyed the tournament and put forth strenuous efforts to avoid forfeiting games, makes them deserving of recognition for their sportsmanship. Here's hoping the team will engage in future competitions and possess more numerous reserve players than it had in the past event.

The Agriculture victory in the past tournament was the result of the play of Kalmbach, McClure, Kurtz and Burch, who between them won 19½ and lost 3½ games. Compare this with the record of their remaining seven players, whose totals show 2½ wins and 7½ losses. No other team in the tourney could show four such consistent winners.

George Washington owed its finishing second to the play of L. P. Sherfy, R. Sherfy, H. Queen and C. F. Barwick, who garnered a score of 15½ to 8½, while their four comembers totaled 2 wins and 4 losses. For Standards Petrenko Mutchler and Tucker scored 9½ points, dropping 3½, while the seven others who took part won 9 and lost 11. Dr. Ransom, Davidson and Parmelee proved the bulwarks in the Falls Church team, scoring 11 to 3, while six other team members practically undid their work by scoring 4 wins against 12 losses.

Simmons and Kohloss were the principal point scorers for Chevy Chase, totaling 6 wins and 6 losses, while their six teammates won 7 and lost 17. For Mount Pleasant, Gleason and deLesdernier totaled 7½ to 4½, while their ten partners scored 7½ wins and 11½ losses. Latterner the only player to take part in all of Friendship's matches, emerged with a score of 3 to 3, while his seven teammates won 5 and lost 20 games.

Only 4 of the 66 entrants emerged from the tournament with a clean score among those who played more than one game. These were Kalmbach, McClure, Petrenko and Whitaker. Four others emerged without the loss of a single game, but had one or more draws scored against them. These fortunate ones were Critchfield, Ransom, Wolfe and Mutchler. The complete and final scores of the competing players is appended, grouped according to the number of games in which they took part. For the sake of refreshing readers' memories the final standings of the teams are repeated.

Those participating in only one game, and winning, were: Mount Pleasant, B. Bogoljubow, F. T. Parsons, H. W. Wiley, jr.; George Washington, J. E. Corey; Chevy Chase, A. Kahn; Fals Church, G. Wedderburn; Friendship Heights, E. M. Weeks. Only two players drew their lone game, namely, Dr. W. W. Skinner, of Agriculture, and W. W. Eveshnikoff, of Standards. Players losing their lone game were: Agriculture, F. A. Czonka, Dr. G. W. Hervey, Dr. K. F. Kellerman, P. H. Royster; Mount Pleasant, T J. Buford; Friendship Heights, A. L. Flint; Bureau of Standards, H. C. Harris; George Washington, H. Lineweaver; Falls Church, J. Trabold

And, lest it be overlooked, only three games of the scheduled 109 were forfeited in the entire tournament— a record which in itself bespeaks the interest of the players. This last tournament was the initial venture of the District League. Entrants took part without one penny for fees. All future events of the league will, however, be open to members only. Inasmuch as the cost of membership is only $1 per annum and entitles the members to participation in a number of events, including play against visiting master players simultaneously, we fail to see how any of those who have already participated can fail to register as members. And for those who have not yet partaken the incentive is great. All applications for membership should be mailed to G. E. Bishop, 2100 I street northwest.

Junior Championship Tourney.

As a result of the play during the past week only three competitors remain in the District of Columbia Chess League's tourney to determine the junior titular holder. Victories by Drysdale, Harris and de Lesdernier eliminated, respectively, Lewis, Pike and Hickam. Drysdale, who is leading the field with five wins, no draws or losses, rests during the week, while Harris and de Lesdernier contest in the semifinals to determine who shall battle Drysdale for the title. The standing of the players:

Player.	W.	L.	Player.	W.	L.

Schles'ger	2	2	Shelton	0	2
Lewis	1½	1½

Beautiful Ending.

Some years back Carlos Torre, then the sensation of the international chess arena, was asked what he considered his best game. In reply, with modesty unbecoming a chess player, he produced the appended game, with an ending of unusual and rare beauty, which he lost to E. B. Adams in New Orleans about 1922.

Solutions to Problems.

The key to No. 422, two-mover by C. C. Bettinger, is B-Kt8. Among those sending in solutions were Jacob Frech, J. W. Harris, E. L. Fox.

Jacob Frech writes, "Bettinger's problem, 422, a gem, generates about 40,000 series among which are marvelously concealed fifteen forced mates, many of them being spectacular and seemingly impossible. White has choice of 43 moves; one of these is B-Kt8. I soon tried it and somehow became convinced that a certain one of black's moves is a good defense. I then unsuccessfully tried all of white's moves with the view of proving the problem to be unsound. However, logic's teachable equivalent for sagacity and genius in the solving of problems reminded me that I had not yet tried systematic adequate reverification of premises, and I soon inductively found the following major premise applicable to this species of problem, viz.: Every problem in which white only can force some one of the following series: 1. B-Kt8; 2. mate. Q-K5 or Q6 or 7, or B4 or 6, or P(Q2)-K3 or B3 is a two-move problem for which only B-Kt8 is the key move. To successfully solve a chess problem and to find the relevant major premise for that problem are two names or synonyms for virtually the same intellectual process or activity, because the relevant middle term for every problem is logically the predicate of the minor premise and the subject of the major premise, or in other words is the heart of each of the two premises."

Conflicting Demands Of Women Puzzling Members of Congress

Schools of Thought, Formulating Legislation at Spring Conventions, Expected to Impress Their Wishes at Winter Session With Threats of Vote Reprisals.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

ONE result of the women's meetings in Washington and throughout the country this spring is the sending back into States, delegates and workers with firm determination to tell their representatives and senators just what the women want and what they expect of them. Of course the law maker may be excused for being a little confused as groups of women from many different schools of feminine thought will visit them and promise dire election results if they stand for or against certain measures. Some of them will insist that the only hope for the legislators' safe political future is to support certain bills while others will tell them that this support will sound their political death knell.

Certain of the women organizations working in the State Legislatures in the States are campaigning for election bills and child welfare measures, permanent registration, maternity and infancy hygiene, fair wage for women laws and women on juries in the States where this is not allowed.

Still another group are in favor of the passage in all of the States of the taking of the oath of allegiance by all teachers as requirement for appointment to or retention of positions, flag codes, and all laws that tend to uphold the patriotic ideas of the Nation.

For Equal Rights.

Of course the busy women of the National Woman's Party never cease their efforts either in the legislatures of the national Congress to have the "equal rights" bills for which they stand passed.

When the United States Congress convenes next winter the women who have been attending the spring patriotic conventions in Washington will be represented by a group of enthusiastic workers who want the United States naval construction bill as allowed under the London Treaty to be the first order of business of both houses immediately after organization. Another group closely affiliated with this group will be those who wish to have the word Communist included in the word anarchist in the amendment to the United States Constitution providing for the deportation of undesirable foreigners residing here.

The members of the House and Senate will come to Congress this session well aware of the fact that the women of the Nation consider the "wet" and "dry" question one of paramount importance. Before that time they will be well schooled in all the various schools of woman thought on this question.

Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, left her home in Maryland last week with a delegation from Maryland and the District of Columbia to attend the biennial council meeting of the General Federation of Clubs, which will take place in Phoenix, Ariz. The sessions will open tomorrow and last until Saturday.

Discuss World Problems.

National and international problems of women will be discussed, and the part women of the federated clubs will take in the many issues of women during the next year. The General Federation of Women's Clubs is "dry" as an organization, but, of course, there are many leaders who are for prohibition reform. They take part in the prohibition battle as advocates of law observance as the part of good citizens.

In their desire to learn the viewpoint of women of the world on many international problems those in charge of the program have asked women of other nations who happen to be in this country to address the council meeting.

Miss Henni Forchhammer, of Denmark, has come to this country especially to talk to the American women. Miss Forchhammer is president of the Danish National Council of Women and has just received from the King of Denmark the highest decoration which can be bestowed upon a woman in her country. This honor was given in recognition of her many years' service for education, suffrage and protection of women, particularly those girls and women who were deported from Europe during the war and held in Moslem harems.

One of the important discussions at the council will be the report of Mrs. Howard Green, chairman of the division of art, who has asked the club women of the Nation to express their protests against the "violence, grotesqueness and distortion of so-called modern art."

Art Held Gone Mad.

"It is art gone mad and is meaningless," Mrs. Green declares. "Everything comes out of Paris the worst and the best. France produces more geniuses and more idiots than any country in the world. Just at present ultra-modernism, surrealism, classicism, romanticism paintings are dumped on America. These cults are lauded to the skies and the 'snobs' pay big prices because they think this 'art' is the fashion."

Mrs. Green's division is making a campaign toward the appreciation of art in the home and the community and for that purpose has arranged an outline of art exhibits and lectures for use of the State and city federations.

Sodality Union

The Right Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, rector emeritus of the Catholic University of America, addressed the Sodality Union Catholic Literary Club last Monday evening, his subject being, "The Temporal Power of the Pope."

The Rev. John J. Coady, D. D., moderator of the club, delivered the address of welcome to a large and appreciative audience, who had assembled to hear Bishop Shahan, an historian of note, expound the true definition of the Pope's temporal power. In the course of his brief remarks Dr. Coady thanked Bishop Shahan for the great favor he had conferred upon the Sodality Union by addressing its members upon a very important subject. Dr. Coady also expressed his pleasure in the interest manifested in the club by its members, commenting especially upon those who are giving much thought and study of the history of the Catholic Church.

Representatives of the various study clubs in the City of Washington were special guests of the evening, including the National Council of Catholic Women, the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, the Bregy Study Club and the Study Club of St. Gabriel's Parish.

Mrs. James F. Delaney was chairman of the reception committee, assisted by Miss Mary Mattingly, Miss Addie Wathen, Miss Helen Anthony, Miss Christina Hilbrandt and Miss Mary Mudd.

The Rev. Joseph V. Buckley, spiritual director of the Sodality Union, was among the special guests.

University Women

Frau Kiep, wife of the Consul General of New York, will be the guest-speaker at tea Monday at 4 p. m. She will speak on "Germany of Today." Dr. Alice Merrill, hostess, will be assisted by alumnae from the University of California, Mills College, Pomona College, Stanford University and the University of Southern California.

The junior group will give a formal dinner-bridge Tuesday evening at 7. Miss Mildred Fisher will be hostess. Reservations should be made through the dining room office before 7 p. m. Monday.

Dr. Kathryn McHale, executive and educational secretary of the American Association of University Women will speak Wednesday evening, at a dinner arranged in her honor by the education committee, on "Ventures in Progressive College Education." The dinner will be at 7 and reservations must be made before 7 p. m. Tuesday.

Those wishing to join the walk this afternoon must be at Hyattsville (Md.) car line station at 3 p. m. to go to the home of Mrs. V. K. Chestnut. Thence a walk will be conducted by V. K. Chestnut, and a picnic supper served at 6 p. m. Further information may be obtained from M. A. McMahon, Columbia 0621.

Women's Guild

Mrs. P. M. Anderson, president of the Women's Guild of American University, greeted a large number of members at their regular meeting in Hurst Hall on last Tuesday. Mrs. D. O. Kinsman reported changes in the constitution which will be voted upon in the next annual meeting. Mrs. Ellery Stowell, the chairman of the fellowship committee, recently entertained the following foreign students to luncheon at the Cosmos Club: Mr. T. Y. Yun, of Korea; Mr. Juan Silva, of the Philippine Islands; Mr. T. K. Wu, of China; Mr. T. Y. Kim, of Korea; Mr. Renato da Launha, of Brazil, and Miss Marie Terreal, of France. The new members admitted were Mrs. Arthur Wright, Mrs. Edwin Dice, and Mrs. Nevins. Mrs. George B. Woods announced a tea which her group gave on Friday at the home of Mrs. Frederick Brown Harris.

Zonta Club

The weekly meeting of the Washington Zonta Club was held Wednesday noon at 1 o'clock at the Raleigh Hotel. Grace Landon, secretary of the club, presided. Chrisabel Hill and Genevieve B. Wimsatt were guests of Elizabeth Beresford, and Charlotte White attended with Abby Owen.

The club was particularly fortunate in having as its guest speaker Miss Caroline B. Sherman, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Agriculture. Miss Sherman spoke most interestingly and entertainingly on "The Development of Rural Life Fiction." She pointed out the fact that although rural life has been a factor in fiction for only about fifteen years, it now has a strong interest hold on the reading public and with such authors as Edna Ferber, Willa Cather and Hamlin Garland, using rural life as themes for their writings, it is destined to fill a much more important place in the field of contemporary fiction.

Next week's meeting will be the semiannual meeting of the club at which the election of officers takes place. The meeting will be held at the Dodge Hotel at 6:30 p. m.

W. C. T. U.

The Cleveland Park Union will meet on Monday afternoon at the Wisconsin Avenue Baptist Church at Forty-first and Fessenden streets. Mr. J. Raymond Schmidt will be the speaker. Hostesses are Mesdames E. J. Fox, C. R. Ferguson, Robert Wilson and A. L. Snowden.

Mrs. J. M. Doran, national director of nonalcoholic fruit products, was the principal speaker on a radio program last Monday over WJSV. Mrs. Doran, who has been called the perfect hostess, is the author of the book "Prohibition Punches." Mrs. Charles Bair, director of medal contests, introduced the speakers.

Miss Helen Donofrio sang four solos. She was accompanied by Mrs. Edith Virden Smith.

Mrs. N. M. Pollock, president of the District W. C. T. U., gave a three-minute talk on the work done here

Latest Creations From Paris for The Post Readers

Left to right—No. 1, a Jane Regny design evening gown of black cire lace trimmed with ruffles; No. 2, designed by Mirande, navy blue jersey, white pique collar and blue leather belt; No. 3, chartreuse green satin evening gown, incrusted skirt, by Patou, and No. 4, by Mirande, navy skirt and bolero, knife pleating trim, dotted white blouse.

PETTICOATS MOLD SUMMER FASHIONS

Pajamas and Shorts Tend to Become More Victorian Feminine.

By JANE EADS.

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—The "petticoat influence" may be taken literally as far as feminine costuming is concerned this season. For that relic of the days when modesty was indeed in flower figured importantly in showings of summer fashion at the Hotel Astor by the garment retailers of America.

And along with this strictly feminine garment there appeared numerous other accessories to aid and abet the "womanly woman" in her seasonable metamorphosis from the athletic or flapper type.

Little false curls to cover the shaven neck; cobwebby scarfs to disguise a brawny sun tan; long, trailing skirts to hide an audacious ankle, with fans and kerchiefs and parasols to add charm were featured.

More Feminine in Design.

Pajamas and shorts for sports wear, however, are still in vogue, but even these are becoming more feminine in design. In a paradise of pajamaed mannequins the trouser garments were so wide as to give the semblance of skirts. Fashioned from soft silks, pleated chiffon, satins and velvets, most of these were shown with chic little jackets.

Even the strictly tailored street costumes are on the wane, suits and coats having more of the dressmaker touch. Gaily patterned and brightly colored scarfs, generous chiffon kerchiefs and frilly lace trimmed collar and cuff sets relieve what mannish severity these costumes may have retained.

Brilliant Reds Shown.

Cotton lace and embroidered organdy in all the pastel shades will be most popular for evening wear, the retailers predict. White crepe, black silk lace and chiffons in citron shades and brilliant reds will also liven the most fashionable gatherings.

Sleeves are a new feature of afternoon and evening frocks. Puffed and cuffed and lace trimmed, they are usually but 3 or 4 inches above the elbow. Large sleeves are either flaring at the wrist or leg-of-mutton shaped above the elbow.

Bathing suits are extremely revealing, though gypsy skirts in the brightest hues, long capes and huge kerchiefs will be worn to protect the rose-petal and milk-white complexion which milady will need with her new ensembles.

Two-Piece Sport Frock Aid to Tennis Player

London, April 25 (A.P.).—Sports frocks are being made this year with an eye to that moment when the wearer faces defeat but is still determined to win.

The 1931 tennis frock has a cross-over bodice and a wrap skirt with a scarlet and white spotted handkerchief at the neck and a matching sash slotted around the waist.

Brown, White Popular For Spring Apparel

Paris, April 25 (A.P.).—Brown and white is one of the most fashionable color combinations of the spring.

Brown and white sports jackets of rough wool are worn with white flannel skirts, brown gloves and scarves with white crepe evening gowns and brown hats with white crepe dresses flecked with brown.

Now Frocks Boast Real Posies on Them

Paris, April 25 (A.P.).—Real posies are flowering on Parisian frocks where once only artificial blooms grew.

One of the newest dancing frocks of white chiffon has a basket of brilliants embroidered on the left side, into which real roses or orchids may be tucked when milady steps out o' nights.

Short Talks Found Best, Says G. O. P. Woman Chief

Eighteen Minutes Is Ample Length and Beyond That Unfruitful, Mrs. Lenna L. Yost, Republican Worker, Says.

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Lenna L. Yost, director of the women's division of the Republican national committee, probably makes as brief a speech as any woman in public life.

In her home State of West Virginia she is noted for the shortness of her talks. Men especially have commented admiringly on this trait.

"Eighteen minutes is ample length for a speech on any formal occasion," she says. "Make it longer than that and it becomes unfruitful."

In her bright, airy office in the Republican national committee headquarters this small, blue-eyed, smartly-attired woman is serenely proceeding in her efforts to organize women over the country just as she has for the last seven months.

There is to be no trumpeting or fireworks about the opening of the Republican women's campaign, Mrs. Yost says. Like "Ol' Man River," it's "rolling along" just as it has been and will be, she says.

The energetic but quiet woman leader already has made organization forays into several Eastern States and will go soon to Pennsylvania. After that she gradually will extend her activities. She works both in the Washington office and in the field. She speaks to nonpartisan as well as Republican women.

She does not deal in personalities, makes few prophecies. Men of much political influence, however, confer with her often in the sunlit room where a great bunch of pussy willows spreads a springtime air over her desk.

In a cool green dress with a russet string of beads matching the flowers on her brown straw hat she appears unflurried and confident on the eve of another presidential campaign.

"Our women over the country are putting on just as intensive a campaign right now as they would if it were just before election," she says. "They have been doing it for some time and will continue their smooth work of organization."

Mrs. Yost has been identified with women's activities for many years, serving recently in important political posts. She is much interested in women in industry.

When a young girl she became concerned over the long hours women in West Virginia shops had to be on their feet. She went before the Legislature and helped to secure passage of a bill requiring seats for the workers.

GIRLS FRIENDLY

The second quarterly meeting of the Washington Diocesan Council of the G. F. S. was held at Epiphany Parish Hall, April 10, 1931, at 7:45 p. m. The short service which opened the meeting was led by Mrs. George Pariseau, the new president of the diocese. Miss E. Keyser, first vice president, reported a talk on G. F. S. work while in Florida. Miss Clara Nourse gave a report on the Holiday House situation—its needs, &c. Mrs. A. S. Steuart, the chairman of activities and social service, also gave an interesting report. Mrs. Mary C. D. Johnson reported that the mission work of the diocese was the securing of hospital supplies for a mission in Jackson, Wyoming. Mrs. Johnson is purchasing these at cost price. Thirty dollars still is needed. It is hoped that the branches that have not contributed will be able to help in this work. The national office has as its mission object the building of a church in Hillsboro, Oreg. The diocese will assist in this work. A letter from the publicity chairman, Miss A. H. Gerow, requested more news from the branches and committee chairmen. Miss Keyser held a meeting of candidate associates at her home in which seven branches were represented. Miss Eliza Moncure announced that the next meeting of the Senior Club would be held at the national center on the evening of April 16. A benefit performance at the National Theater will be given for the Senior Club on April 25. The following motion was made, seconded and carried: "Council to contribute $25 for one month's housing of a motherless and friendless girl for whom an appeal was made by the Episcopal City Mission."

The diocesan organization of the Girls' Friendly Society will hold its annual meeting during the first week of May, as follows:

Sunday, May 3—Corporate communion in parish churches. Annual festival service at St. John's, Norwood parish, 4 p. m.

Monday, May 4—Corporate communion, 10 a. m., followed by business meeting, Epiphany Parish Hall.

Tuesday, May 5—Members party, 8 p. m., Christ Church, Washington, G street southeast.

Saturday, May 9—Candidates service and party, 2 p. m., St. John's, Georgetown.

St. Paul's Branch, Rock Creek, was most happy to have Miss Elizabeth Keyser, diocesan associate in charge of candidates, and Mrs. John C. Boyd, diocesan treasurer, visit its candidates' class. Miss Keyser gave the girls a most interesting address on her observations of kindergarten work at Naro, Japan.

The Dramatic Club of St. John's Branch, Georgetown, will give a dance in the Parish Hall, Potomac and O streets northwest, on May 6. Admission, 75 cents per person.

The following persons were guests at the Holiday House the past week: The Misses Katherine and Elva Whitcomb, of Washington; Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Grace Wright, of Washington; Mrs. Belmar, of Pittsburgh; Miss Britton, of Staten Island, New York; Miss Bright, of Mexico City, Mexico; also Mrs. and Miss Milliken, Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Miss Tichenor, Mr. A. R. Shedd, Miss Shedd and Mrs. Elliott.

At the Epiphany Branch Monday night, after the supper and classes, Dr. A. Frances Foye gave a most interesting and instructive talk on "Health and Hygiene." She stressed the need for simple, nourishing food, well chewed; eight hours' sleep at night, and a mental attitude of expecting health and making the right use of it.

Announcement was made of a benefit play called "The Smiling Cow," a farce-comedy to be given by the Eldbrooke Young People's Society, under the auspices of the Epiphany Girls' Friendly Society, on Wednesday night, May 6, at 8 o'clock. The play will be followed by dancing, and tickets at 50 cents each may be obtained from Clyde McKenzie.

On Monday night, April 27, Mrs Mary C. D. Johnson will tell about her trip to Europe with the Gold Star Mothers, and it is hoped that a large assemblage of members and friends will be present. May 4 will be branch talent night.

Flat Fur Scarves in Paris Go With Any Costume

Paris, April 25 (A.P.).—Flat fur scarves, capable of being knotted or tossed carelessly about the wearer's throat, are being worn with every type of costume this spring.

Indian lamb or galyak scarves are worn with tailleurs and coats.

Fuchsia Purple New Color for Blondes

Paris, April 25 (A.P.).—Fuchsia purple is a new exotic shade worn by blondes this season.

Mrs. Edward C. Acheson, jr., one of the sponsors of the color, is appearing at spring parties in an evening gown combining fuchsia purple and mauve.

TRAVELING FROCKS DEFIANT TO CRUSH

Evening Apparel Is Made of Soft Chiffon and Lames Aided With Lace.

Paris, April 25 (A.P.).—Personality plus determines the evening elegance of the girl who travels.

The frocks which she wears to dine and to dance must depend upon color and line for their distinction, for repeated packings eliminate complicated gowns made of crushable soft chiffons and glittering lames.

Lace is the life saver of the traveler's evening wardrobe, while taffeta and triple georgette are popular second favorites. All may be taken from jammed traveling bags to be hung for a half hour over a tub of steaming water and emerge sans wrinkle or fold.

A black lace or heavy georgette frock is almost indispensable to the voyager's kit. It may be worn with various colored flowers tucked into the corsage or scarf, or with numberless bright-hued short jackets and slippers to give a new tone to its appearance.

Ivory, shell-pink, lime-green or pastel blue laces, designed with flounces, and finished with contrasting ribbon belts, are both practical and smart for more formal occasions. Printed crepes in bright or pastel tones offer another pleasing variety to the traveler's evening wardrobe.

A very useful addition is the satin or faille ensemble, designed with a black skirt and incrusted white or pastel bodice. It is accompanied by a black hip-length coat matching the fabric of the skirt. Worn with the coat it is smart for afternoon teas, and without it, it graces a dinner or theater party with distinction.

Crinoline Held Chic For Evening Dresses Worn by Young Girls

White Net Dresses Are Relieved by Shoulder Straps or Bows of Colored Velvet; Calico Has Pleasant Outlook; Lace Worn Over Bathing Suits; Transparent Straws Smart.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE vogue for crinoline is an assured fact, for evening gowns of young girls at least. At the many recent young people's party dainty frocks of net or even tulle had ruffles reenforced by the old-fashioned fabric so that they would "stand out" smartly "old-fashioned."

For those who do not like the bulkiness of the stiff material so beloved of our grandmothers, the new stiffened nets and chiffons can be substituted with, what some women assert, even better effect.

The elusive demure simplicity found in a well made frock of net or organdie, has without doubt accounted for the sudden popularity of this fabric for day time and evening functions.

At a recent dance dresses of ruffled or shirred and tucked organdie were worn by the best dressed girls, and many were the dresses of plain old-fashioned net, not silk net at all. There were dresses, too, of embroidered Swiss bordered with lace in the fashion of long ago.

To be really chic the simple, but by no means inexpensive dresses of these sheer cotton fabrics should be white.

More often than not the white net dresses are relieved by shoulder straps or bows of colored velvet, but not always. Many young girls prefer the perfectly simple frocks, depending for elaboration on the corsage bouquet worn at the waist line or on the shoulder or the costume jewelry.

Evening Gowns More Elaborate.

The matrons, however, are wearing rather more elaborate evening gowns of summery fabrics, of course, but of the finest silver tissue or gold net embroidered in colors or beaded designs. There is a tendency just now to include at least one silver and white brocade dress in the wardrobe and even the young girls like this. The effect is handsome and cool on a warm evening and variety can be attained by costume jewelry, garlands of flowers or chic colored grosgrained slippers of a vivid hue.

Necklines will always be of great importance on an evening gown and just now the straight-across one held across the shoulders by straps seems to be leading the mode. For the semievening dress the bertha and shoulder effects of the material or of lace are still smiled upon by the fashion authorities.

Wash day will mean much more this year than it has for some time from a sartorial viewpoint, for many of the smartest of the summer costumes are the kind which depend for their beauty on careful home laundering. There are many eton or short-coated white linen suits of a crisp but noncrushable variety which look their best when worn with a white Swiss blouse and freshly laundered.

Calico, pink and white and blue and white with tiny figures which have always appeared to the feminine heart seem to have more of a chance to bask in the sun of fashion this season than its cousin gingham. Gingham is hot, some of the women declare, and does not have the freshly laundered dainty effect of an old-fashioned calico. But these calico costumes must be made by an artist and are far removed from the home dressmaker country girl's frock in a motion picture.

Dainty Calico Dresses.

Some of the calico dresses have not only sunbonnets like hats to go with them, but long quilted coats with high collars and sandals and large sport bags. Even suits are made of this material and when they are worn with a modish tucked Swiss blouse they are dainty and summery indeed.

It seems a far cry from calico to lace and yet a certain variety of linen lace of wide rather heavy mesh is being used for sport suits and for dresses for day time wear in white or in colors.

The summer girl of 1931 will not only have a sport dress of calico and one of linen but she will have bathing suits of both fabrics, the lace one being worn over a closely fitted jersey swim suit of the same color.

A finer and more attractive variety of lace is used for the white lace evening frocks which come in the washable category. Some of the dresses have the upper part of this lace and the longer flaring skirt of tucked white net or chiffon.

For the garden party this kind of white lace frock is considered smart, especially when there is a jaunty short jacket of net or chiffon to wear with it.

The vogue for flowered prints can not be dispensed with evidently, for at every smart gathering and in the downtown shopping district this spring-like material is seen on every side either as dresses worn with plain coats or as whole suits worn with white or eggshell colored material.

Spring Apparel of Mrs. Hoover.

Mrs. Hoover is wearing a smart spring ensemble of black lace and chiffon. The dress is of chiffon with a lace yoke and sleeves. With this she wears a black crepe coat with a high roll collar finished with scarf ends. Her hat is a small one with narrow brim.

Mrs. William Butterworth was seen in a handsome evening dress last week made of very fine black net embroidered in all-over flower design in steel beads. This is made with a rounded neckline and no sleeves and a full long skirt. At an afternoon function Mrs. Butterworth wore an ensemble suit of black crepe de chene faced in white. The coat is long and made with a cape effect. Her hat is of black straw with a white ribbon motif at one side.

Mrs. Stanley F. Reed has one of the prettiest of the spring evening gowns of gold metal tissue and ruby brocade. This is made on princess lines and the skirt flares out widely to the floor. Mrs. Reed also has a becoming daytime costume of old blue silk embroidered in blocked designs in black. With this she wears a black hat.

Mrs. Arthur M. Hyde, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, is wearing an evening dress of blue and silver tissue, made on closely fitted lines.

Mrs. Grace Lincoln Hall Brosseau, who is spending several weeks in Washington from her home in Greenwich, Conn., had on at a luncheon a dress of black crepe de chine with tiny floral motifs of old rose. With this she wore a black hat. For a tea Mrs. Brosseau wore a dress of blue chiffon with yoke and sleeves of blue lace. Her hat was a medium sized blue straw one. At one of the evening parties Mrs. Brosseau wore a sunset rose chiffon dress embroidered with crystals and pearls. With this she wore her ruby ornaments.

Costume Often Changed.

Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart as president general of the D. A. R., had to change her costume many times during the congress and presented a very smart appearance on all occasions. Mrs. Hobart wore for one of the sessions a dress of powder blue chiffon made with double tiered skirts and long-hanging sleeves. Her hat matched the dress. For her formal reception in the evening she had on one of the new peach tones in a fine silk lace material made simply, but smartly wide at the hem and with a slight train in the back. On another occasion Mrs. Hobart wore an evening gown of silver net embroidered in steel beads and made on princess lines.

Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock has a modish gown of green material like metal cloth. It is made on softly draped, molded lines.

Mrs. Charles Tuke, of Philadelphia, wore at one of the evening functions of last week a dress of blue chiffon and silver tissue. This was made on long, modish lines. With this she wore a brocaded evening wrap with a high fur collar.

Mrs. Edward Foy looked smart at a luncheon in a suit of black crepe de chine, with which she wore a handmade blouse of turquoise crepe de chine. Her hat for this suit is a rough straw one with a wide brim and two soft flowers at the side.

Mrs. William Sherman Walker had on one day last week a dress of hand-blocked cream and brown and tan silk veiled with a redingote effect of brown chiffon. With this she wore a hat of brown straw.

Mrs. Barnett in Black Silk.

Mrs. George Barnett has an evening dress of black silk, made with a long skirt and a molded waistline.

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor was seen in a dress of silver and bright blue brocade tissue, made with a molded waistline and a very long skirt and a hanging cape effect in the back. Mrs. Grosvenor is also wearing a dress of black chiffon figures in old rose. With this she wears a wide-brimmed black hat.

Mrs. James J. Davis had on at a dinner part a dress of gold and multi-colored tissue, made on princess lines with a very full flare to the long skirt. The neckline is ovaled off and there are no sleeves.

Mrs. Alexander Ennis Patton, of Philadelphia, wore at one of the receptions a dress of flowered brocade made on princess lines. At a luncheon Mrs. Patton had on a dress of black chiffon and lace with a small hat of black straw.

Mrs. Henry B. Joy is wearing an evening dress of black lace, made on princess lines with added flounce on the long skirt to give it width.

Miss Dorothy Sollers looks very girlish in a dress of blue silk with rose and blue motiffs on it. This is made long and has a rounded neckline and no sleeves. With this Miss Sollers wears a Chinese evening wrap.

Miss Charlie Griggs wore at one of the dances for young people a dress of white net embroidered in tiny forget-me-nots and rosebud motifs. The peplumlike hip flounces to the long skirt were stiffened. The dress was held over the shoulders by blue velvet ribbon and there was a narrow belt of blue velvet ribbon.

Ensemble of Red Cloth.

Mrs. William P. Dennis has a smart ensemble of red cloth with which she wears a bliyse of red flat crepe and a red straw hat with a narrow turned down brim.

Mrs. John N. Beavers is wearing a dress of blue and white printed silk made with a surplice bodice filled in with cream lace. With this she wears a small blue straw hat.

Mrs. Robert Lansing had on recently a becoming dress of black crepe de chine, made on princess lines and long and with narrow cape effect over the shoulders.

Mrs. G. Wallace W. Hanger appeared at one of the receptions last week in a dress of champagne colored chiffon with panels of filmy lace of the same delicate shade. Mrs. Hanger has a daytime costume of black crepe de chine faced with white. With this she wears a black straw hat with white flowers on it.

Mrs. Clyde B. Aitchison looks smart in a dress of ruby velvet, made without sleeves and with a rounded neckline and a long skirt.

Mrs. J Robinson Downey has a dress of powder blue chiffon with which she wears a jacket of black velvet with ermine trimming.

Lace on Evening Toilettes.

Miss Ruth Bradley Sheldon, who is spending several weeks in Washington, wore at one of the dinner parties recently a dress of flesh colored lace, made on long lines and with a rounded neckline.

Mrs. John G. Leonardi, of Florida, chose for one of the luncheons recently a dress of lavender brocade, made in coat effect. With this she wore a lavender straw hat with pastel shades of ribbon.

FEATURES OF INTEREST TO WOMEN READERS

Club Women Of District To Broadcast

Federation Program on Air in Forenoon Tomorrow.

The radio program of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock over station WJSV will be given by members of the Women's City Club. Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president, will speak of the "Interests and Activities of the Club." Dean Grace Hays Riley, past president, will speak of the historic home now occupied as the clubhouse, at 736 Jackson place. Mrs. Mary Izant Couch will give interpretative musical selections and Ida Garrett Mattingly will give a dramatic reading. Mrs. Grattan Kerans, first vice president, will announce the program.

Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt will preside at the regular meeting to be held in the Roosevelt Hotel at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. "The Significance of the White House Conference to the District of Columbia in the Field of Child Welfare," will be told by William C. Smith, president of the Council of Social Agencies and assistant chief statistician of vital statistics, Bureau of the Census.

Mrs. Fereba B. Croxton, of the Council of Social Agencies, also will speak. The program will be in accord with the Child Welfare May Day program. Mrs. Josephine Rich has been appointed chairman of vital statistics. Reports of committee chairmen will be heard.

After luncheon the musical program will be presented under the direction of Mrs. B. C. Magdeburger, member of the music committee. Mrs. Frank R. Davis, soprano soloist, will give a group of songs, with Mrs. M. S. Yeatman at the piano; George E. Magdeburger will be heard in flute solos.

An illustrated talk will be given by the Rev. John W. Gummere on the Washington Cathedral, Mount St. Alban.

National Delphians

The National Capital Chapter of the National Delphian Society held its regular meeting Wednesday morning at Jelleff's Little Theater, Mrs. Charles F. Schoonmaker presiding. Following advisory remarks by Mrs. Lillian Bernhardt, field secretary, various guests were welcomed, including Mrs. E. F. Wilson, Mrs. J. G. Stikeleather, of North Carolina; Miss Marian Moreland, of Boston; Mrs. C. N. Connor and Mrs. C. A. White, of Washington.

The lesson of the day embraced the story of Hannibal and its political sequels. The leader, Mrs. H. N. Dorman, opened with a discussion of early conditions leading to conflict between the Romans and Carthagenians, also drawing comparisons between the resources and character of the two nations.

Mrs. Arabelle H. Norton then portrayed the difficulties and accomplishments of Hamilcar; Mrs. Robert J. Bates delineated the character of Hannibal, contrasting his great virtues and vices. Mrs. T. F. Law dealt on the great resourcesfulness of both participants in the Punic Wars and their refusal to acknowledge defeat, while Hannibal's superlative strategic abilities were emphasized by Mrs. J. B. Hartley. Mrs. W. M. Dixon told of the destruction of Corinth and the inhuman treatment meted out to the Carthagenians by the Romans. Mrs. P. M. Chichester stressed the demoralization of the Romans through soft living and the change in the character of the senate. Many interesting points in the Delphian Traveler were brought out by Mrs. Charles F. Arth.

In her summary Mrs. Charles F. Schoonmaker, president, gave a splendid delineation of the characters of Hannibal and Cato. The meeting concluded with the report of the critic, Mrs. Ione M. M. Knowlton.

Sunshine Society

District Sunshine and Community Society, Mrs. James H. Underwood, president, held its monthly meeting on the first Monday of this month at the home of Mrs. E. S. Henry, 1320 Columbia road northwest. and stressed the need for education in prohibition work.

Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter chairman of scientific temperance instruction, entertained a number of the local chairmen at a luncheon at her home on Friday of last week. Plans were made for the year's work. Mrs. William Knowles Cooper assisted.

FOR DEBUTANTE'S PARTY

New York society debutantes will turn models at a fashion pageant to be presented for charity. Here is Natalie Mai Coe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Coe, in the white satin evening gown she will display. It has a gored skirt fitting snugly over the hips and a unique bodice. The model is from Jay Thorpe.

Parks of U. S. Topic Before Soroptimists

Dr. Sexton Urges People to Visit Sanctuaries of Nature.

At the Soroptimist luncheon meeting at the Lafayette Hotel Wednesday Dr. Roy Sexton, stomach specialist, digressed from his usual line of business lecture to discuss the beauties and services of our national parks. Dr. Sexton said "The purpose of setting aside these vast tracts of Government land is to preserve natural beauty for the enjoyment and education of this and future generations. It is the duty of the people to know about and visit these sanctuaries of nature, which are supported by taxes."

Mr. Sexton paid tribute to Mr. Albright and his rangers—fine gentlemen and picked men who supervise these parks.

Mary K. Lewis, chairman of the Wakefield committee, announced the tours through historic gardens of Virginia. The proceeds of these tours are to be used for the restoration of Wakefield, birthplace of George Washington.

Three vocal selections were given by Inez Robinson, guest of Dr. Lula Waters. Miss Robinson was accompanied by Jewel Downs.

Dr. Jean Ruhl-Koupal, president of the Bronx Club, and her husband were guests of the Washington Club. Mr. Koupal complimented the courtesy of the Washington Police Department.

Other guests were Lillias Cropper, guest of Jean Bennett, and Mrs. Zimbro, guest of Nellie Hysong.

The social meeting will be Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the Marjorie Webster School, Sixteenth and Kalmia road.

Bethesda Club

Displaying a large collection of works by Washington and local artists as well as varied examples of applied art from all parts of the country, the third exhibition of fine and applied art given annually by the Woman's Club of Bethesda is being held in the clubhouse on the Old Georgetown road. In addition to members and other club women throughout the country, more than 50 artists whose works are being displayed were guests at the opening tea yesterday afternoon given by the art committee of the club, of which Mrs. Edwin H. Etz is chairman.

Open house will be observed today from 3 to 6 and a general invitation is extended to all who are interested in this extremely worth-while presentation of the art committee. The exhibit will be open throughout the day Monday for the benefit of school children from the Bethesda-Chevy Chase schools, who will see it in groups under the direction of Mrs. Mina Church Brann. On Tuesday, the final exhibition day, the club will hold its last round-table meeting of the season with a program arranged by Mrs. Roland Marshall chairman of the fine arts department.

Hostesses at the tea and open house include Mrs. Edwin B. Morris, Mrs. C. Willard Hayes, Mrs. Edward L. Montgomery, Mrs. Clara B Mobley, Mrs. George Bradley, Mrs. John A. Fleming, Miss Lulu Bell, Mrs. Walter E. Perry and Mrs. G. Wady Imirie. Mrs. Etz and her committee have been assisted in their arrangements for the display by Clara R Saunders, Washington artist.

Pierce Hall Players

"The Romantic Young Lady" which the Pierce Hall Players are presenting next week on the evenings of May 1 and 2 is their third presentation this season. It is a whimsical three-act comedy by G. Martinez the Spanish dramatist who wrote "The Kingdom of God" in which Ethel Barrymore starred several years ago. The play was first presented in 1918 at the Teatro Eslava in Madrid. The English version by Helen and Harley Granville-Barker which is being used in the present production was also used in the presentation in 1920 at the Royalty Theater in London.

The play is being directed by Catherine Palmer Mitchell one of the most able directors in Washington, having received her training in the methods of the Moscow Art Theater under the directorship of Richard Boleslavsky and Maria Ouspenskaya of the American Laboratory Theater in New York. The cast includes Laura Stockton Voorhees, Roy Gazelius, Edward Northrup, Arthur Rohrer, Dulan Sellers, Emily Toombs, Anne Kondrup, William Carrigan, Felix Schwarz and Naomi Trotter.

Spring Dance By Curley Club Given Tuesday

Monday, May 18, Set for Annual Reception to Archbishop.

Arrangements have been completed for the spring dance to be given under the auspices of the Curley Club of Washington in the auditorium of the National Press Club, Fourteenth and F streets, Tuesday, from 10 to 1 o'clock. Proceeds will be applied to Archbishop Curley's scholarship fund. A committee composed of Joseph McGarvey, William Boyd, Albert Sweeney and the Misses Marie Boyle, Josephine Leahy and Marie and Dorothy Smith have made arrangements for the affair.

Under the auspices of the athletic committee a hike will be conducted this afternoon for members and their friends. The party will meet at Knights of Columbus Hall, Tenth street between New York avenue and K sttreet, at 2 o'clock. Twenty-five members of the organization enjoyed a hike through Rock Creek Park last Sunday afternoon.

Members of the executive committee were entertained at the residence of Miss Josephine Leahy, Bethesda, Md., Tuesday evening, at which time considerable discussion was held in reference to several amendments that have been proposed to the constitution of the club. Mr. Roland J. Hyland entertained members of the year book committee at his residence, 26 T street northeast, Monday evening.

The annual Communion Mass for members of the Curley Club will be held in St. Patrick's Church next Sunday morning at 8 o'clock, and all members of the club are urged to assemble in front of the church at 7:45 sharp.

Miss Stella McGarvey and Miss Maud Norton entertained at a card party in St. Martin's Hall Friday evening, proceeds from which will be applied to the scholarship fund of the club.

John Donnelly, president of the club, announced the appointment of Charles Ziehl as chairman of the athletic committee, under whose direction a program of activities has been arranged for the remainder of the season. Mr. Ziehl will be assisted by Miss Josephine Leahy.

Preliminary arrangements have been completed for the annual reception and banquet in honor of the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, which will take place this year on Monday evening, May 18, and all members and friends of the club are urged to make applications for reservations as soon as possible. The banquet will be held in the Willard Hotel. A program of entertainment is being arranged by Miss Margaret Freedman, chairman of the entertainment committee.

R. M. A. Auxiliary

Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Woman's Clubs, was guest speaker at the Monday evening meeting of the Auxiliary to the R. M. A. at the Capitol Park Hotel.

Mrs. Meritt's subject was "The Work of the Federation." Mrs. W. J. Good was elected to membership. The following delegates and alternates were elected to the annual meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs to be held May 14 and 15. Delegates, Mrs. B. N. Burleyson, Mrs. F. C. Gardiner and Mrs. C. The ways and means committee of the Council of Jewish Women, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Henry Jaffee, are sponsoring a breakfast bridge at the Woodley Park Towers Apartments on Wednesday, April 29, at 12:30 p. m. All council members and their friends are welcome.

Cercle Francais

The Cercle Francais de Washington (the Precieuses Ridicules) was received on Wednesday evening by M. and Mme. Pierre de Chauny and Mme. Marie de Porry, at Stoneleigh Court.

After the opening of the meeting by the president, M. William J. Wallis, the minutes of the previous meeting were read by the social secretary, M. Charles H. Prohert. The first number on the program was the singing of old French songs by members of the Cercle, the piano accompaniment being played by Mme. Pierre de Chauny. M. Arthur Lebel continued with a poem entitled "Napoleon II," by Victor Hugo, and a number of "Contes." Mme. C. Augustus Simpson followed with piano selections from "I Pagliacci" and "Madame Butterfly," after which Mme. Suzanne Laurent recited "Les Souliers Roses," by J. Normand, and "Au Paradis," by V. Bechelet. The program closed with charades acted by Mlle. Adelia Rosasco, Mme. Manuel Chambouri, M. Pierre de Chauny and M. Arthur Lebel. The remainder of the evening was passed in French conversation, during which refreshments were served.

Shepherds of Bethlehem

Mrs. Mignonette Harman presided at the meeting of Trinity Lodge, No. 5, when the fourth birthday anniversary was celebrated. The hall was beautifully decorated with palms and cut flowers, while a large birthday cake adorned the center of the banquet table. After the business session the following program was rendered: Solo by Clarence Albright, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas; an address by the supreme supervisor of deputies, Mrs. Sarah Sawdon; solo by Linwood Dodge, accompanied by Miss Adams; presentation of personal gifts to commander, Mrs. Harman, and treasurer, Mrs. Margaret Hartman, from Mrs. Louise McDonald; piano selection by Mrs. Floda Regan of the supreme law and appeals committee; presentation of a gift to Mrs. Tatspaugh, the organizer of the lodge, and a charter member by Mrs. Margaret Hartman; address by deputy supreme commander, Mrs. Nellie Dugan; a report of the union meeting by Mrs. Margaret Hartman; addresses by deputy supreme commanders, Mrs. Marilla Smith, Hester Burke, Margaret Walters and Mrs. Mazie Domdera, and supreme supervisor of deputies for Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia, Mrs. Sarah Sawdon. A banquet followed the program.

FEATURES OF INTEREST TO WOMEN READERS

NEWS AND NOTES OF PARENT-TEACHER ORGANIZATIONS

All material for this column must be in the State office, Room 101, Burlington Hotel, on Wednesday morning, preceding the Sunday on which publication is desired.

"ONE of the most fundamental things the Children's Charter points to is the educating of the community in caring for children in families affected by the unemployment of the wage earner or some other like tragedy," said Miss Katherin Lenroot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau, in a resume of the "Children's Charter" before members attending the annual convention of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers, which opened at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning in Wilson Teachers College. Miss Lenroot briefly reviewed the "Charter," which resulted from President Hoover's Conference on Child Welfare and Child Health, and laid the burden of its nineteen points directly upon the shoulders of the parents of today.

Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, president of the congress, was in the chair, and the convention was formally opened with an invocation by the Rev. J. J. Clinchy, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, which was followed by the presentation of the convention program by Mrs. Oliver P. Bowles, chairman, and its formal acceptance. Dr. Higbie, newly appointed president of Wilson Teachers College, brought greetings and good wishes to the convention, and Miss Anna Halberg, retiring principal, also spoke a word of greeting.

Mrs. Saunders, in her message, reviewed the year's work, and reports were then heard from the secretary, treasurer, historian and from Mrs. L. B. Castell, first vice president. Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter reported as a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations and also as editor of the Association Bulletin, stating in the latter case that the Bulletin had been increased from 28 to 32 pages and in other ways was in a flourishing condition.

Mrs. Finis D. Morris, second vice president, in charge of the department of organization, in which is included other association publications, as well as the membership and program service, made a consolidated report. It was brought out that in spite of increased dues and the general depression the membership in the congress has fallen but little below that of last year.

Selden M. Ely, third vice president, in whose department is included the thrift, safety and Americanization committees, made a most gratifying report.

The department of public welfare, under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Byler, fourth vice president, has been most active during the past year. In this department are the child guidance, receiving home, research and student aid committees, and it is here that the practical side of Parent-Teacher work is found, inasmuch as practical aid is given to children from less fortunate homes, in order that they may remain in school. Notable also is the fact that not once during the entire year has there failed to be a member from some local association in attendance on Wednesdays in Juvenile Court, aiding in caring for the children kept there until their cases are disposed of.

Mrs. Joseph Sanders, fifth vice president and director of the department of health, presented Dr. Joseph I. Murphy, who made an eloquent plea for the early diagnosis of tuberculosis, stating that if this insidious disease could be diagnosed in its earliest stages, the percentage of deaths from tuberculosis among young people in their late teens and early adult life would be greatly reduced. Mrs. Sanders also reported on other phases of health work which is being carried on in our schools at the instigation of the Parent-Teacher Associations, among which may be cited the summer round-up activities. This round-up is held each spring in elementary schools, at which time defects of preschool children are noted and instructions for their correction are given.

Mrs. W. T. Bannerman, seventh vice president, under whose direction is the department of home service, presented a comprehnsive report on the work of her group of chairmen. In this division are included the children's reading, home economics, home education and spiritual training committees.

Mrs. W. P. Roop, chairman of study groups, which have been formed in a large number of associations, reported that more than 300 mothers were enrolled in these various groups during the past year, a gratifying increase over any previous year.

Interspersed in the business of the sessions were several selections by the Edmonds-Maury Glee Club, under the direction of Mrs. Esch. One song, particularly noteworthy, was an original composition, "Keep the School Fires Burning," sung to the tune of "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

A committee consisting of Mrs. T. E. Griffith and Mrs. E. R. Seal was appointed to verify the convention minutes.

It was also announced by the president that the District Congress of Parents and Teachers had been invited to take entire charge of the ceremonies incident to the laying of the cornerstone for the new Phoebe Apperson Hearst Elementary School, which will take place some time early in July. Ground for this school, which is in the Cathedral Heights section, will be broken early in June. Mrs. Hearst was one of the founders of the parent-teacher movement.

Certificates for superior associations were awarded to the Peabody-Hilton-Carbery, Gage, Woodridge, Brookland, Blair-Hayes, Stuart Junior High, and for standard associations to the Bancroft, Truesdell, Fairbrother-Rossell, John Eaton, Grant, Adams and Langdon organizations.

Adjournment was taken at this time, until the fellowship dinner, at 6:30 p. m., in the National Press Club auditorium. Mrs. Oliver P. Bowles was chairman of the dinner, and Paul Wooton was toastmaster. Notable on the program was an impromptu talk by Mrs. Mable Walker Willebrandt, in which she made a plea for the raising of ideals in young people, and a broadening of their outlook, by a sympathetic understanding of their problems. Former Senator Joseph Ransdell, of Louisiana, and Col. Campbell B. Hodges, aid to President Hoover, responded to toasts, as did Supt. Ballou, of the Washington schools, and Miss Eileen Haltigan, a high school graduate of last year. Music was furnished by the Langley Junior High School Orchestra, the Central High School Girls Glee Club, the McKinley High School boys' quartet, and Eugene Kressin, of Central High School.

A song, composed by Mrs. Bertha Eldred and dedicated to Mrs. Saunders, was sung by Miss Helen Kemp, to the tune of "The Rose of No Man's Land."

Delegates to the national convention in Hot Springs, Ark., who will leave Washington Tuesday at 6:30 p. m., are Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, Mrs. Z. D. Blackistone, Mrs. Cora Bartlette, Mrs. J. C. Payne, Mrs. Paul Eschner and Mrs. John Cournyn.

Summer Round-up.

The campaign for the round-up of children for physical examination, who will enter school this fall for the first time, will formally open Friday. All child health stations of the department of health, will be open from 10 to 12 o'clock. The health centers are located at Georgetown Hospital, 2304 Pennsylvania avenue, 330 C street northwest, 528 M street northwest, 5327 Georgia avenue northwest, 900 Maryland avenue northeast, 2012 Rhode Island avenue northeast, 1205 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, 1201 Talbert street southeast, 480 E street southwest, Children's Hospital and Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

The following chairmen have been appointed by the local presidents of the organizations: Mrs. R. Miller, Reservoir; Mrs. H. Fischer, Wallach; Mrs. Olive McMurray, Thomson; Mrs. E. Lynn, Bradley; Mrs. B. W. Eldred, Congress Heights; Mrs. C. F. Schultz, Curtis-Hyde-Addison; Mrs. C. Kelleher, Corcoran; Mrs. R. K. Srygley, Adams; Mrs. P. R. Fletcher, Whittier; Mrs. R. Lee, Key; Mrs. H. F. Dodson, Wesley Heights; Miss B. Pearson, West; Mrs. R. Armstrong, Burroughs.

Also Mrs. J. B. Early, Ludlow-Madison-Taylor; Mrs. George Nussbaum, Blair-Hayes; Mrs. C. Kirby, Edmonds-Maury, Mrs. H. Alford, Langdon; Mrs. T. Sawyer, Emery-Eckington; Mrs. C. Heflin, Wheatley; Mrs. E. Jolly, Truesdell; Mrs. F. Funk, Keene; Mrs. H. Lyon, Randle Highland-Orr; Mrs. T. S. Troy, Takoma; Mrs. L. Silverman, Gage; Mrs. Depew, Fairbrother-Rossell; Mrs. J. E. Rather, Bancroft; Mrs. Strong, Buchanan; Mrs. R. S. Campbell, John Eaton; Mrs. M. S. Russell, Peabody-Hilton-Carbery; Mrs. R. S. Young, Woodridge; Mrs. J. Thomas, Bernard; Mrs. Jane Davis, Kingsman-Pierce; Mrs. Charles Chamberlin, Bryan; Mrs. John L. Vandegrift, Fillmore; Mrs. C. McCallister, Park View.

Also Mrs. H. B. March, Hubbard-Raymond; Mrs. W. M. Hales, Brent-Dent; Mrs. H. F. Smith, Grant; Dr. Montgomery Blair, Tuthill School; Mrs. F. M. Doudna, Jackson; Mrs. H. L. Nichols, Benning; Mrs. Wright, Johnson; Mrs. J. G. Mathes, Petworth; Mrs. J. Fitzgerald, Kenilworth; Mrs. S. Gross, Weightman; Mrs. Charles Deck, jr., Blow-Webb; Mrs. G. Deltufo, Van Ness; Mrs. C. Russell Riordon, Kalmia Road; Mrs. S. Willoughby, Cranch-Tyler; Mrs. W. R. Floam, Blake-Gales-Seaton; Mrs. J. J. Kinsey, Powell Elementary; Mrs. Thrasher, Brookland; Mrs. M. Howard, Tenley-Janney; Mrs. A. Cook, Bowen-Greenleaf.

It is necessary that an association which expects to receive recognition for its summer round-up work must register at the State office by May 1.

Bancroft.

A fine opportunity was given Bancroft mothers on Tuesday. Blue ribbons were given to the children who had had the summer round-up physical examination last year, and were found 100 per cent, and a photograph was taken of the group. A specially prepared program followed this presentation, opening with a talk by Dr. J. Duerson Stout, who spoke on the mental health of the child as being largely the responsibility of the parent. "During the first two years of a child's life spanking should take place," said Dr. Stout, "and if done properly, the raising of a finger after that will be sufficient to bring obedience." He said that the teacher is a mother in another sense, and the child reacts to her attitude toward life as well as to his own mother's. Then later he reacts to outside social contacts.

Dr. Courson B. Conklin spoke on the importance of every child being physically fit with all defects corrected before entering school. Attention should be given to tonsils, teeth and vaccination.

Dr. Paul Ewerhardt spoke on the problems which come to him daily at the child guidance clinic, which in most cases is the problem of the parent and not the child. Members of the audience had much to reflect upon as the lectures came to a close.

Miss Grace Lind, principal, talked on the requirements for entering kindergarten.

The summer round-up physical examination takes place Tuesday at 8:30 a. m. Child specialists will give their time for this, and there are 142 preschool children on the Bancroft list to be examined.

The executive board will meet at 1 p. m. on Tuesday in the school.

Powell Junior.

At the monthly meeting held on April 15, the subject of "Marks and Tests" was discussed by Miss Bertie Backus, principal, and several of the other teachers. It was voted to appoint a committee to confer with the municipal architects' office, in an effort to have a more satisfactory floor than that called for in the specifications placed in the gymnasium which will be erected at the school this year, and for which the contract has already been let.

Johnson.

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association was held at the school April 14. The guest speaker, Rabbi Simon, was unable to attend. The children from Miss Manners' and Miss Gregg's rooms entertained with songs and recitations, and Mrs. Roy Prince rendered several vocal selections.

Wednesday, May 20, was set as the date of the annual spring luncheon of the school.

Mrs. Paul White, the president, presented prizes, consisting of $2.50 gold pieces to Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Dickinson, the two grade mothers having the best attendance for their grade during the year.

Kenilworth.

The Kenilworth Association met on April 15 in the school. After the resignation of Mrs. J. Fitzgerald as first vice president, Mrs. M. Hubbel was elected to fill the vacancy. Mrs. Charles Apple was elected as publicity chairman, and Mrs. M. Sanders as milk chairman, to succeed Mrs. G. A. Lingebach.

A lunch will be given in the school on Wednesday, May 6.

The "Early Diagnosis of Tuberculosis" was stressed by the visiting nurse, Miss Terry. There was a tie for the best attendance between the first and second grades, Miss Allen's room and the third and fourth, Miss C. Vaughn's room.

A committee was appointed to select the pins to be given to children whose parents were present at all meetings.

Burroughs.

Miss Bertie Backus, principal of Powell Junior High School, speaking at this association April 16, took as her subject, "Character Education," stressing these points: The tendency to imitate, environment and habits, and stated that the surest way to develop character in children is to give them responsibility, emphasizing that parents should work together, and in this way could accomplish results that either parent working alone would find it difficult or impossible to achieve.

Under the direction of Miss Bruso, musical director of the school, the teachers sang two groups of songs.

Mrs. L. L. Scott, program chairman, on behalf of the association, presented to Miss Draney a corsage. There was then a reception held for the teachers, as it was teachers' night. The meeting was attended by a large number of parents, including many fathers.

The next meeting will be held May 14, at 2 p. m. It will be a Mothers' Day program.

IN PARENT-TEACHER MEETING

Mrs. Hugh Bradford, of Sacramento, Calif. right), president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, will preside at the national convention of the organization at Hot Springs, Ark., May 3 to 7. Mrs. L. D. Reagan, of Little Rock (upper left), will be hostess and Mrs. Scott Wood, of Hot Springs (lower left), is in charge of local arrangements.

Edmonds-Maury.

The April meeting of Edmonds-Maury Association was held April 13 in Stuart Junior High School. The Glee Club, composed of parents in the association, sang. Following this was a talk by Dr. Daniel L. Finucane on "Tuberculosis." Next was a talk by Dr. J. Gould Wicky, secretary of education of the Lutheran Church of America. He stressed the need of religion as one of the vital elements in character building. The meeting concluded with a general meeting of parents and inspection of posters.

Buchanan.

This association gave an entertainment Friday night in the auditorium of the school to raise funds for the new library. A varied and interesting program was enjoyed by the large audience present. There was a dance by the children of Miss Conn's fourth grade, and a play by a group from Mrs. West's fifth grade. The Buchanan Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Maloy, sixth grade teacher, sang. Irene Morgan and Dorothy Nolan gave a tap dance, and Mary Spielman recited a poem, and Mrs. Davis told a humorous story. Mrs. Bessemer played a piano solo, and a group of mothers of the association presented a one-act play, "Saved." Richard Mansfield, cartoonist of the Star and creator of "Who Remembers?" gave a very amusing and interesting chalk talk.

On Tuesday afternoon the parents visited the different grades of the school to observe the children at work. Conferences with the teachers followed the afternoon session.

Langdon.

"Gardens" was the subject of Mr. L. M. Clarke's talk before the Langdon Parent-Teacher Association at its April meeting. Mr. Clarke is a prominent member of the Woodridge Garden Club, and a resident of that community, and from his wide experience and study was able to give very practical and helpful information concerning gardening in this particular district. He gave suggestions for all sizes and kinds of gardens from the tiny flower bed to the formal garden and did not forget the practical minded group which wants to grow its own vegetables.

The mat work of six Langdon boys, Richard Craft, Walker Oakes, James Brincefield, William Price, Harry March and Joe Henrick, was well done and was a much appreciated feature of the evening. Mrs. Charles Speaker gave a reading and Mrs. Graedner sang. Mrs. Lang was accompanist.

Reports were given and the following officers were elected for 1931-32: President, Mrs. Emil Smith; first vice president, Mrs. Mayne R. Coe, second vice president, Miss M. E. Bumper; third vice president, Mrs. Nathan Gammon; secretary, Mrs. R. E. S. Boss; treasurer, Mrs. C. H. Lavender.

Takoma Park.

Takoma Park Home and School Association will meet Tuesday at 8 p. m., in the auditorium of the Takoma Elementary School at Piney Branch road and Dahlia street.

Miss Bertie Backus, principal of Powell Junior High School, will address the meeting on the subject of "Character Training in the Public Schools." The musical program will consist of soprano solos by Mrs. Melville Lindsay. A list of candidates for officers of the association for the school year 1931-32 will be presented by the nominating committee.

Brookland.

Demonstration lessons were given by Mrs. Brunner teaching a second-grade reading lesson and by Mrs. Hicks teaching a third-grade number lesson at the April meeting of the Brookland Parent-Teacher Association. Mrs. Higgins, ways and means chairman, told of the operetta "Jack, the Giant Killer," that is to be given by the pupils of the school under the supervision of Mr. Harry Wheaton Howard on May 14 and 15 in the John Burroughs School.

Mrs. Donald Kester, summer round-up chairman, reported that her committee is now actively engaged in the "rounding up" of the preschool children and will see that they are brought to the school on May Day to be examined to see if they are 100 per cent physically fit to enter school next fall.

Mrs. Schaller, health chairman, reported that the Schick test was given this week to the children of the school whose parents had requested it given.

Mrs. Brunner's second grade won the attendance banner, having 53 per cent of the parents present.

The child study group meeting was held at the home of Mrs. A. U. Smith on Tuesday.

Blow-Webb.

The monthly meeting of the Blow-Webb Association was held in Webb School on April 14. The program consisted of a solo by Master Elvove, a fashion show under the direction of Mrs. Beller and songs by the Glee Club, under the leadership of Mrs. Kettering. Mr. William Plunkert spoke on "Character Education." There will be a luncheon in both schools on May 7. Mrs. Elvove was appointed summer round-up chairman. Election of officers will be held at the next meeting on May 5 at the Blow School, 2:30 o'clock.

Macfarland.

The Macfarland Junior High School Association met on April 17. Dr. R. L. Sexton gave a lecture, illustrated by moving pictures, subject "Scenes Along the Rapidan."

Motions adopted by the association were: "That children unaccompanied by parents or guardians be prevented from attending the meetings of the association, and a motion changing the day of the meeting of the association from the third Friday of the month to the third Monday, with alternate afternoon and night meetings during the coming year."

A nominating committee, composed of Capt. C. W. Willet, Miss Hobgood and Capt. Frank Stewart, was appointed by the president with instructions to report at the May meeting, at which time the officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

Miss Kathryn Latimer entertained the audience with piano selections.

Truesdell.

"Dad's night" will be celebrated at the Truesdell Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Walter M. Michael will preside. The executive board met in the school Monday afternoon. Mrs. Kenneth R. Pierce was appointed chairman of the annual spring luncheon, which will be held in May.

Mrs. John W. Karsner will assist Mrs. Charles F. Jolley, summer round-up chairman, in the work.

Wesley Heights.

The Wesley Heights Association gave a bridge party in the Wesley Heights Club on Tuesday. About 120 people attended, with gross receipts of over $70. The committee in charge of arrangements consisted of Mrs. Franklin D. Jones, chairman; Mrs. Clarence A. Lane, Mrs. Otto T. Englehart, Mrs. Earle W. Wallick, Mrs. Cecil J. Wilkinson, Mrs. Dean M. Rathbun, Mrs. L. C. Angstrom and Mrs. Wesely M. Gewehr.

Hubbard-Raymond.

The monthly meeting of the Hubbard-Raymond Home and School Association was held Monday night in the Raymond Auditorium. The speaker of the evening was Dr. V. R. Anderson, secretary of the Association for Prevention of Tuberculosis. She is especially noted for her splendid work for child welfare.

Mrs. Arten, Raymond's kindergarten principal, told something of the meaning of the summer round-up work. There was music furnished by Mr. Ralon on his singing violin. He was accompanied by Mrs. Ralon, the association's official accompanist.

There was a social period, during which the members were served by the refreshment committee. Miss Katherine Brown, 3 BA grade, won the banner and book prize for largest attendance.

Whittier.

The monthly meeting of the Whittier Association was held on April 13. Miss Esther Scott gave a talk on nature work in the schools. Mrs. J. P. Perry sang two selections. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Reese.

Miss Mary B. Ervin, field secretary of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, gave a talk on the welfare of the boys and girls of today.

Mrs. Basinger, ways and means chairman, reported on a card party held April 17. Mrs. Boniveta, health chairman, reported that all the diphtheria treatments had been given. Many children did not take all of the treatments on account of sickness. These children can get this treatment by securing their medical chart from the teacher and by going to the District Health Office, Sixth and I streets northwest, on Wednesday and Saturday mornings at 10 o'clock. It is very urgent that children receive all of these treatments, as one will not prove beneficial to them.

The treasurer reported the surplus milk fund is almost exhausted, necessitating the advancing of the children's weekly amount from 20 to 25 cents as formerly. The recent bridge party held at the home of Mrs. David Gates netted $10, which was placed in the milk fund.

A committee was appointed to select names for new officers who will be nominated at the next meeting to be held May 11.

The attendance pennant was won by Miss Dyer's room.

Wallach.

The regular meeting of the Wallach Association was held on Monday. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Margaret Brawner and the flag salute was given, followed by the audience singing "America." Members of the Wilson Teachers Glee Club entertained with vocal and violin solos.

Mrs. J. N. Saunders, president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers, gave a talk on the "Activities and Achievements of the Parent-Teacher Movement." Following her speech the Wallach Association presented her with a pillow made by the fifth grade girls.

Miss Streett, one of the teachers, has completed a special and original study of the movies as related to the school children, and she favored the members with a very instructive and illuminating report of her study. Miss Perry, a member of the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, brought a valuable message on the "Early Diagnosis of Tuberculosis."

Special emphasis was laid upon the work of the summer round-up committee, of which Mrs. Fisher is the chairman. A luncheon is planned for the near future, and Mrs. Francis E. Simmons was appointed head of that committee.

Gordon.

The Gordon Association met April 17. The election of officers was held with the following results: President, Mrs. R. Page Irving; first vice president, Mrs. Whitney Waldron; second vice president, Mrs. F. A. Woodward; third vice president, Mrs. Charles Wood; secretary, Mrs. A. D. Henry; treasurer, Mrs. J. Greenbaum.

Mrs. Harold Doyle, chairman of the camp committee of the Y. W. C. A., spoke on the "Wise Use of Leisure" and on "Camp Kahlert," the Y. W. C. A. camp. Mr. Drake, Washington's Boy Scout executive, talked on "The Boy Scout Movement." Mr. Bemis told of the desirability of starting a school band. Miss Redell, the last speaker, explained the work of the Visiting Nurses' organization, taking as her subject "The Visiting Nurse in Your Neighborhood."

Cranch-Tyler.

The April meeting of the Cranch-Tyler Parent-Teacher Association was held on Monday in the Hine Junior High School. A short business meeting preceded the program which was prepared by Mrs. Lucas, chairman of the program committee, who took charge of the entertainment. The Glee Club sang a series of songs which were interpreted by the dramatic club. Miss Hummer, supervising principal of the seventh division, gave a talk entitled "Goals."

A spelling bee by the fourth, fifth and sixth grades was held. Rachel Hill, sixth grade, Tyler School (Miss Clendening, teacher), won the contest.

Following the spelling bee a play entitled "How the Story Grew" was given by the Parent-Teacher Association. Miss Dugan's sixth grade won the banner for having the greatest number of parents present.

Woodridge.

Miss Ida May Lind made an address on "The Child and the New School" at the April meeting of this association. Musical entertainment was given by the fifth grade girls, who sang a group of songs. Mrs. R. G. Young, summer round-up chairman, announced that examination of children entering school in the fall would be made on May 1 between 10 and 12 a. m. at the school. The committee members are Mrs. C. M. Chaney, Mrs. H. P. Firestone, Mrs. John M. Kane, Mrs. R. A. Lyon and Mrs. W. B. Putman.

The nominating committee recently appointed consists of Mrs. Lloyd Miller, chairman; Miss Caroline F. Barnard and Mrs. W. B. Putman.

A school luncheon will occur in the near future under the management of Mrs. C. F. Carter, ways and means chairman.

Oyster.

The James F. Oyster Association held its monthly meeting in the school auditorium on Monday. Mrs. Thomas Kane presided and, in turn, presented Mr. Harry Hayden, who had charge of the evening's entertainment. He introduced the guest speaker, E. P. Morrow, a former Governor of Kentucky, whose subject was "Debt and Payment." This talk was followed by several vocal selections by Miss Newman, one of the teachers: Hooke Kennedy, Washington's Harry Lauder, and for the finale a string orchestra in mandolin music. Refreshments were served by Mrs. F. Beneman and her coworkers, Mrs. Bryson, Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Hayden.

Blair-Hayes.

The Blair-Hayes Association met at the Hayes School April 16. Officers elected for the 1931-32 term were as follows: President, Mrs. Sargent C. Elliott, vice president; Mrs. Reed Martin; secretary, Miss Smith, a teacher; treasurer, Mrs. Richard S. Franklin; historian, Mrs. Maude E. Meyer.

"Why a Parent-Teacher Association" was the subject of an address by Mrs. Lewis H. Magruder. The attendance banners were won by Miss Floor, of the Blair, and Miss Burley and Miss Jordan, of the Hayes School.

Fairbrother-Rossell.

Last Thursday Judge Kathryn Sellers gave a talk on the work of the Juvenile Court on behalf of the young folks and their parents. Some of the fathers were able to attend, as the meeting was at 8 p. m. Enthusiastic applause greeted the first performance of the school orchestra under the guidance of Mrs. Laura Ward, director of orchestral work.

The nominating committee reported on candidates for election next month. Miss B. M. Orr spoke briefly on dental work planned for May Day.

A report was made on a card party given at the home of Mrs. L. W. Fraser. Mrs. Macoughtry and Mrs. Mitchell reported on a card party that they had given for child welfare and gave a substantial check to the treasurer. Routine business was transacted, messages from the State president were read and Parent-Teacher Association songs and patriotic music were sung in chorus.

Bowen-Greenleaf.

The April meeting of the Bowen-Greenleaf Association was held on the 16th at the Greenleaf School. The constitution, which had been revised, was read by Mrs. Bullis, teacher of the Greenleaf School, and approved by the members. Miss B. Orr, nurse of the seventh division, gave a talk on the necessity of a physical examination and urged that all take advantage of the child health day examination and treatment of the teeth, &c.

Pupils of the fourth grade, Bowen School, entertained with a play entitled "The Sleeping Beauty."

Prizes for the largest attendance were won by the sixth grade for the Bowen and first grade, Greenleaf.

The meeting adjourned with the singing of the P.-T. A. song, Miss Ramey, sixth grade teacher, at the piano.

Blake-Gales-Seaton.

The executive board of the Blake-Gales-Seaton Parent-Teacher Association met April 16 and made plans for the summer round-up work. Mrs. Guy Dille, Mrs. W. R. Floam and Mrs. Jean C. Beyers were named as chairmen of the three schools. Arrangements were made for the card party to be held early in May.

The night meeting which is to be Fathers' Night will be held Tuesday, April 28, at 8 p. m. The annual election of officers will take place. An interesting program has been arranged, including entertainment by the children of the three schools in sketches and dances. The speaker for the evening will be Dr. Raul Ewerhardt, whose topic will be, "Child Guidance."

McKinley.

Mrs. T. H. Young, first vice president of the association, presided at the meeting April 14. Mrs. E. L. Madgeburger, ways and means chairman, announced that the proceeds of the concert given April 16 would be devoted to establishing a library at the school. Mrs. H. V. Schrieber, Mrs. Madgeburger, Mrs. Young and Mr. Frank Daniel discussed the teaching of the effects of alcohol in the schools. Mrs. E. R. Kalmbach, program chairman, presented a volume on the proceedings of the White House conference to be placed in the school library. The meeting adjourned at 3 p. m. for conferences with the teachers in their classrooms.

Adams.

The April meeting of the John Quincy Adams Association took place in the school auditorium. The Adams aeroplane group, under the direction of Hugh Cleary, had an exhibition and demonstration of all that is new in model planes. The auditorium was cleared and the planes flew at will. A group of ten boys from Miss Rowe's physical education group performed the most difficult exercises in unison and harmony.

Elsa Zalipsky, from Miss Gibb's rhythm class, gave a rhythmic dance, accompanied at the piano by her mother, Mme. Zalipsky. Harriett Smiler, of Miss Noack's fourth grade, sang two selections. She was accompanied by Clara Wiseman. Margaret Yonageta gave a piano solo.

A short business meeting was held and a resolution adopted to give $25 to the Central Milk Fund. Another resolution was adopted, asking Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders to install the new officers.

The teachers were hostesses for the evening. In the absence of the president, Mrs. R. K. Williams, vice president, presided.

The president, Mrs. Dorothy Rus, represented one of the members of the original parent-teacher board in the tableau given at the fellowship dinner.

Central High.

The Central High School Association held its April meeting Monday evening. Mr. Clark, the teacher of printing, gave an interesting talk on his work, illustrated with pictures. He presented a film entitled "Making a Book." Lieut. William Day gave the bugle call, followed by the salute to the flag. Louis Levinson played two violin solos, accompanied by Elwood Backenstoss at the piano.

Mme. Bertha Romero gave a talk on "Why Study Spanish," and presented her pupils in Spanish songs. Mrs. Julia Gill presented her fourth year French pupils, assisted by pupils of Miss Martha Wimer. Mrs. Gardner's first year pupils also presented a French play. Miss Emilie Margaret White, program chairman for the evening, presented her pupils in German in Reigenspiel-Dornoschen, and also in Prinzessen Unnatur. The evening closed with the audience singing "America, the Beautiful."

Stuart.

The executive board of the Stuart Home and School Association met on Wednesday and gave a farewell luncheon to Mrs. Cora Bartlette, president, who leaves on Tuesday as a delegate to the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, at Hot Springs, Ark. The association was on the honor roll this year, and qualified as a superior association. Mrs. J. W. Davis, Junior High School representative, took part in the tableau presented at the fellowship dinner.

The next meeting of the association will be held on May 13.

Kingsman-Pierce.

The April meeting of the Kingsman-Pierce Association was held on the 16th at the Pierce School, Mrs. E. H. Griffith presiding. The meeting was opened with the reading of the president's message by Mrs. Reese.

Mrs. Emma S. Byler, fourth State vice president, gave a talk touching on the State convention. A review of the year's work was given by the president, followed by Mrs. Byler's talk on "The Delinquent Child and the Participation of Local Parent-Teacher Associations in the Work of the Juvenile Court."

Officers elected for the ensuing year are Mrs. E. H. Griffith, president; Mrs. Bray, first vice president; Miss Janice Blum, second vice president; Mrs. Decker, third vice president; Mrs. Whinery, secretary; Miss Mangum, treasurer, and Mrs. Reese, historian.

The card party held at the Northeast Motor Co., on April 17, was a social and financial success.

Mrs. Smith's and Miss Herron's third and eighth grades, Pierce School, won the prize for the largest attendance of mothers at the meeting.

Park View.

The card party, under the chairmanship of Mrs. W. H. Wagner, held in the new gymnasium for the benefit of the parent-teacher association, was enjoyed by the guests, who carried away many beautiful hand-made prizes.

The executive board will hold its regular meeting in Room 100 in the new wing of the school building Thursday at 2 p. m.

Francis Scott Key.

Mrs. Richard Lee, chairman of the summer round-up committee, announces that children entering school next fall will be examined at the health clinic at Potomac Heights Community Church on Tuesday between 9:30 and 11 o'clock.

Mrs. C. T. Goude, chairman of the student aid committee, is requesting serviceable clothing of all kinds. She is also asking that toys which are to be discarded be turned over to her at any time in order that the committee may repair them and put them away until next Christmas season. It is felt that this will save much time and hurry during the next pre-Christmas rush.

CLUB NOTES

Knights of Columbus

Nearly 300 members, guests and friends spent a most enjoyable evening last Thursday at the thirty-second anniversary dinner-dance of Spalding Council, Knights of Columbus, which was held at the Hay-Adams House. Leo A. Rover, United States district attorney, was the guest speaker. Others who made remarks were M. J. McAuliffe, chairman; F. P. Sheehy, the first grand knight; T. J. Quirk, the present grand knight, and each of the charter members who were present, there now being 23 living of the original 67. State Deputy Fealy could not be present because of absence from the city, but was represented by District Deputy Fred S. Martin, who also spoke. Thomas J. Trodden presided as toastmaster, and professional talent entertained, while Gaul's orchestra furnished music during the dinner and for the dancing which followed from 10 to 1.

The anniversary celebration was a decided social success, and was sponsored by the following committee: M. J. McAuliffe, chairman; E. V. Carr, H. W. Cord, T. F. Carlin, C. H. Fugitt, H. A. Marsden, R. J. Werner, B. F. Hamill, H. R. Statham, D. A. Fanning, R. D. Conklin, F. J. Malloy, T. K. Gallaher, J. H. Zabell, C. J. San Filipo, Henry Hughes, F. P. Sheehy, F. J. Creamer, sr.; T. J. Trodden, F. S. Martin, F. J. Creamer, jr.; R. J. O'Neill, J. F. Brady, T. J. Quirk, J. H. Walsh, J. M. Tabler, J. W. McCormick, J. C. Huppmann, J. J. O'Brien, L. A. Gage, J. B. Kennedy, F. H. Huneke and D. J. O'Donnell.

About thirty members of Spalding Council will receive the third degree of the order this afternoon, with a large class from other councils.

The next meeting of Spalding Council will be on Thursday, May 7.

Anthony J. Scullen, faithful navigator for the assembly, has accepted the offer of the Washington Chapter, Knights of Columbus, for the members of the fourth degree to act as a guard of honor, at the annual communion mass to be held Sunday morning, May 26, at St. Matthews Church, and the members of the assembly will turn out in a body, in full dress uniform, and afterward will attend the annual communion breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel.

Rainbow Club

The Rainbow Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Shepherd. After the several committes reported, two new names were placed on waiting list, and a card party and barn dance planned. The next meeting will be held with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilson, of 1449 South Carolina avenue southeast.

St. James Players

St. James Players, under the direction of W. Curtis Draper, jr., will present the delightful comedy, "Take My Advice," by Elliott Lester, in the parish hall on Eighth street, between B and C northeast, on the evening of May 6 at 8:15 o'clock.

This comedy in three acts depicts Pa Weaver's weakness for fraudulent stock salesmen; Ma Weaver has a weakness for numerology; Buddy has quit school to marry the local vampire, and Sis is bitten by the stage bug.

Into this topsy-turvy family comes Prof. Clement, who with his optimistic methods, soon has the house on its feet again.

"Take My Advice" ran for ten months at the Belmont Theater in New York. The leading roles will be played by Amanda Clagett and John Prangley. Others in the cast include Julia Draper, William Davis, Marguerite Fennegan, Wilson Dawson, James McBee and Harry Howser.

DARE'S WEEKLY FASHION LETTER

More About Pyjamas.

New York, April 25.

SO much is being said about pyjamas nowadays, and it's all terribly mixing. We ask ourselves, and everybody else, to what extent is the smart woman wearing them?

For beach or country wear they have, of course, established themselves. Last year at the European resorts we became accustomed to the pyjama silhouette, consisting of long trousers, flaring slightly about the ankle, and worn with a short straight jacket or a little bolero. They were made in heavy linen, in tussor or even in crepe de chine. Of course they do interpret the free and easy spirit of vacation time. For warm languid hours on the beach or in the garden they are fascinating, and so practical besides. Last summer at St. Jean de Luz I thought how much smarter and more appropriate was the well-cut pyjama that the up-to-date woman wore down to the beach over her bathing suit, than the bulky wrap in turkish toweling of former days. Even in the afternoon, walking about the town, gay pyjamas seemed appropriate too.

Enough of last year. You want to know now what the Paris couturier is doing about pyjamas in his collection for spring 1931, so I'll tell you just what I saw. In some houses they are featured only for the beach or the boudoir, as at Jenny's. In fact, Jenny showed none in her collection, and when I asked about them, I was told that they were shown only with the lingerie and negligees on special request.

At Premet's, at least on the afternoon I was there, they showed exactly two. One, for the beach, had trousers of white surah. They were cut simply, having the now classical flare about the ankle. They had a charming little jacket and sleeveless blouse in surah, printed in a nautical design—sailing boats and what not. The colors of the print were white, red and blue. The other pyjama was really a summer neglige of white silk muslin, with pink muslin flower motives incrusted around the edge of the jacket and trousers. One would wear them only at home, of course.

One of the houses that specializes in sport wear shows a very practical set for cool days in navy-blue jersey as to jacket and trousers. The sleeveless blouse and scarf are printed in gay sea-side motives, waves and clouds, colors being white, of course, and a lovely blue, the color of the sea with the sun on it. They are the type in which you could be very picturesque for yachting.

In other houses pyjamas venture much further afield. The Agnes-Drecoll collection features the dressy afternoon pyjama. And very amusing, new, and lovely besides, were the afternoon tea pyjamas shown by this house. These had a black taffeta bodice and taffeta trousers which from the knee down became flaring transparent black lace. They would be worn for receiving a few intimate friends at tea in your town apartment. When I was just recovering from these, in floated a pale-blue and pink printed chiffon, with a tightly fitting bodice, long tight sleeves, and what looked like a full ankle-length skirt, edged with wide pale blue lace in which had been incrusted motives cut out from the same print as the dress. All of the sudden the mannekin held her frock out as we used to do in dancing school, and pyjamas were revealed! They were so full that the division could not be detected when they were hanging straight. Now, the divided skirt was the only point in which these pyjamas differed from many printed muslin or lace and chiffon frocks shown in the same collection. I am speaking of the type of vaporous summer afternoon gown that one wears with a floppy hat to the European races, which are much dressier than races in America, as you probably know. Now whether the pyjamas will be worn on the same occasions as the frock they so closely resemble, it is too early in the season to say. But I should think not on such formal occasions as a garden party, or the races at Auteuil or Longchamp. Where the smart woman probably will wear the pyjama of this type is at a resort, or for tea or supper in her summer home, or perhaps an informal evening at a country club.

Augusta Bernard in her summer collection goes one step farther and presents the evening pyjama. Yes, these resemble in fabric, in cut and decolletage her most formal evening gowns, the only difference being the divided skirt. One, in pale pink georgette, has the pyjama divided effect, softened by ruffles in front only. The back of the frock falls undivided. Another handsome pyjama-gown (one feels the necessity of adding "gown" when talking of these evening pyjamas) is of silver lame. On first sight this model seems a formal evening frock, but the skirt from the yoke down is slit into four panels to reveal, when milady sits down, trousers of the same silver lame.

Now I have given you a terribly serious account of what four important representative houses are doing with pyjamas, and I have told you that for doing nothing at all at the resort, for the beach and yachting you may be smartly correct in pyjamas. The more dressy afternoon pyjama you may wear this summer informally if you care to.

And, as to the future of pyjamas, whether or not they ever will be worn formally in the evening I can not say. Perhaps Paul Poiret could tell us! He always had a flair for sensing the evolution of style. In fact, he has just published an amusing autobiography called, "En habillant l'epoque," in which he says that at the time the short skirt was the mode he told women they would wear long skirts again in spite of their protest, until the day came for what he then called the "trouser-skirt." And here it is! We call it the pyjama.

Au revoir!

CRINOLINE DRESSES FOR GIRLS ARE CHIC

as part of the modish spring time evening toilette is one of the most recent developments in fashion in Washington. Most of the young girls not only wear lace mitts but lace stockings with their evening dresses. The arms of the mitts come high, nearly to the shoulders, or end just below the elbows.

Mitts are also worn with dressy afternoon frocks and some of the sport costumes have elbow sleeves to the coats with mitts of plain colored silk to be worn with them instead of gloves.

Silk gloves are smart for those who do not like the mitts. The gloves are usually heavily embroidered for dress and even for tailored or sport wear. Some gloves to be worn with garden party, afternoon and formal daytime chiffon dresses are as sheer silk as the hosiery and some of them have lace arms like the mitts.

Hats must be eccentric as to brim and bandeau to be really smart just now. The few flowers tucked away at one side with which we started the early spring have blossomed into wreaths and garlands. Some hats have really wide brim and shallow crowns and have a wreath of spring or summer flowers sewed very flat around the crown. Others have bandeaux made entirely of tiny flowers while others have a row of flowers sewed flat along the edge of the brim.

For the woman who adheres to the smartness of the untrimmed hat or ribbon trimmed one fashion has offered a compromise in the twisted two tones ribbon band wound shallow effect about a close fitting turban or the crown of a hat with a brim.

Huge transparent straw hats are very smart with the lace jacket gowns and will be very much in evidence at garden parties this summer. These large hats are also sometimes made of organdie or net.

RANDOM THOUGHTS ON MANY THINGS OF MEAGER CONCERN

—By NELSON B. BELL—

IT was hardly to be expected that the current week would duplicate the superlative excellence of the screen features assembled for the delectation of the multitudes during the seven-day period just closed, but even so, there is nothing in the present week's list of attractions that need cause the judicious amusement seeker to hang his head—if, indeed, any heads were seriously contemplating the disconsolate business of hanging.

This is a pretty good week, too.

If to any jaundiced eye the cinema's major lures seem to lend themselves to a captious springtime charge of letting down a bit, it should be heartening that the so-called supplementary, or auxiliary, offerings serve to keep the general average about where it was, if not last week, through most of the year.

Two of the downtown, first-run houses are going in for a large measure of braggadocio on the strength of what they are modestly pleased to term "three-star bills"—probably brought to mind by dim recollections of a noted rectifier of sublime accomplishment by the name of Hennessy. Or maybe not.

* * * *

At any rate, the claim is worth looking into, for three-dimension entertainments are almost as rare in this day and age as the triple-threat decoctions of the aforementioned beneficent and exhilarating Dr. Hennessy himself!

* * * *

NONE but the most stalwart nonconformist would dispute the right of the Fox to emblazon a program embracing a Warner Baxter feature, one of the better of the Fanchon and Marco stage "Ideas" and a quartet of favorites from the celebrated Roxy Gang as a diversion embodying every reasonable potentiality of three-ply merit.

The same holds true in the case of the Earle, where a cast of notable personnel occupies the screen in the film version of a famous stage comedy, gifted vaudevillians tread the boards and Bobby Jones, the greatest of living golfers, inaugurates a series of twelve two-reel subjects calculated to make a wizard of the baldest duffer.

* * * *

This demonstration of the highest skill of the links, it seems to me, is well timed, coming as it does simultaneously with the termination of the preliminary round of instruction conducted during preceding weeks by Johnny Farrell on the RKO-Keith screen course.

* * * *

AND speaking of RKO-Keith's, it should be an inspiring rite to those in search of the extraordinary in celluloid enjoyment just to cast their appraising and appreciative eyes over the cast that has been brought together in Lowell Sherman's "Bachelor Apartment."

Lowell Sherman, Irene Dunne, Mae Murray, Norman Kerry, Claudia Dell, Ivan Lebedeff, Noel Francis, Roberta Gale, Arline Judge, Purnell Pratt, Charles Coleman, Kitty Kelly, Arthur Housman and Florence Roberts.

Now that your interest has been aroused in such things, you might go on and scan the rosters at the Palace and Rialto and Metropolitan, too. There are lovely and charming people on all of them.

* * * *

In the recent passing of Tom Santschi, the actor who shared that classic fisticuffing with William Farnum in the first production of "The Spoilers," and is teamed with him again in "Ten Nights in a Barroom," at the Metropolitan, the screen has lost another player with a fine record in the films whose exit from the scene only goes to swell that noble band that has gone ahead to brighter lights and a broader and more ennobled stage.

* * * *

NO consideration of casts at precisely this time could fail to suggest the thought that the National Theater Players seem perpetually destined to make fragmentary seasons of Leneta Lane as leading woman suffice.

It was only three years ago that her engagement ended abruptly considerably in advance of the termination of the summer run of the stock company sponsored by the Messrs. Stephen E. Cochran and Clifford Brooke.

Now with the latest, and what promises to be the most successful, season the company has ever enjoyed scarcely more than a fortnight old, Miss Lane again departs to new fields of activity, leaving in her wake a chagrined and disappointed management and an unhappy public that has reveled in the excellence of her recent work.

To one unaware of how impossible such a thing would be, there might be a vague hint of unconscious reprisal in the oddly repetitive fashion in which events have shaped themselves this spring.

However, Miss Lane takes with her to new adventures in the West Coast studios of Paramount the best wishes of a host of Washington friends, who tomorrow night will welcome Miss Nancy Sheridan with no less warmth on that account.

* * * *

Since this department armed Miss Lane with letters to certain Paramount executives when she departed from Washington in 1928, I am wondering if it might remotely and inadvertently have had anything to do with the present defection. Probably not. They don't work that fast. At least not in the scenario department!

* * * *

PERHAPS that is by way of being a bit of a slander, because in some instances the studio boys work so fast you'd hardly believe it.

For instance, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have already purchased the picture rights to "Skyscraper," by Faith Baldwin, which does not begin its magazine serialization until the June number of one of America's popular monthlies.

And again, the film version of "Up Pops the Devil" is already completed, although Washington will not catch its first glimpse of the stage play until it opens in the Belasco Theater tomorrow night as the season's final presentation of the Professional Players.

* * * *

THERE is a whimsical tale going around about the bizarre manner in which this play came by its name. It seems that Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, the authors, one certain day were perpetuating an habitual custom of attempting to evolve a suitable title for their comedy. At the moment, it was going by the name of "Everybody Welcome," purely for want of something better.

Many peculiar names were being suggested. Alleged humorists were tossing about such wisps of wit as "Remember the Jane," "Reveal Chops" and "Topaze, the Young Sinner."

For a time it seemed likely that "Day by Day" would win, although it was only leading "Let's Get Married" by a nose. Angry looks were the only reward of the helpful fellow who thought a nice title would be "Heigh, Ho, Hum." Immediate suppression was the fate of the hopeful lad who thought up "Love Follows Love."

Just about that time a particularly annoying little thinker turned up with several weird ideas. When Mr. Hackett spied him, he muttered: "Up Jumps the Devil."

"Say, that wouldn't be a bad title," said Miss Goodrich.

Obviously it wouldn't. In fact, the consensus of opinion was that it seemed perfect. After a bit of evolutionary readjustment, during which it became in turn "In Came the Devil," "Here Comes the Devil" and "The Devil You Say," it was definitely decided that "Up Popped the Devil" would do.

But, like all titles, even that one was changed at the last moment to "Up Pops the Devil," the name by which the play is now known—and most favorably, at that, if you will pardon my asthma.

* * * *

Those having any ugly comment to make concerning the authenticity of this plausible little story of the naming of a play will please aim it at Mr. Vince McKnight, up to a few days ago to my positive knowledge a hired hand of the Professional Players. He wrote it. I merely stole it!

* * * *

I HAVE been asked more than once why in a recent daily column I named John Boles as my personal nomination for the kindliest and most amiable gentleman, by instinct and training, in the films. The answer is simple.

Because in a considerable association with him in the theater, on the streets, in his hotel and in my own home I have never heard him speak an unkind word of or to any one, have never heard him utter a word of profanity, either with or without provocation; have observed his unfailing kindness to little children and his graceful and respectful deference to age, have admired his honest and unaffected humility and, all in all, look upon him as the most regular guy I know—the big, handsome so-and-so!

* * * *

And if you don't believe it, I have witnesses!

ARLISS NOT A VETERAN SOON TO SEEK EASE

Although in his latest picture, "The Millionaire," for Warner Bros., George Arliss plays the part of an American business man who retires at the age of 60, the actor himself, soon to be 63, has no thought of giving up active work on his own behalf.

With each returning trip to Hollywood Arliss is questioned on his future plans by an interested public. He has steadfastly refused to say that he would make a certain number of pictures and permanently retire.

At 63 Arliss is in many ways a young man. He objects to any suggestion that he has become a "veteran" of either stage or screen. He plans very definitely to continue both stage and screen work and retirement has not yet entered his future plans.

Although the new picture, "The Millionaire," shows Arliss as a man forced to retire for his health, it is paradoxically the most energetic picture he has yet made for the talking screen.

WHAT KIND OF HUSBAND MUST WE HAVE HERE!

"The Virtuous Husband," with Elliott Nugent in the title role, is the current offering at the Rialto Theater.

The story concerns the trials and tribulations of a young married couple, with the husband abiding by the advice contained in letters from his dead mother, the letters being delivered periodically.

Pert little Jean Arthur is well cast as the young wife and turns in one of the most enjoyable portrayals of her career. Betty Compson, always capable and one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures, leaves practically nothing to be desired in her portrayal of the wordly friend of the "wronged" wife.

The principals are ably supported by J. C. Nugent, Allison Skipworth, Tully Marshall, "Sleep-'n'eat" and Eva McKenzie, with direction by Vin Moore.

Graham McNamee with the Universal News, selected short subjects and Otto F. Beck at the organ round out.

Betty Compson, by the way, could not comprehend how it was possible to train lake trout while the company was "on location" at the famous Norconion Club in southern California for early scenes of the picture.

Betty found that it was possible to throw tiny pieces of white bread into the shallow water of the lake and vast schools of the fish would promptly appear and snatch at them. The discovery that she could attract the trout to any corner of the shallow water with the bread interested the famous star greatly, and Betty was away "feeding the fishes" on many occasions when her director, Vin Moore, needed her for a scene.

"Sleep-'n'-Eat"—or are you interested?—is the only actor on the screen who advocates lack of ambition as an aid to success. In fact, the snail-paced colored boy who supports Elliott Nugent, Betty Compson and Jean Arthur in "The Virtuous Husband," would not be on the screen at all if Gaylord Lloyd, brother of the famous Harold, had not discovered him sound asleep on a Los Angeles curb.

When "Sleep-'n'-Eat" walks, he crawls; and when he sits down, he sleeps, but he crawls and shuffles through life in a way that won him an instant chance and eventual success in "Feet First."

His given name is Willie Best, and he thinks he came from Mississippi.

Ruth Chatterton, Paul Cavanagh in "Unfaithful." —Columbia.

MISS LOY BEGINS TO THINK MAYBE SHE KIDDED HERSELF

MYRNA LOY is very much afraid she has wasted a good deal of valuable time.

It seems that Myrna got the movie bug when she was attending the Westlake School for Girls in Los Angeles. She persuaded her family (she hails from Helena, Mont.) to let her study dancing under Ruth St. Denis. Myrna had some vague idea that dancing was essential to success in acting. The generations before Myrna demanded fencing as a means of obtaining grace.

In any case she joined the Denishawn dancers and was with them for three years. She finally got her chance in the movies through an introduction to Mrs. Rudolph Valentino. Henry Waxman, noted photographer, introduced her. She got a part in 'What Price Beauty," and since then she has played in "Don Juan," "Noah's Ark," "The Desert Song," "The Squall," "The Great Divide," "Bride of the Regiment" and many other films.

But in only one, "The Black Watch," was she required to do any dancing, and the dancing she did in that picture might have been learned in less than a week. So she considers that her three years with the Denishawn dancers held her back from the movies, and she is pretty much annoyed.

But she derives some slight consolation from the fact of her height. "I'm one of the tallest girls in picture—5 feet 6—and I suppose it's true that a tall girl is in greater danger of not being graceful than a smaller girl."

Wiliam Haines, Dorothy Jordon in "A Tailor Made Man." —Palace.

HAINES STILL WISE-CRACKER UNDER WRAPS!

Big business mixes with love; an adventurous American youth mixes both and, like Don Quixote, battles windmills in a reported whirl of mirth in William Haines' new comedy romance, "A Tailor Maid Man," now at Loew's Palace Theater.

This has been called the ultra-modern in pictures, as far as America is concerned. It includes a remedy for present business troubles in a tabloid lesson wedged into a collection of hilarious situations. It depicts a delicate love story, so we are told, and a very dramatic adventure of a youth who applies good old American grit to a bad situation. Information is that Haines abandons smart-cracking to a considerable extent to give a very earnest and serious performance—though he manages to get in as many laughs as usual.

The story is of a youngster who becomes an executive of a big concern and high pressure business. He high pressures himself into the heart of the lady he loves as well.

Dorothy Jordan plays the heroine. Others in the cast are Joseph Cawthorn, Marjorie Rambeau, William Austin,, Ian Keith, Hedda Hopper Hale Hamilton, Henry Arnetta, Walter Walker, Joan Marsh and Martha Sleeper.

On the Palace stage Chester Fredericks is guest master of ceremonies in a Loew revue titled "Let's Go Collegiate."

When casting was begun on William Haines' latest vehicle, "A Tailor Made Man," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials asked the star if he had any preferences as to the leading woman for the picture.

Without a moment's hesitation Haines answered, "Yes, I'd like Dorothy Jordan if it's possible to get her."

As luck would have it Miss Jordan was not involved in any other production at the time and she was immediately secured for "A Tailor Made Man."

Pressed for a reason for his choice, Haines simply stated, "She's just a grand girl; they don't come any nicer anywhere in the world."

The contagious geniality and pervasive sunshine of Haines' nature are admitted by everyone who knows him; and it is a fact that cinema and stage folk are likely to be extremely enthusiastic; but on this occasion Haines was adding nothing to what appears to be the general opinion in the film world of Miss Jordan.

On Her Way.

Ursula Parrott, author of "The Divorcee" and "Strangers May Kiss," will arrive in Hollywood next week to write a new story for Gloria Swanson.

"FIRST LADY" SECOND WEEK AT COLUMBIA

Ruth Chatterton's latest starring vehicle, "Unfaithful," remains a second week at Loew's Columbia.

In "Unfaithful," both press and public proclaim that the "first lady of the screen" has a role that allows her more opportunities for her great dramatic powers than any of her former pictures. She depicts the wife of a worshiped hero-soldier, who is the much sought after companion of all the society women of their city. Upon discovering his extra marital affairs, Miss Chatterton decides that the only way to cope with him is to throw discretion aside and lead the same sort of life her husband has fallen into.

In her attempt to compete with her husband she meets an old friend who it seems has always loved the girl and who eventually saves her from the destruction of herself that she has planned.

Paul Cavanaugh plays the role of the errant husband, with Paul Lukas in the chief supporting role as the lover. Others in the cast are Juliette Compton, Donald Cook, Emily Fitzroy and Leslie Palmer.

A series of selected short subjects complete the Columbia program.

Even a great emotional actress like Ruth Chatterton must take second place when John Cromwell, stage czar and screen director, turns to making a motion picture. Cromwell scrutinizes the story first, and, after that is established to his satisfaction, he then turns to the cast and the setting.

When John Van Druten's story, "Unfaithful," written especially for Ruth Chatterton, was handed to Cromwell, the director put every thought of the star out of his mind and concentrated on the plot.

"Of course we must have accomplished actors and actresses," says Cromwell, "but any one who is a real artist develops to the height of his talent under the influence of a strong play. The play is still 'the thing.'"

Clara in "Kick In."

Richard Wallace, director of Ruth Chatterton's starring picture, "The Right to Love," and of William Powell's "Man of the World," will direct Clara Bow in her first straight dramatic vehicle, "Kick In." Regis Toomey, Donald Crisp, Wynne Gibson, Juliette Compton and Leslie Fenton are featured in Miss Bow's support. "Kick In" is from the play by Willard Mack.

Veteran.

Willard Mack has been signed to a new long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mack is the author of more than 60 stage plays, and has contributed a number of original stories to the screen.

A FAMOUS OLD THRILLER THE MET'S FEATURE

The attraction at Warner's Metropolitan this week is "Ten Nights in a Barroom," the screen version of that successful stage play that has made history in the American theater. The second episode of the series of "Adventures in Africa" will also be on view.

The leading roles in "Ten Nights in a Barroom" are played by William Farnum and Tom Santschi. They will be remembered for their famous fight in "The Spoilers." The two stage a similar fracas in "Ten Nights in a Barroom." Farnum is seen as a loving father and an ideal family man, and is saved from ruin only through the love of his small daughter. Santschi is his evil influence. Others in the cast include Robert Frazer, Phyliss Barrington and John Darrow.

The first episode of "Adventures in Africa" caused no end of critical and public comment during the past week. The second, entitled "An African Boma," shows Wynant D. Hubbard completing final arrangements for his trek into the jungles. Weird customs of the natives, the making of a rope from bark and the thrilling capture of a puff adder are among the exciting situations in this subject.

BOBBY JONES AT EARLE IN MOVIE DEBUT

"It Pays to Advertise," the comedy from the noted George M. Cohan stage success; the first of the series of Bobby Jones Vitaphone subjects, "How I Play Golf," and the stage show headed by Frank and Milt Britton are the triple attractions to be found this week at Warner's Earle Theater.

Paramount has given "It Pays to Advertise" a consummate production. The story concerns a young man who goes into business in the hope of getting enough quick money to marry the girl of his heart. Norman Foster, Carole Lombard, "Skeets" Gallagher and Eugene Pallette have leading roles in this fast-moving comedy.

The Bobby Jones subject, first of the series, is entitled "The Putter." The champion of the links is assisted by Richard Barthelmess and Joe E. Brown, in this reel that is said not only to improve one's game but also entertain nongolfers.

Frank and Milt Britton and their Gang who head the stage show, are said to provide twenty minutes of real entertainment. Other acts are Ray and Harrison, formerly of Earl Carroll's "Vanities;" Annie, Judy and Zeke, three Georgia Singing Hillbillies, in their first stage appearance, and the Andresens, in a novelty offering.

Maxine Doyle, the Earle Orchestra, under the direction of Freddie Clarke, the usual selected short subjects, and the Graham McNamee talking newsreel complete the entertainment.

Patrons at the Earle and others who haven't reached par at their games, either at their neighborhood miniature golf courses or at a regular course, can hustle themselves over to the theater where Bobby Jones, the world's greatest golfer, author and screen star, is appearing in the first installment of "How I Play Golf," and learn more about putting in the few minutes that he appears on the screen than they could in a whole year on the links. The young golf marvel reveals for the first time the putting methods that he used in winning thirteen major golf championships.

Eleven more Bobby Jones shorts are coming and all will be played at Warner's Earle, at intervals of one every two weeks.

MISS BANKHEAD DRAWS SEVERAL INVIDIOUS STAGE COMPARISONS

ALTHOUGH Tallulah Bankhead is still attached to the English stage that brought her to international fame during the last eight years, she feels that if one should draw parallels between it and the American drama, it would be Broadway and not the Strand that would walk away with the honors.

"In my estimation the highest form of theatrical art lies in the adroit writing and presentation of satire. On the American stage this is undoubtedly the favorite type of entertainment, as is attested by the outstanding hits of the past few seasons. There were 'Lilliom,' 'Beggar on Horseback,' 'Loudspeaker,' 'So This Is New York,' 'June Moon' and 'Once in a Lifetime.'

"Now, in England satire is practically taboo. The public on the other side not only does not enjoy having its individual and collective legs pulled, but actually hates it—when they understand it. The English take themselves much too seriously to retain their perspective sufficiently to appreciate a joke on themselves.

"I believe that all international critics agree that the English have a greater finesse in presenting what is known as the 'drawing room play,'" she went on, "but for an American audience these plays would be a failure, owing to the slow and almost casual tempo used, instead of the sharp and concise characterizations and speeches so typical of our stage.

"In presenting the musical comedy or extravaganza there can be no doubt that the producers over here are so far in advance of the Europeans that there really is no basis for a comparison. The choruses are infintely better trained and gowned and the principals seem to have a greater ability in putting over vivacious numbers than their more dignified confreres of the Island Empire.

"However, I must repeat that this is not on account of any inferior intelligence or appreciation in the British public, but rather is to be attributed to the vastly superior economic life in this country, where more money is available in business and among the general public. Hence the higher caliber of life and entertainment and the more general use of those commodities that are still in the category of luxury to the war-impoverished European."

CARNIVAL OF BEAUTY LURE OF SPICY HIT

With Lowell Sherman and Irene Dunne heading what can truthfully be called an all-star cast, Radio Pictures' "Bachelor Apartment" is the featured attraction at R. K. O.-Keith's this week.

In addition to these two Radio stars, the cast includes Mae Murray, who comes back to the screen after a long absence, and four other stage and screen beauties—a quartette of former glorified Follies' girls They are Claudia Dell, Noel Francis, Arline Judge and Kitty Kelly, while the male contingent includes Norman Kerry, Ivan Lebedeff, Purnell Pratt and Charles Coleman.

Sophisticated and daring, endorsed by the D. A. R., for adults, this picture has been heralded as one of the sensations of the 1931 season. With most of the scenes laid in the novel setting of a luxurious penthouse apartment and exposing the tantalizing secrets of the socalled "fast set," built around a wealthy philanderer who is the target for half a dozen charming women, the story is modern to an extreme and, withal, said to provide a background of romance that is unique and convincing.

Lowell Sherman, as a nonchalant love bandit, surrounded by giddy women of high social circles, has the most intriguing role of his sauve career. Pursued by a quartette of beautiful women, he meets his fate after a series of exciting, mirth-provoking episodes. The love interest dominates the story and gives Miss Dunne an excellent opportunity again to demonstrate her right to stardom.

William Bishop's number, "The Organist of the Air," the final installment of the Farrell Golf Series, the current issue of R. K. O.-Pathe News and a laughable comedy, Walter Catlett in "Ants in the Pants," round out the program.

One world-famous beauty of the silent screen, and five of the most beautiful women to enter pictures since the cinema began to talk vie for beauty honors in "Bachelor Apartment."

Quite a change in beauty types, too, is evidenced by comparing Mae Murray, beautiful as ever, with the pulchritudinous newcomers. Like Miss Murray, the newcomers came from Broadway.

Irene Dunne, of "Cimarron" fame, made her stage reputation in "Showboat." She is feminine lead opposite Lowell Sherman.

Miss Dell is blonde, tall slender yet stately. Miss Kelly is blonde, with dark brown eyes and a beautiful face. Miss Francis is also blonde, but Miss Judge is small, lively, sirenesque.

Superstition.

Evelyn Brent, who begins work shortly in a screen version of the Lenore Ulric Broadway stage hit, "Pagan Lady," has exactly one superstition. she will not throw a hat on a bed, a divan, or a lounge. neither will she permit any one else to if she is present. This superstition even antedates her stage work in London, some years ago. Whistling in her studio dressing-room, breaking a mirror, dropping a comb—these mean nothing to her, but chucking a hat on a bed stirs her to protest.

Playing Around.

William Haines, having completed work in "Dancing Partner," sailed from New York yesterday on the Ile de France for a vacation trip in France and England.

A DIVERSIFIED AND ENGAGING NEW FOX BILL

One of the most human of situations, and yet one that heretofore has never been plumbed by the otherwise thorough-going seekers after dramatic sensation, provides the basic theme for "Doctors' Wives," the picture current at the Fox. Warner Baxter and Joan Bennett play the leads and Frank Borzage was the director.

The situation revolves around a physician's sense of duty to his patients—even to some of his very pretty and not always ailing patients—while his young wife is left alone to find other interests.

Quite naturally, in the circumstances, the young wife (Joan Bennett) reaches certain conclusions. She feels sure her husband (Baxter) is untrue to her. So, in a moment of pique, she entertains thoughts of other men, with the result that she finds herself whirled away in a cyclonic romance.

The time comes when her husband has her lover's life in his hands. What he does with it forms as powerful a series of incidents as Washington picture fans have experienced in a long time.

Others in the cast include Cecelia Loftus, who recently was seen here to such advantage in "East Lynne;" Victor Virconi, who plays the lover, and Helene Millard.

This week's program is further distinguished by a quartette of favorites from the Roxy Gang, a group of artists already well established in favor here. These four—Adelaide De Loca, Dorothy Githens, John Griffin and Harold Clyde Wright—are among the best the Roxy has ever offered, and they are threatened with having to respond to many an encore this week at the "F" street house.

Then, too, there is Fanchon and Marco's "Gondoliers" Idea, a colorful, glamourous stage presentation featuring the Romeros, "Aristocrats of the Dance;" Jazzlips Richardson, Moro & Yaconelli, and the Sunkist Beauties. On the whole a very worth-while bill.

Quite suitable, this might be designated as "serenade week" at the Fox, which is firmly of the conviction that serenades have just as much right to special weeks as apples, books, sartorial splendors and other objects of special attention. Therefore, for "serenade week"—you see, they don't even spell it in capital letters—the Fanchon and Marco "Gondoliers" Idea includes three familier and beautiful numbers, "Shubert's Serenade," Drigo's "Serenade," and Victor Herbert's "Spanish Serenade."

What, one may ask, has become of "Angels Serenade?"

So Different!

Frederick Kerr, who plays in Constance Bennett's new starring picture, "Born to Love," has been an actor for 50 years and has never kept a press clipping.

He doesn't own a scrap book and never has. He does not know just how many plays he has appeared in and couldn't possibly name all of the famous and near-great figures of the theater with whom he has worked.

Marie in Demand.

If Marie Dressler didn't have anything else to do she still couldn't keep all the speaking dates sought by various organizations. "I could solve the unemployment problem if I could hire substitutes for all these after-dinner speeches people want," she recently observed, back at work in the studio.

Midseason Variety Marks the Early Spring's Stage

THE PROFESSIONAL PLAYERS PLAN NEXT CAPITAL SEASON

WITH the coming of that sprightly comedy "Up Pops the Devil," at the Shubert-Belasco Theater this week, the Professional Players sing their "swan song" in Washington for the current season.

Six plays in all have made their debut here under the Professional Players' banner since last November and they have been so diversified in theme and content as to exert a varied appeal among the diversified tastes of their audiences.

Opening with the frothy little comedy concerning a mythical kingdom, "Everybody's Secret" early in the season, they then presented the genuinely delightful "Michael and Mary" of A. A. Milne, with Madge Kennedy, and followed it a few weeks later with Grace George and her original New York company in St. John Ervine's wholly charming, "The First Mrs. Fraser." The next two plays, "As You Desire Me," by Pirandello, with Judith Anderson, and more recently Philip Merivale in Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "Dr. Harmer," sounded a more serious note—and now with their last presentation, "Up Pops the Devil," the tide again turns to lighter vein.

Already report comes from organization headquarters that plans are speedily being culminated for next season's productions in Washington. Eight plays will be chosen for presentation, which will mean one a month for eight months, the usual theatrical season here. Active work for next year's subscription season will start early in the autumn when the entire list of plays for presentation will be at hand and it is hoped by the sponsors that the same interest and appreciation will be shown as has been so much in evidence during the season which is just drawing to a close.

There are always many disappointments in all lines of endeavor in this busy workaday world and the theater comes in for its full share. The Professional Players' keenest regret this season was their inability to bring "Topaze" to Washington. their most earnest desire is to keep faith with their subscribers and the theater public in general, but unforeseen events prevented "Topaze," with Frank Morgan, from reaching the stage of the Shubert-Belasco Theater.

Next season every effort will be made to see that no plans miscarry and that the productions sponsored by the Professional Players will be worthy of a hearty welcome in Washington.

COMING STAGE ATTRACTIONS

ELMER HARRIS, whose authorship of "Young Sinners," one of the outstanding successes of the past two seasons, clinched his foremost position among contemporary playwrights which he won through such earlier successes as "So Long Letty," "The Great Necker," &c., has written a new play, "A Modern Virgin." Under the banner of the Messrs. Shubert, this latest addition to the works of the stage will have its first presentation at the Shubert Belasco Theater on Monday evening, May 4, for a week's engagement prior to its Broadway opening.

"A Modern Virgin" concerns a charming, wealthy and innocent young girl who is possessed of all the recklessness of her father and all the warmth and beauty of her mother. Curious about love and life, she chafes under the strict discipline of a maiden aunt and adopts an unusual and dangerous method of seeking adventure and excitement. Her fiance, somewhat puritanical, plans to stop this practice but the subsequent developments prove to be entirely unexpected. "A Modern Virgin" gives every promise of being an adroitly written comedy with shrewd character drawing and genuinely true atmospheric touches.

Herbert Rawlinson, the noted stage and screen player and a popular favorite in Washington, heads the splendid cast assembled by the Messrs. Shubert, which also includes such competent thespians as Margaret Sullavan, Robert Strange, Nicholas Joy, Pauline Denton, Fred I. Lewis, William David, Loretto Shea, Cynthia Rogers, Paddy Reynolds, Audrey Corday, John Bramall and Boris Nickolai.

Stanley Logan, who wielded the directorial baton for "Young Sinners," "Topaze," and other past successes, has lent his skill and finesse to the staging of "A Modern Virgin."

IN ALL the history of American theatricals there was never such a play as "Death Takes a Holiday," which the National Theater Players will revive next week, beginning with a special Sunday night performance, May 3.

"Death Takes a Holiday" is an Italian fantasy from the pen of Alberta Casella, who had "one grand idea." As the title might imply, there is nothing gruesome in the play. Just the opposite. It means that if Death ever "took a day off" everything would be lovely, and the goose honking high. In this case, Death, the Old Master, decides to have a holiday—a vacation—and while he leaves his post everything goes along merrily on its way. Instead of this being a comedy that might awe the theatergoer, it is just the opposite: One that will give a welcome relief from the work-a-day world. For here is a chance to visualize the world as it might be without any such person as Death.

The Old Man is taking a holiday—and How!

NEXT week a rollicking burlesque attraction comes to the Gayety Theater on Ninth street—none other than Sam Raynor and his "Queens of Jazz," one of the big hits on the Mutual wheel.

Fritzie White and Leonard Deaba are two of the principal stars, with other bright lights supporting them in grand fashion. Sam Raynor is a Shubert star, under contract, and the rest of the cast are all of big league caliber.

This attraction will carry the usual attractive chorus, in addition to the most modern scenery and lighting effects.

GLEN ECHO IS TO OPEN SOON

If anybody doubts that spring is indeed here, the announcement that Glen Echo Park will swing wide its hospitable gates on Saturday, May 9, should dispel such doubt.

Yes, sir, the big park opens in a blaze of glory with more improvements than can be described in a short space, but which will, in all probability, be well touted in the future.

Among the new things are the grand canyon scenic "Old Mill" installed at a cost of $30,000; a thrilling "dodgem" ride, with 20 cars, and front wheel drive; a brand new shooting gallery, said to be the finest in America; new and more thrilling dips to the coaster; additions to the zippy whip, &c.

The entire park, from top to bottom, has been gone over and now shines like a good deed. Work was started on the park last October by a large force of men under the direction of Joseph S. Hart, park superintendent, in association with Park Director Leonard B. Schloss, now entering his twenty-first year as amusement purveyor of summer fun features at Glen Echo.

As usual, admission to the park will be free.

A big surprise feature, never heretofore at the park, is now under way and Washingtonians will receive news about it in the near future.

FRENCH MAIDS VISIT GAYETY

Amusement seekers of Washington will find in the "French Maids," the new Mutual Burlesque entertainment at the Gayety this week, almost every form of fun and frolic that can be packed into a two-and-one-half-hour offering.

The leads are Al Pharr, comedian; Scotty Freidel, eccentric funster; Jeri McCauley, ingenue; Jessie McDonald, brunette soubrette; Joe Land, snappy young juvenile! Harry Allen, rated among the best straight men on the M. B. A.; Lillian Rose, dashing little number leader, and Lee Smith, ingenue. There is a dancing ensemble of 20 youthful girls who are provided with many opportunities to win audiences' favor.

Monday night is gift night; Wednesday, auction night, and Friday, amateur night.

"Girls About Town."

"Girls About Town," a dramatic story of expert gold diggers whose feminine racketeering brings them into international prominence, is to be produced as an all-star film with a cast headed by Paul Lukas, Kay Francis and Lilyan Tashman. The story was written by Virginia Kellogg, former script girl who recently became a staff writer at Paramount.

At the Theaters 25 Years Ago

This feature, culled from the files of The Post, is presented on the dramatic page every Sunday, in the belief that it will revive many pleasant recollections in the minds of Washington theatergoers.

NATIONAL—Charles Richman in "Gallops."

COLUMBIA—Clara Morris in "The Indiscretion of Truth."

CHASE'S—R. F. Outcault, Augusta Glose, Emil Hoch, Jane Elton & Co., "Wireless Telegraphy" and other vaudeville acts.

MAJESTIC—"Arizona."

ACADEMY—Selma Harman in "Queen of the Convicts."

KERNAN'S LYCEUM—Miner's American Burlesquers.

"Gallops," at the National, was a play by David Gray in which Charles Richman was supported by a distinguished cast that included Frank Gillmore, Brandon Hurst, Robert Ober, Grace Filkins and Frances Starr. Several of these names are familiar to the present generation of picture lovers—for example, Brandon Hurst, who played Merlin, the court magician, with Will Rogers in "A Connecticut Yankee," at the Fox last week; Robert Ober and Frances Starr, in private life Mrs. Thomas Meighan. Frank Gillmore is high in the councils of Equity.

The Belasco was dark for the time being, but loudly proclaiming the merits of the stock season to open the following Tuesday, with Odette Tyler as star.

"The Indiscretion of Truth" was a comedy by J. Hartley Manners, in which Miss Morris was supported by John Mason, afterward star of "The Witching Hour" and long associated with Mrs. Fiske, and Guy Standing, the Sir Guy of the contemporary stage.

R. F. Outcault, at Chase's, was the famous cartoonist who created the "Yellow Kid," "Buster Brown" and other popular characters of the comic sections. Augusta Glose was the first vaudeville musician to make use of the term "pianologue," coined by Willard Holcomb, formerly Sunday and dramatic editor of this paper. Wireless telegraphy was so new that its demonstration on the stage was heralded as an "extra added attraction."

Theodore Kremer, who wrote "Queen of the Convicts," at the Academy, based his thrilling drama upon the assassination of the King and Queen of Servia.

BRISK COMEDY OF GREENWICH VILLAGE WOES

What has been designated as one of the most laughably constructed and congenially perfect comedy presentations of the New York season comes to the Shubert-Belasco Theater the week of April 27 (tomorrow), under the auspices of the Professional Players, bearing the hilarious title of "Up Pops the Devil," and from the pens of Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich. The original players, Roger Pryor and Sally Bates, conspicuously featured in their inimitable roles of Steve and Anne, constitute the company. Pages of the most eulogistic commendation have been bestowed upon this really worthwhile comedy and the excellent cast that the producers have chosen to give life and vitality to the theme; therefore, it may safely be asserted that this unique laugh getter is one of the theatrical high spots of the year. It enjoys the distinction of having played for 150 performances on Broadway this season.

This hearty laugh provoker intrigues with the story of Steve and Anne, a pair of modern sophisticates, who at first are concerned only with parties and good times, in which they are joined by their many friends in Greenwich Village, the locale of the offering. Steve's highest goal is to become a successful writer, and Anne, anxious that he should have his chance, prevails upon him to give up his advertising position and permit her, as a dancer, to secure the means for their support, while he, with sufficient time and undisturbed by other duties, devotes himself entirely to his writing.

The plan is put into effect and the customary revels become a thing of the past, but Steve gets stuck on chapter five of his first novel and becomes disgusted with the many household duties which fell to his lot. Anne encounters various difficulties of her own; a little Southern vamp attracts Steve and further complications are caused by their numerous friends who refused to be excluded so abruptly from their lives. Around these situations, the authors have created a highly amusing and fast-moving comedy, which abounds in sparkling wit and gay repartee.

A splendid cast of noted stage personages supports the featured players and comprises such favorites as Walter Glass, John Marston, Brian Donlevy, Isabel Jewell, Florence Auer, Florence Golden, Henry Howard, Mabel Montgomery, George W. Callahan and others.

Worthington Miner has staged the play in fine fashion.

Dance Recitals.

Lisa Gardiner, exponent of the true art of the ballet and a former member of the Pavlowa Ballet Russe, will give two dance recitals assisted by the Lisa Gardiner Dancers on Saturday, May 16, afternoon and evening, at Wardman Park Theater. The "dance concert" of Lisa Gardiner always holds something of vital interest to lovers of the dance as an art.

"The law of the ballet is behind all dancing," says Miss Gardiner, who varies her program with modernistic touches, showing the influence of that eminent "mime," Adolf Bolm, with whom she has toured, and also a more recent atmospheric and technical influence from Spain through her work in the studios of the famous Otero and of Pericet in Seville.

Signed.

Robert George Young, one of the outstanding younger players of the Pasadena Community Playhouse, has been signed to a motion picture contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

ADELAIDE DE LOCA, talented member of the Roxy Gang, four members of which are appearing on the stage of the Fox Theater this week.

GIRL SCOUTS' FESTIVAL OF ALL NATIONS

Four major episodes laid in foreign lands, with prologue, interludes and epilogue, entitled "The Pathway of Life," and a brilliant finale, replete with spectacular pageantry, will make up the routine of "The Festival of Nations," to be produced this week at Constitution Hall, beginning tomorrow night, and continuing through Saturday, May 2. The festival, which is being presented under the auspices of the Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia, is directed by Chalmers Brooks Fithian, assisted by Kurt Hetzel, musical director; Rita Helmes, dance director; Helen Evans O'Neill, dialogue director, and a staff of Washington artists, assisting in the production, including Robert Byrne, John Pike, Charles W. Barkley, Thomas Bendall, Duff Merrick, Anna Castle, William Cheatham, Latimer Snowden and a host of others.

Dramatic intensity and artistic pantomime will characterize the symbolic scenes, wherein Youth sets forth to learn of Life, guided by the Past and the Bearer of the Torch. Phillip Clarke, Dwight Rorer and Helen O'Neill will appear in the three leading symbolic roles. He journeys to many lands, and in his many adventures learns to know much of the Great Adventure. An impressive allegory depicting in pantomime and dance the conflict between Vice and Virtue for the domination of Youth forms a spectacular closing scene.

Settings are being placed in Constitution Hall today, and special stages with elaborate lighting equipment will be a feature of the production, the proceeds of which will go to the permanent equipment of Camp May Flather, at Stokesville, Va.

A Scoop.

A race half around the world was completed by Paramount Sound News half an hour ahead of schedule last week, and resulted in a two-day beat on the first pictures of the disastrous New Zealand earthquake.

Miljan Added.

John Miljan has been added to the cast of Ramon Novarro's forthcoming vehicle, "The Son of the Rajah." The cast includes Madge Evans, Nigel de Brulier, Conrad Nagel, C. Aubrey Smith and Fletcher Norton.

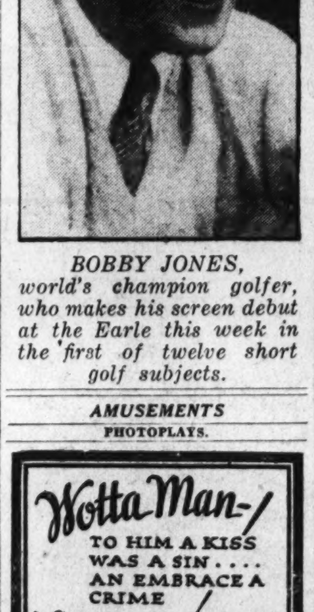
NINA OLIVETTE, one of the feminine charmers in Loew's "Let's Go Collegiate" revue, currently occupying the stage at the Palace Theater.

NOTED CANTOR APPEARS HERE TONIGHT ONLY

Cantor Josef Rosenblatt and his associate artists will present an all-request program tonight in the Washington Auditorium.

As guest artist at the Jewish Community Center not long ago, Cantor Rosenblatt drew such huge crowds that the capacity of the hall was exceeded and many of his admirers sent away, unable to gain admission. To give every one an opportunity to hear one of the most remarkable of contemporary voices, the noted cantor was prevailed upon to sing this Sunday in the Washington Auditorium, the largest concert hall in the South.

With Cantor Rosenblatt are three artists of unusual gifts: Jascha Zayde, pianist, from the Argentine, hailed as a master of the piano-forte; Joseph Gingold, violinist, from Brest-Litovsk, who has appeared in concert with many of the famous foreign artists but who has never been heard in Washington; Henri Rosenblatt, son of the cantor, rated as a bass-barytone of the same caliber as Chaliapin. Henri Rosenblatt and his celebrated father will be heard in two duets. The accompanist for the cantor will be William Friedman, one of the youngest pianists now making a name for himself in metropolitan music circles.



BOBBY JONES, world's champion golfer, who makes his screen debut at the Earle this week in the first of twelve short golf subjects.

NAT. PLAYERS IN SEASON'S FIRST FARCE

Tomorrow night, the National Theater Players take on "It's a Wise Child," the comedy written by Laurence E. Johnson and produced by David Belasco.

"It's a Wise Child" has been widely heralded as a Belasco comedy of the first order. It ran a full season on Broadway; two years on the road. The Old Master labeled it his best work in twenty years. There was a reason: Small town stuff, to begin with, "It's a Wise Child" developed into the best Big City comedy of the decade. It brings in all the elements of modern life—sophistication, modernism, altruism and innocence.

There was an old adage, "It's a wise father that knows his own child." Larry Johnson, who wrote this play, turned tables about. He figured out, in this age and generation, that "It's a wise child who knows its own father," or words to that effect. Now this, of course is going "the other way around," putting the shoe on the other foot, so to speak; but it has its own usefulness—as may be divined.

In "It's a Wise Child," the National Theater Players have their greatest opportunity, so far, for comedy. As a matter of fact, "It's a Wise Child" might properly be classified as "farce." The truth would not be stretched in this case. The whole story is somewhat ridiculous. Yet, it preserves its balance—and because of the even tenor of its way, "It's a Wise Child" was classed as one of the greatest hits Broadway has seen in the past ten years.

When the National Theater Players put on the piece, the principal parts will fall to Nancy Sheridan, Stanley Ridges, Mrs. Hibbard, John Warburton, Daphne Wilson, Burke Clarke, Forrest Orr, Eddie Poland, Roberta Beatty and Raymond Bramley.

Because of the unprecedented success of the players, there has been talk of "extra matinees" on Friday; but, unless there is box-office call for these performances, the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will prevail.

Miss Hawke's Recital.

Miss Hawke will present her pupils in a dance recital at Wardman Park Theater Friday evening, May 1, at 8:15 o'clock.

Many beautiful group and solo dances will be included in the program, among them the "Zambra," a Spanish Gypsy dance; a Hungarian dance with an interpretation of Brahm's Hungarian dances, Nos. 5 and 6, by four girls; tap routine, the Moonlight Ballet, an Indian toe routine and the "Swan." Together with many other novelties these offerings will comprise an interesting program.

Colorful costumes and light effects will enhance the beauty of the dances. Tickets may be obtained at Miss Hawke's residence, 1731 Q street, phone North 8015, or at the theater the night of the performance.

"Queer People."

Leo McCarey, who directed "Obey That Impulse," Gloria Swanson's latest picture, has been signed by Howard Hughes to handle the magaphone on "Queer People," the sensational story of Hollywood, by Carroll and Garrett Graham.

Fore!

Slow-motion in sound as well as action is used for the first time on the screen in "A Lesson in Golf," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sport subject starring Leo Diegel, famous pro-golfer. The slow-motion scenes are used to demonstrate some of Diegel's famous strokes and drives.

FLASHBACKS AND FADEOUTS

Gun metal shoes. Gun metal stockings, sleek and sheer. A Bruyere suit and an Agnes turban.—Ruth Chatterton.

Jersey City, not Chicago, is the locale of "Gentleman's Fate," the thrilling Ursulla Parrott story in which John Gilbert is to be starred next. The Italian colony in the New Jersey city serves as a background for the gangster action.

Buster Keaton, American comedian, has become a great friend of Andre Berley, the famous Paris comedian brought to America for foreign plays. He helps Keaton with his French, and Keaton helps Berley with his English.

Dorothy Burgess, one of the most prominent screen vamps of the talkies, who played her first Pathe role in "Swing High," vamps again under this banner in "Beyond Victory." Her screen roles are a direct opposite to those which won her fame on the stage.

Despite the fact that she is one of the foremost dancers on stage or screen, Marilyn Miller takes at least one dancing lesson a week.

Cliff Edwards, who has abandoned his ukulele to act straight roles, now aspires to be a "heavy." He has played several serious roles, and now wants to be competition for John Miljan.

Lewis Stone has turned oil operator. The popular player, weary of fighting against oil operations near his Venice beach home, is putting up a well in his own backyard to offset the drainage of oil from the dome under his land.

Ramon Novarro appears to have scored quite a success as a director. His Spanish dialogue directorial treatment of his last vehicle, "Call of the Flesh," has broken house records at the California Theatre, according to word from Los Angeles, and the picture will be retained for an indefinite run.

STRATHMEADE LINKS SHOWING PROGRESS

$850,000 in Contracts for Roads and Sidewalks Is Let for Development.

Construction on the new golf course and on the roadway and street system in Strathmeade grows more active from week to week.

Week before last, the Strathmeade Corporation awarded an $850,000 road and sidewalk contract to William B. Catchings, of Raleigh, N. C., who immediately brought in available teams and motorized equipment. Last Monday grading for roadways began in good earnest and will be pushed on the main arteries of the development at the rate of better than a mile a month, when the crews will be greatly augmented for work on numerous lateral streets.

Work is also being pushed on the golf course with a view to having available for play in August the first nine holes of the 27-hole layout contemplated.

A good idea of the future Strathmeade course may now be had from the site of the community clubhouse, now occupied by tool and equipment sheds and tool shops.

Has Practice Fairway.

Looking south from the clubhouse hill one sees the long first hole and the dog-leg ninth, both cutting their swaths through the dense evergreen trees. Between these two fairways is a practice fairway, wider but shorter, than the other two.

The three holes to be seen now from the club site are nearly completed and have been tiled for draining and hand raked to remove all stones to a depth sufficient to insure that frost will not uncover any after the fairways are completed.

Work on the second to seventh holes is advanced to the point where hand raking is in progress and seeding will be completed during the coming week.

Farmhouse Is Demolished.

Demolition of the farmhouse that stood on the site of the clubhouse was completed during the week, and the installation of a gasoline filling station to serve the tractors and other equipment on the development was begun.

With the addition of a new 60-horsepower tractor the coming week, bringing the number to six, additional workmen will be employed in clearing the ground for roads and streets and for the remaining holes of the second and third nine of the golf course.

The plan under way, according Henry Clarke, general manager, is to work intensively on the completion of the first nine holes of the golf course, and with a separate labor organization construct roadways both to the clubhouse site and to an area of some 600 acres in the middle of the 1,311-acre development, so that streets may be paved and utilities connections supplied in time to have this large section of the development ready for home building in the autumn. After that, the completion of the remainder of the tract will be undertaken. Plans for the golf clubhouse are being completed and it is contemplated that work on the structure can be started this summer.

Permits in March Show Big Increase

347 Cities Report Gain of 50.6 Per Cent Over February.

There was an increase of 50.6 per cent in the amount of building permits according to reports received by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor from 347 identical cities having a population of 25,000 or over during March, 1931, as compared with February, 1931. There was an increase of 34.4 per cent in the estimated cost of new residential buildings and an increase of 74.5 per cent in the estimated cost of new nonresidential buildings comparing March with February.

The estimated cost of the total building operations for which permits were issued in the month of March in these 347 identical cities totaled $152,870,709. The new buildings for which permits were issued in these cities during the month of March provided for 11,794 family dwelling units. This is an increase of 32.5 per cent in the number of family dwelling units as compared with the month of February.

Comparing permits issued in 297 identical cities in March, 1931, and March, 1930, there was a decrease of 11.3 per cent in total construction, a decrease of 14.7 per cent in the estimated cost of new residential buildings and a decrease of 5.2 per cent in the estimated cost of new nonresidential buildings.

RECREATION AREAS OFTEN RESERVED

Subdividers Employ Them to Benefit Communities and Stimulate Sales.

Public recreation areas are a permanent part of 527 real estate subdivisions in 258 cities, according to the National Recreation Association, which completed this spring four years of special service in problems of recreation and real estate. In 306 of these subdivisions, a total of 11,496 acres have been set aside for recreation purposes. Golf courses, tennis courts, beaches and athletic fields, as well as parks and children's playgrounds, are among these play spaces set aside in perpetuity.

"Subdividers of both large and small areas have carried out the plan successfully and with benefit not only to the community, but to themselves in quicker sales of property, states Louis C. Schroeder, who as William E. Harmon Memorial Field Secretary of the Association, is directing a country-wide recreation service to realtors and real estate boards. "The family of today is demanding safe play places for children, attractive home surroundings through neighborhood parks, and opportunity for adults to enjoy outdoor sport in their growing leisure time."

Areas Deeded to Towns.

An increase of 102 subdivisions providing recreation areas, and 51 cities having such subdivisions is found over a similar report of the association in January, 1930. The prevailing plan of maintaining the play spaces is deeding such areas to the municipality or township, which exempts the land from taxation and relieves the operators from the responsibility of upkeep and supervision. Of a total of 244 subdivision recreation areas for which the plan of maintenance is known, 123 have been donated to the city, twelve are proposed to be donated, 65 are maintained by real estate companies, 36 are maintanied by associations of property holders, and 8 are held in trust.

Forty-one States and the District of Columbia are included in the report. New York State leads with 61 developments reported as containing areas permanently set aside for public recreation in 30 cities. Texas takes second place with 41 developments in 13 cities; North Carolina is third with 40 developments in 12 cities, 18 of these subdivisions in the city of Greensboro alone. Thirty-five developments in 15 cities places Pennsylvania fourth, while Indiana is fifth with 28 developments in 11 cities and Ohio sixth with 23 in 13 cities.

Children Made Safe.

In this motor age, children's playground are increasingly important for the prevention of accidents," Mr. Schroeder points out. "Ample public play spaces are needed especially in the subdivision for families of moderate means, who do not have extensive home grounds. The cooperation of real estate developers in city park and recreation plans will go a long way toward avoiding congestion and solving the problem of adequate open spaces for the population of tomorrow."

The real estate service of the National Recreation Association has been financed by the Harmon Foundation in memory of William E. Harmon, a pioneer in the practice of including public play spaces in subdivisions for child safety, health and saner community planning. The service includes advice and information to subdividers who are interested in setting aside recreation areas, education of municipal officials to the value of accepting such areas when offered, and education of the general public to the value of permanent play spaces near their homes. The association recently celebrated with a meeting at the White House its twenty-fifth anniversary in promoting playgrounds and other forms of recreation under municipal auspices. Since its organization in 1906, the number of cities having public recreation under leadership has increased from 41 to nearly 1,000.

Missouri U.'s Historic Columns Threatened

Columbia, Mo., April 25 (U.P.).—The historic columns of the University of Missouri, scarred by fire and time, may be destroyed by water, if something is not done to protect them.

An examination is being made to see just how much damage already has been done. It is feared that cracks in the top are extending downward through the stone, admitting water which is slowly splitting the pillars.

Pictures of the cracks will be submitted to the alumni and an appeal made for six protective caps "to keep the columns' heads dry."

WAKEFIELD HOMES IN COLONIAL STYLE

New Community of 100 Houses Located at Highest Point in District.

Original colonial architecture distinguishes the first homes in Wakefield, a new community of more than 100 residences to be erected by R. B. Warren at the highest elevation in the District, just west of Connecticut avenue above Albemarle street.

Preserving early American traditions in a pleasing variety of designs and materials, these dwellings present a high degree of individuality and charm. Stone, brick and wide clapboarding have been delightfully intermingled to create numerous variations of old colonial effects, providing a harmonious group, while each unit is distinctly different from its neighbors.

In the planning of the homes the popular and practical center-hall design has dominated, with numerous modern refinements and comforts evident throughout. The garages are detached and constructed to harmonize with the residence in each instance.

Mr. Warren has acquired a tract which will afford sites for over 100 dwellings, and plans to develop the community so as to preserve and enhance the beauty and individuality notable of these first offerings. The location is particularly suitable for this treatment, rising high above the city and presenting wide panoramic vistas over the surrounding areas.

Immediately adjoining Wakefield is Fort Reno Park, the highest spot in the District of Columbia, and community stores, schools and churches are within a few squares. This new residential section should carry a particular interest to Washington home buyers by reason of its delightful setting and the protective features of the development itself.

PORCHES FEATURES OF FOXALL HOMES

Pleasant Outlook Is Provided Over Gardens, Cool and Inviting.

At this season of the year when one's thoughts naturally turn to the joy of living outdoors, the inviting convenience of the screened porches on the garden front of the Double-Front English Group Homes, built by Waverly Taylor, Inc., in Foxall, is most appealing. These porches have been designed to give the home an outdoor living room, with the added attractiveness of bringing one closer to his flower garden.

Cool and inviting, they can be enjoyed by the entire family; a place for the children to play, where lunch may be served, where an afternoon bridge game may be enjoyed, and where one may read and relax in the evening.

The growing conviction of the therapeutic value of the sun's rays makes these sun-bathed porches of especial interest the year round, while, on the sleeping porch above, one may enjoy the healthfulness of outdoor sleep with the convenience of a warm room adjacent in which to dress.

Abundant light is obtained for the dining room and bedroom by the use of double casement doors. An unobstructed view of the garden is provided by the use of diamond guard, wire mesh screens with iron handrail, in place of the usual wood baluster or solid partition railing. An added advantage of this type of construction is that it allows a freer circulation of air.

Visitors are always welcome at the Model Home, 4400 Volta place northwest, which has been attractively furnished and decorated by W. B. Moses & Sons.

MADE PARTNER

MILTON F. SCHWAB, member of Boss & Phelps, with which he has been associated for twenty years.

Gold Watch Presented To Milton F. Schwab

Members of the firm of Boss & Phelps presented Milton F. Schwab, a fellow member, with a gold watch and chain last week on the occasion of the completion of his twentieth year of service with the organization. Born in Washington, Mr. Schwab entered the employ of Boss & Phelps in April, 1911, as a collector of rents, becoming manager of the rental department in 1915. With the exception of two years' military service during the World War, his entire business career has been identified with Boss & Phelps.

On the close of the war, he returned to the firm as a salesman, being promoted to the post of director of sales in January, 1926, and becoming a member of the firm in January, 1929. He is a member of the Washington Board of Trade and chairman of its membership committee.

WHERE A FAMOUS POET LIVED—

WITH the exception of Mount Vernon, perhaps no house in history is endowed with the traditional interest of "The Longfellow Home" at Cambridge. John Vassal built it in 1760. Washington lived in it in 1775, and history describes the charm and gayety of the banquets given there by the General and Madame Washington. According to Colonial gossip, this sturdy mansion was the scene of that famous affair—"The Twelfth Night Party" which is talked about even to this day.

ARCHITECTS HONOR WASHINGTON MEN

H. W. Peaslee, F. C. Baldwin and Frederic A. Delano Elected by Institute.

Robert D. Kohn, of New York, has been reelected president of the American Institute of Architects for 1931-32. Mr. Kohn was graduated from the Columbia University School of Architecture in 1890, and later studied at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. He is president of the Society for Ethical Culture, and a past president of the New York Building Congress.

Other officers chosen were: First vice president, E. J. Russell, St. Louis; second vice president, Horace W. Peaslee, Washington, D. C.; secretary, Frank C. Baldwin, Washington, D. C.; treasurer, Edwin Bergstrom, Los Angeles.

The new board of directors will be composed of the officers and the following: George H. Gray, New Haven, Conn., New England Division; Robert L. Brockway, Syracuse, N. Y., New York Division; Frederick M. Mann, Minneapolis, Minn., Central States Division.

Made Honorary Members.

The institute has elected these five honorary members "as distinguished artists in their respective fields, or as distinguished laymen in their respective communities who have rendered signal and valuable service to the advancement of architecture:"

John Nicholas Brown, Providence, R. I.; Frederic A. Delano, Washington, D. C.; James Earle Fraser, New York City; Ernest Peixotto, New York City, and Edward McCartan, New York City.

Seven foreign architects have been elected honorary corresponding members, as follows: Auguste Pellechet, Paris; Gustave Jaulmes, Neuilly-sur-Seine, France; Wilhelm Kreis, Berlin; Sir Banister Flight Fletcher, London; Prof. German Bestelmeyer, Munich; Prof. Bruno Taut, Berlin; Prof. Hans Poelzig, Berlin.

Twenty-three architects were elected fellows of the institute, the selections being made by the jury of fellows, of which Charles A. Favrot, New Orleans, is chairmna.

Woman Made Fellow.

Among the new fellows is Miss Lois Lilley Howe, of Boston, who has been a member of the institute since 1901. Explaining her elevation to a fellowship, the jury said:

"While the work of this lady has been entirely of a domestic nature, she has long held an honored place in the profession. She is greatly admired for the charm and character of the work which, in the opinion of her proponents, has been a valuable contribution to the high standards of American domestic architecture, besides her literary contributions, which have been of great value to the architects and to the students. Her strong personality, known to many of her associates, has, in many ways, indicated the capacity of her sex in the profession of architecture."

The other new fellows and the chapters to which they belong are Atlee Bernard Ayres, West Texas; William T. Aldrich, Boston; Henry Baechlin, New Jersey; John Carlisle Bollenbacher, Chicago; Arthur Howell Brockie, Philadelphia; Daniel Hudson Burnham, Chicago; Hubert Burnham, Chicago; Charles Northend Cogswell, Boston; Charles Wilmott Dawson, Oklahoma; Edwin Sherrill Dodge, Boston; Wilson Cowl Ely, New Jersey; Gilbert Christopher Higby, New Jersey; Edward Harrison Hoyt, Boston; I. Howland Jones, Boston; J. Lovell Little, Boston; Olle J. Lorehn, South Texas; Elmo Cameron Lowe, Chicago; Walter Mellro, Philadelphia; Frederick Vernon Murphy, Washington, D. C.; George Bispham Page, Philadelphia; Philip Richardson, Boston, and Courtlandt Van Brunt, Kansas City.

The Fine Arts Medal of the institute has been awarded to Frederick Law Olmsted, of Boston, "for distinguished achievement in landscape architecture," and the Craftsmanship Medal to Leon V. Solon, of New York, "for distinguished achievement in ornamental terra cotta and faience."

Praise for Olmsted.

The citations follow:

"Frederick Law Olmsted—No art has been more closely identified with our architecture beginnings in this country than the art of the landscape architect. The recognition of this branch of the fine arts by the institute may, therefore, be regarded as a somewhat belated recognition.

"In the annals of architecture and its associated art of landscape design no names from the past are more highly honored than those of Charles L'Enfant and Frederick Law Olmsted, sr. The present Frederick Law Olmsted, to whom this medal is awarded, at a comparatively early age succeeded to his father's position as one of the leaders in landscape design. He served with distinction, in collaboration with Charles McKim, Daniel Burnham and Augustus St. Gaudens, on the McMillan Parking Commission. His high professional position and the importance of the accomplishment of himself and his firm, particularly in connection with large public parking projects, make him the logical recipient of this award which will, in the present instance, constitute a recognition—not merely of his own personality and achievement—but of the achievement of the entire profession of landscape architecture.

Honored as Potter.

"Leon Solon—Ever since the earliest dawn of history the art of the potter has gone hand in hand with the art of architecture. Workers in wood, workers in stone, workers in metal and workers in burned clay products have, throughout the history of the world, been the chief dependents of the architect in realizing his visions.

"The names of Henry C. Mercer, Frank J. Holmes and William D. Gates have already been honored by the institute for their contribution to the art of ceramics, and we are adding an artist to this distinguished group whose name to many of our members is synonymous with helpful cooperation. Mr. Solon is an Englishman descended from a family of potters. His skill as a designer and craftsman was devoted for many years to the work of the American Encaustic Tiling Co. During recent years he has practiced as an independent designer and consultant and he played a large part in the development of the scheme of polychrome terra cotta which enriches the new Philadelphia Museum."

Slayer of Texas Boy Scout in Prison

El Paso, Tex., April 25 (U.P.).—Jose Pena finally has given up his long fight for an acquittal on charges of slaying Alfredo Acuna, 10, a Boy Scout. Pena is in Huntsville, Tex., serving a life term.

Pena had gone through five trials in an attempt to win his freedom. He heard the death penalty pronounced three times; in one trial the jury disagreed and in the last he was sentenced to life imprisonment.

"I am glad to get to prison and settle into the routine that will be the rest of my life," Pena said. "My only regreat is that I will not have a hand in the raising of my baby that was born last year."

Pena was married in jail. His child was born last year. Mrs. Pena and the baby are constant visitors to his cell. He had been a model prisoner, and he refused to take part in a recent attempted jail break while he was still under the death sentence.

Megan Lloyd George Adds Color to Commons

London, April 25 (U.P.).—Miss Megan Lloyd George, daughter of the famous Liberal leader, has brought a touch of color to the House of Commons of which she is a member.

In her early days in the House she wore simple, plain colors, but of late has appeared in modish gowns and with her hair waved in a new fashion. One day she appeared in a handsome gown of black velvet embroidered in red and gold and wore a French beret to complete the effect.

Curfew Law Dodgers Must Wear Tuxedos

Hamilton, Ontario, April 25 (A.P.). Magistrate Burbridge has decreed that citizens become vagrants after the midnight hour if they appear on the streets without dress clothes.

"All law-abiding citizens are in bed, or at least in their homes, at midnight unless they are returning from an entertainment," said the magistrate. "Any man on the street after 12 o'clock, unless in dress clothes, is prima facie a vagrant."

BUILDING PERMITS

Freeman & Cahn, owners and builders, applied at the Office of District Building Inspector Oehmann last week for a permit to erect a two-story brick apartment building at 1315 Twenty-seventh street southeast, containing 35 apartments subdivided into 105 rooms. Lewis W. Giles is the architect and the estimated cost is $50,000.

Mrs. Royal D. Mead applied for a permit to construct a two-story brick residence with finished attic at 2400 Foxhall road, containing ten rooms. W. C. & A. N. Miller will be the builders and Gordon McNiel is the architect. The estimated cost is $32,000.

Permits to build, issued last week, include the following:

Lena C. Hare, one-story wood residence at 3007 K street southeast; cost $28,000.

Frank D. Phillips, two-story stone, brick and frame dwelling at 5310 Nevada avenue northwest; cost, $10,000.

R. W. Owen, one-story brick and concrete building for oiling and greasing autos at 6321 Georgia avenue northwest; cost, $2,000.

C. J. Ray, one-story frame dwelling at 4261 Meade street northeast; cost, $3,000.

Henry J. Connor, two and a half story brick and frame residence at 1315 Juniper street northwest; cost, $10,000.

Fred W. Morton two-story, masonry and frame dwelling at 5516 Thirtieth place northwest; cost, $9,000.

J. B. Tiffey, four two-story brick dwellings at 609, 611, 613, 615 Oneida place northwest; cost, $30,000.

James N. Hughes, two-story brick dwelling at 5707 Thirty-second street northwest; cost, $8,000.

Joseph M. Stanley, two-story brick dwelling at 3228 McKinley street northwest; cost, $10,000.

D. V. Dunigan, Inc., one-story brick gas station at 5230 Georgia avenue; cost, $5,000.

William and Jenny Kaplan, two-story brick addition and repairs to store and flat at 1834 Seventh street northwest; cost, $6,800.

Young & Oppenheimer, two-story brick four-family flat at 2245 Twelfth street northwest; cost, $7,000.

F. W. & P. Co., one-story brick shed in the rear of 1427 L street northwest; cost, $5,000.

Charles Sturbitts, two-story brick and tile residence at 3305 Morrison street northwest; cost, $8,500.

Cripple Obtains License To Drive Automobile

Pittsfield, Mass., April 25 (U.P.).—Clarence T. Belanger, 40, crippled by infantile paralysis since he was 4 years old, walked into the motor vehicle registry office on his hands and requested permission to take the regular test for a driver's license. An hour later he drove away with the license in his pocket.

Belanger's automobile is equipped with hand controls of the clutch and brakes.

Sinking Creek's Sinks Likely to Be Removed

Blacksburg, Va., April 25 (A.P.).—Virginia Polytechnic Institute engineers are trying to take the sinks from Sinking Creek, as a drought measure for the future.

The stream runs through a valley underlaid with limestone. At a point 3 miles from its mouth the sink holes, which are found over its entire course, are so large and frequent that the whole creek disappears into underground channels.

During the recent drought, residents of the section said, the water lost through the sink holes would have been of inestimable value.

COLUMBIA STUDENTS TO STUDY BUILDINGS

Courses in Summer Session Begin July 6 and Continue for Six Weeks.

New York's buildings, offices, hotels, apartments, hospitals, theaters, churches, public buildings, as well as private suburban estates, will be the laboratory for students of architecture at Columbia University this summer, announces Prof. Harold Vandervoort Walsh. Courses in the summer session begin on July 6 and continue for six weeks.

The architecture of New York City and its environs will be studied with a view to encouraging students to utilize their observations in their practical work. Advanced architectural students will be given problems in design based upon the types of buildings visited.

Work to Be Judged.

A jury of architects will judge the value of the work of each student who completes a course in architectural design offered by Prof. L. C. Dillenback, Prof. Walsh and R. M. Krob. The students, classified in four groups, according to their qualifications, will visit buildings about the city at regular intervals and will be assigned problems in design suited in difficulty to the various grades. The course is open to students who have had previous training in the orders of architecture, shades and shadows and free-hand drawing.

The planning and construction of a model of a private dwelling and its surroundings will be required of each student in a course conducted by Prof. Walsh on domestic architectural design. Prof. Walsh will lecture on the history and the principles of design and composition of domestic architecture and will have the members of his class visit the best examples of small and large houses, either finished or under construction, in the suburbs.

A systematic study of the classic architectural orders will be made in a course on the elements of architectural design to be given by Max Abramovitz. Rendered plates of the orders will be developed.

Elementary Drafting Course.

Prof. G. M. Allen will offer a course in elementary drafting especially arranged for those who have had no previous experience in architecture and who desire to lay the groundwork for further study. Another course by Prof. Allen takes up the theory of casting shadows on architectural forms so as to express elevation designs in three dimensions through

ARCHITECTS URGE HIGHER STANDARDS

Hit Bureaucratic Control of Building Projects by Government.

A movement to raise standards of architecture throughout the country by abolishing "bureaucratic" control has been launched by the American Institute of Architects. The institute urges that the Federal building program as well as the building programs of cities and States be carried out by private architects.

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be asked at once to adopt this policy in the State of New York, where extensive public works projects are to be executed. California is singled out as an example for the Nation, the institute commending Gov. Rolph for his "recognition of the well-established principle of public policy that competent private architects should be employed for all municipal, State and Federal building projects."

The position of the architectural profession, which is said to be thoroughly aroused over the tendency to concentrate architectural service in the hands of a single Government bureau, is embodied in the following statement by the institute, of which Robert D. Kohn, of New York, is president.

Bureaucratic Tendency Hit.

"The American Institute of Architects affirms that the public buildings and monuments in every community of the Nation should proclaim the highest standards of enduring architecture, and that in their design the customs, traditions and local materials of the community in which they are located should be fully recognized.

"The institute further affirms that such standards of excellence can be achieved only by enlisting the services of the best ability in the architectural profession that is locally available, and that every community is entitled to such services.

"It also affirms that men capable of producing these results are not to be found in subordinate capacities in State, municipal and other civic planning bureaus, and that the concentration of planning and designing buildings in such bureaus must inevitably tend to produce stereotyped, mediocre, uneconomic and uninspiring results.

"The institute further believes that a national policy of encouraging private business initiative is wise, and that therefore the operation of State, municipal and other bureaus for the designing of buildings and monuments is inconsistent with this policy and an invasion into the field of individual professional activity.

Care Urged in Selection.

"In urging upon State, municipal and civic authorities the desirability of availing themselves of the services of architects in private practice, the institute stresses the importance of the care which must be taken in their selection. That they should be chosen for reasons of fitness alone, and on the basis of their records, can not be too strongly emphasized.

"The institute through its chapters will transmit these views to the proper State, municipal, and other civic authorities throughout the country, and will take such other measures in cooperation with related organizations as may be necessary to accomplish the aims expressed herein."

The institute charges that inferior architecture, unfair to the people, will result from the Government's present policy of "carrying into effect the greatest national building program the world has ever known."

The Government departments directing this program have departed from the policies laid down by President Hoover, former President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon by confining architectural effort chiefly to the office of the supervising architect of the Treasury, it is declared.

The country, as a result of this course, is being deprived of the best architectural ability, while "a really unexampled" opportunity to contribute to higher civilization is being lost, it is asserted.

New Department Advocated.

The institute advocates the establishment of a Federal Department of Public Works, saying:

"The American Institute of Architects places itself on record as sponsoring the early development of a Federal Department of Public Works in order that all Government construction agencies shall be efficiently correlated under one executive head, presumably of Cabinet rank; with two assistant secretaries, one in charge of engineering projects, the other in charge of architectural projects.

"The function of this department should be solely administrative and supervisory. In this way only can the best engineering and architectural ability of the country be made available for the execution of public works."

The institute points out that for 30 years it has cooperated with the Government in the planning and development of Washington, many distinguished architects serving without compensation on the McMillan Commission, the National Commission of Fine Arts and National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Ask Use of Local Architects.

"We welcome," the statement continues, "every opportunity to make available to the Government the best professional ability which the country possesses in order that the splendid example already established in our National Capital may be extended to every community where these ideals may be reflected and emphasized in our Federal architecture.

"Great sums of money have been appropriated by the Congress for the erection of many governmental structures in all sections of the country. Under the stress of circumstances, despite the large organization of the Office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, few out of many projects have been assigned to architects in private practice, but it is the conviction of the architectural profession that public policy will be best served by a further extension of this work into the hands of able architects resident in the localities which the buildings are designed to serve.

"Their selection should be left to a board which might be composed of the chairmen of the public buildings committees of the Senate and House, a representative of the department concerned, disinterested architects and a qualified layman representing a national civic or business organization.

"The Institute is now faced with the facts that the departments in charge of the execution of the present Nation-wide program have not been guided by the policy stated by President Hoover. Data furnished by the Government shows that while the public buildings in the National Capital have been entrusted to architects of distinguished reputation, the policy for the country at large has thus far been restricted to the appointment of a comparatively few architects in private practice.

"Outside of Washington, of 378 buildings to be erected in the United States, only 40 buildings in eighteen States have been assigned to architects in private practice, leaving the remaining buildings in the Office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury. The American Institute of Architects submits that this policy is unfair to the Nation at large. The institute reiterates its stand that every section of the country is entitled to public buildings which shall represent the best architectural ability of the Nation."

Bankers Conclude Course in Realty

71 Members of Institute Chapter Enrolled for Lectures.

The course in real estate and conveyancing just concluded by Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, according to Aubrey O. Dooley, chairman, educational committee of the chapter, was well received by the members of the institute and junior bank officers who attended the series of lectures. In commenting on the course, which was the first of its kind ever conducted by the local chapter, Mr. Dooley said "that the counsel and experience of the carefully selected speakers brought to the banking fraternity a splendid elementary insight into the methods of real estate practice as the banker contacts with it.

"There were 71 members of the chapter enrolled for the course and attendance at the various lectures throughout the winter months was remarkably high. After each lecture an informal quiz was conducted by John A. Petty, executive secretary of the Washington Real Estate Board, who outlined the program and assisted at each of the sessions.

"In addition to Mr. Petty, who delivered the first lecture of the course, the following realtors and others lectured on some specialized subject: Roger J. Whiteford, James J. Becker, Arthur G. Bishop, G. Percy McGlue, William P. Richards, J. F. M. Bowie, Waverly Taylor, William J. Flather, jr., H. L. Rust, jr., James P. Schick, G. W. Eliot, 2d."

PROJECTS ADVANCE IN NORTHEAST AREA

Rapid Progress Is Made by Community Development in Benning Road Section.

Rapid progress is being made in carrying out an extensive community development in northeast Washington adjoining Benning road between Twenty-second street and the Anacostia River Park area. The culmination of this project can best be described as being divided into three parts: The work of Charles D. Sager, realtor and builder, in the erection of a very large community of new, fully modern homes; the work of the Federal and District Park and Planning Commissions in the creation of a great park development, and the work of the District school authorities in the planning and execution of a comprehensive educational and recreational center adjoining the park.

For somewhat more than two years what is known as the Kingman Park development of new homes has been in progress and at this time there are several more attractive streets filled with new, modern homes. This community is rapidly developing into a city in itself in that it is complete with homes, stores and schools.

Much work has been done toward the completion of the plans for the park area. Provisions have been made for reclaiming a very large area of what was otherwise marsh land and the creation of two large artificial lakes which have been given the names of Kingman and East Lakes.

On the north side of Benning road and bounded on the East by the park

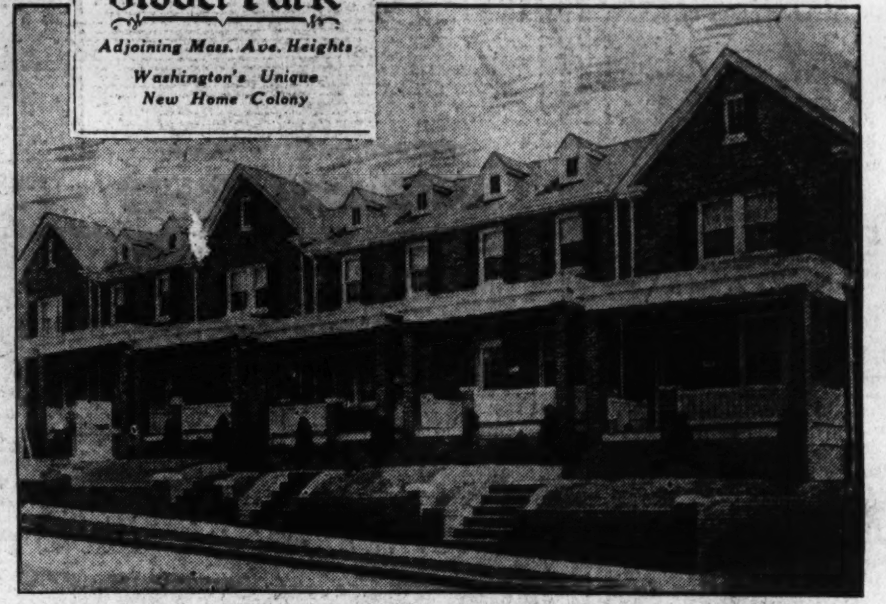
EXCEPTIONAL HOME VALUE



IT is natural for normal people to want a home of their own, with the freedom, independence and prestige it insures. No one who has bought in Glover Park has ever had a regret—unless it be that he did not buy much sooner.

That many discerning people recognize the unquestioned values of the homes in this delightful community is shown by the fact that seven of the homes in this new group were sold before completion.

They are perfect examples of construction. Face brick is of the artistic and enduring type used in costly homes . . . rear porches and all openings are screened . . . flawless double oak floors throughout . . . your own choice of white or natural finish trim . . . wallpapers of finest quality and in exquisite taste . . . countless floor and wall plugs . . . huge cedar-lined closets . . . beautiful colored tiled baths with showers and all built-in equipment . . . TILED kitchens that will thrill every woman, have Sanitas ceilings, inlaid linoleums, double drainboard sinks, built-in ironing boards, special type dressers and Frigidaire. The 6 rooms are UNUSUALLY LARGE and deep. FULL WIDTH front and double rear porches, and each house has an attractive detached garage. Lawns are elaborately planted . . . street and alley paved with concrete.

Don't fail to see these homes and this ideal home colony . . . the nearest-in new home development in N. W. Section. Already nearly $2,000,000.00 worth of houses have been built and sold here.

SIMPLICITY, achieved by severity of line and mass, is the outstanding characteristic in the decoration and furnishing of the new Modernistic Apartment in Tilden Gardens. There is a compactness and orderliness about it that will strike a responsive chord in those of simpler tastes.

Superfluous ornamentation has no part in this home. The effect is decidedly different, with a strong appeal for those to whom "habit," and "the customary way of doing things," are not necessarily inviolate.

NEW AGENCY SEEN FOR REALTY FINANCE

Subject Will Be One Among Others to Be Studied at Baltimore Session.

Chicago, Ill., April 25.—The possibilities of an entirely new agency for the rapid finance of realty deals and the influence of the public mind on the structures erected in this country, are subjects to be discussed by prominent men at the general sessions of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Baltimore May 27 to 30.

Marcus Nadler, assistant director of the International Institute of Finance in New York University, a well-known authority on real estate finance in foreign countries, will speak before the Realtors on "Central Mortgage Banks in Foreign Countries and Their Losses for Us." Central mortgage banks are banks to which local credit institutions sell their mortgages. The central banks, in turn sell their bonds to the public.

Not About Clothes.

Paul Nystrom, professor of marketing at Columbia University, New York City, who has been a special investigator for the Wisconsin Tax Commission, director of trade research for the United States Rubber Co., and was assistant professor of political economy at the University of Wisconsin, will speak on "The Influence of Fashion in the Real Estate Business." Prof. Nystrom will tell the Realtors how to take the public pulse in the matter of what it wants in new commercial buildings, office buildings and homes. He will describe how changing ideas of fashion makes it necessary for the Realtor-builder to color office walls and home roofs in one tint one season, and in another the next.

"How Real Estate Is Proving to Be the Anchor in the Investment Field" is the title of the timely subject on which the association's president, Harry S. Kissell, Springfield, Ohio, will speak before the convention body. Mr. Kissell's address will be supplemented with data that will show how realty equities have come through the past year with more success than is generally known.

Brokers, home builders and subdividers will be interested in the address of Dr. John Gries, head of the United States division of building and housing, and secretary of the White House commission on home ownership and home building. Dr. Gries will describe the work of this commission, and will give valuable advice on the encouragement of home owning.

The fourfold tax program of the Realty Association has come to a report stage, and Prof. S. E. Leland, of the University of Chicago, will tell what nearly a year's research in the tax problem "as it affects realty" has revealed. Prof. Leland is in charge of the program, begun by the association last year, to develop practical data that might be used throughout the country to lighten the tax on real property.

Detroit Judge Will Speak.

Judge Arthur J. Lacy, of Detroit, chairman of the national property owners division of the association, will report at the convention on the rapid growth of these organizations of private property owners. Philip W. Kniskern, of New York City, will give the status of the widely discussed plan for the certification of real estate appraisers by the formation of a professional society of the men who are in the business of valuing real property.

For the ten divisions of the association that will hold separate meetings during the convention, the following were added to the program last week:

"Facts to Be Considered in Plant Location," H. C. Dunn, chief of the merchandising division, U. S. Department of Commerce, before the industrial property division.

"Economies in the Operation of Office Buildings," John B. Lear, Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Co., before the property management division.

"Condemnation Appraisal Procedure," Peter Hanson, Glendale, Calif., before the appraisal division.

"Advantages and Limitations of Specialization," E. Avery McCarthy, McCarthy Co., Los Angeles, before the brokers' division.

"The Management of Cooperative Apartment Buildings," Thomas J. Fleming, Ross & Browne, Chicago, before the cooperative apartment division.

"New Developments in the Cooperative Apartment Field," Shiller W. Framheim, McKey & Poague, Chicago, before the cooperative apartment division. J. Alton Lauren, Chicago, will conduct an open forum on ways and means of stimulating the cooperative apartment idea.

Noted Editor Before Brokers.

"Future Design and Development in Residential Construction," A. Lawrence Kocher, editor, Architectural Record, New York, before the home builders and subdividers' division.

"Farm Lands as an Investment Today," Lewis C. Gray, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, before the farm lands and country estates' division.

"Superiority of First Mortgage Investment," M. Morgenthau, jr., president and manager of the National Realty Service Corporation, New York City, before the mortgage and finance division.

The National Association of License Law Officials, composed of the men who administer the laws under which those in the real estate business are licensed in 26 States, will meet during the convention. This organization, formed a year ago to further the work of increasing standards of practice in the real estate field, will have a program of speakers on May 28. A. A. Crissey, Chicago, president of the association, will preside.

Make Them All Alike.

Walter W. Rose, chairman of the Florida Real Estate Commission, will speak on this program on the question of a uniform code that might be adopted in the various States for the licensing of real estate operators.

Charles L. Wanless, chairman of the real estate committee for the State of Illinois, is listed on this program to speak on "What Is the Most Efficient Manner in Which to Combat the Nonlicensed Operator."

the medium of light and shade. He will also teach a course in architectural methods of presenting perspective of buildings or designs.

A study of the revivals and successive phases through which Western architecture has passed since the late Renaissance with special emphasis upon the evolution of American architecture from the Colonial period will be the subject of a nontechnical course by Prof. E. H. Swift. Prof. Swift will take up types and theories in the structural art of modern times in Europe and America.

Courses in freehand drawing for architects will be given by Mr. Abramovitz and Mr. Krob. They include courses in pencil outline drawing and shading from flat and casts, advanced work in pencil drawing of architectural subjects such as ornament, buildings and landscape gardens, charcoal drawing and outdoor water-color drawing.

Texan Uses Two Oxen, Equal to Four Mules

New Braunfels, Texas, April 25 (A. P.).—Hardly 50 miles from the State capital of Austin, motorists frequently stop in amazement to watch a 22-year-old farmer driving a yoke of oxen to a plow.

Max Harborth, who says he has never driven anything else (except his automobile) believes his beasts of burden superior to others more commonly used.

Oxen, he says, are the cheapest to feed, being content and healthy on tree branches, grass and water. They are easily controlled, despite their stubbornness, and "equal in endurance and strength to four mules."

Wins Whiskers Contest.

New Orleans, April 25 (U.P.).—A whisker growing contest sponsored by a department store found J. R. Godfrey the possessor of the fastest growing hirsuite adornment in New Orleans. In less than a week Godfrey had twelve-thirty seconds of an inch on the sides of his face and thirteen-thirty seconds on his chin. He won the title and $40.

Plantation Becomes Lively River Port

Goodhope, La., April 25 (A.P.).—Goodhope is the infant prodigy among Mississippi River ports.

In six years Goodhope has grown from a cotton and rice plantation to the third largest river port from the standpoint of tonnage handled. New Orleans and Baton Rouge alone exceed the 300,000 tons unloaded at Goodhope.

Growth of the town began in 1925 with building of repair yards by a tank car company. Then docks were built and equipment installed for the handling and storage of oil and liquid cargoes from ocean-going freighters. Other industries were attracted, and in 1930 60 ships were unloaded.

Cotton Reduction Seen For El Paso Territory

El Paso, Tex., April 25 (U.P.).—A 15 to 20 per cent reduction in cotton acreage in the El Paso territory is predicted for 1931 by W. R. Squires, general manager of the Southwestern Irrigated Cotton Growers Association.

"Combined with our work to eliminate marginal production and marginal cultivation, and the economic situation which has delayed planting from four to five weeks, there is certain to be a reduction," Squires said. "The average over the entire cotton producing region probably will not be more than a 5 to 10 per cent cut," he said. "However, a 20 to 30 per cent reduction is needed to bring back 14 cent cotton."

HOMES BEING BUILT BY WOMEN SAVING

Have More Vision Than Men and Make Sacrifices to Get Home.

The bulk of American homes—those modest, unornate habitations of the overall worker—represent women's planning and not men's, says the National Association of Real Estate Boards in its weekly story for the public.

Sadly, the association, composed mostly of men, reveals that papa often says no when mama sighs for a suburban view. He says that it can't be done on his wages and that he won't go into debt; and often when mama persists he gets a little mad.

Do these wives stop there? No, and if they did the Nation would be short a good many owned homes that line our streets today.

What do they do? They cut down on papa's calories, and save the down payment from their meager household allowances.

And papa never notices the change, say many women, gleefully, who sent their home owning stories to the Real Estate Association in its recent national contest on "How I Got My Home."

A partial survey of letters from this point of view shows that from Maine to California and from North to South, vacant homes have been filled with happy families and bright new cottages have risen on bare subdivisions with funds, saved by determined women, on meat and potatoes.

The men described in these letters were willing enough, but they did not have the vision to see how $15 and $20 incomes could be stretched to include home ownership. If the truth must be told, many of these women didn't see the end of the road, either, but they wanted to try, and after the start was made the husbands joined the undertaking.

"I wanted a home, but my husband said we couldn't afford it," appears with dramatic regularity in the contest letters from the owners of small residences.

is a tract of ground containing approximately 42 acres which was purchased for the development of an extensive educational group of buildings. Work has been started on one of these schools and the plans call for the completion of the platoon grade school for use in the September term. Contracts have been awarded providing for an expenditure of nearly one-half million dollars for the new Junior High School and rapid progress is being made in the erection of this building which is to be completed and ready for occupancy February 1, 1932. Plans also provide for a large Senior High School, which will be located near Benning Road as well as athletic stadiums and a recreational field.

It is believed that when these plans are fully carried out, one of the finest educational centers in this section of the country will be established and that the wholesomeness of this environment will be an important character-building influence which will be felt for many years to come.

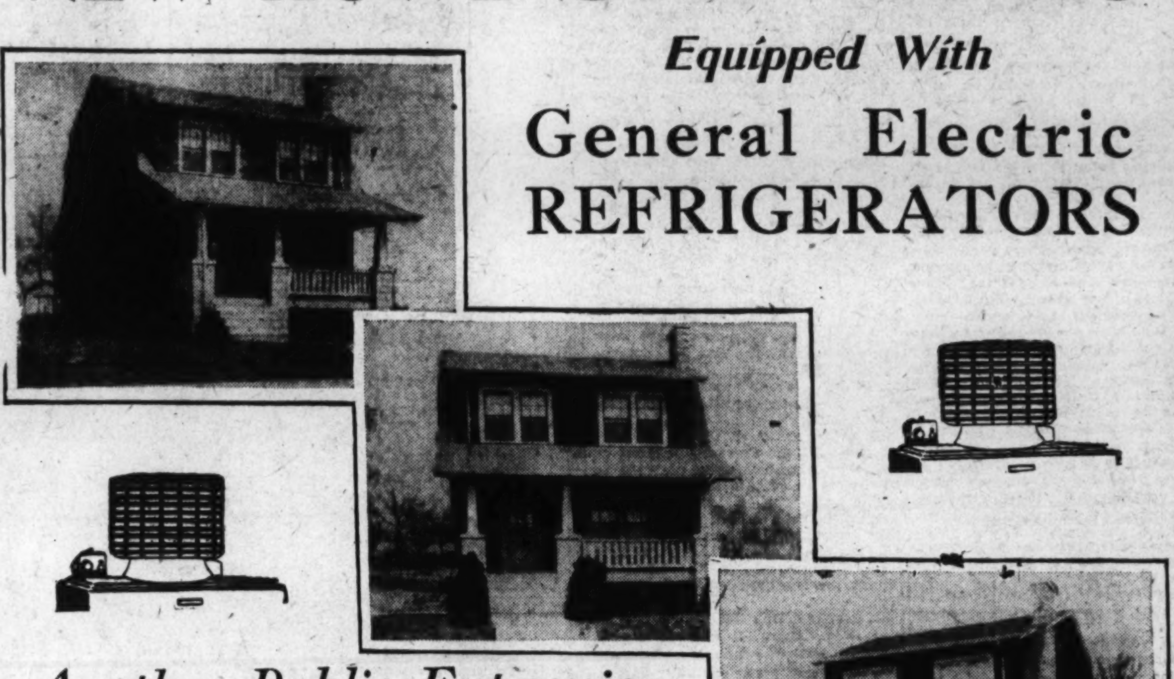
NEW HOWENSTEIN HOMES

Equipped With

General Electric REFRIGERATORS



Another Public Expression of

"MONITOR TOP" SUPERIORITY

The Howenstein Co. accepts a fact that is recognized by real estate dealers everywhere—Public Preference for the General Electric Refrigerator.

The Howenstein home, for more than 25 years, has received the approval of the Washington public. To further warrant this public approval the Howenstein Co. is equipping its new homes with the General Electric Refrigerator.

The overwhelming public response to General Electric refrigeration has more than justified the Howenstein Co. in their choice. 1928 . . . 1929 . . . 1930 . . . 1931 have increased the number of General Electric users to the tremendous figure of more than one million.

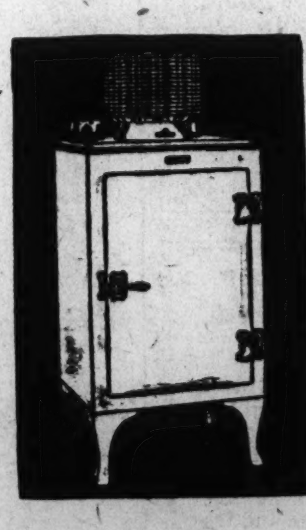
Now, as a fitting climax to a superb record, the General Electric Refrigerator carries an unqualified three-year guarantee—the Broadest Owner-Protection Ever Offered With an Electric Refrigerator.

Real estate dealers, realizing that the General Electric Co. could not afford such a guarantee unless their product was mechanically sound, have confidently accepted that product:

The Refrigerator with the Flawless "Monitor Top"

The Simple Refrigerator No Fans—No Belts—No Gears

The Refrigerator With the ALL-STEEL Cabinet



A Product Is Judged by Its Users

The fact that leading real estate dealers—such as the Howenstein Co.—are equipping their new homes with the General Electric Refrigerator is the highest recommendation . . . It should furnish you final conviction of General Electric Superiority.

Leading University to Help Convocation Bestow Highest Degree.

Eminent delegates from representative American universities will take part in the special convocation to be held by the George Washington University on Thursday morning, when Prajadhipok, King of Siam, will receive an honorary degree and will be presented with greetings from American institutions of learning.

The convocation will take place at 9:45 in the morning at the Pan-American Union and will be attended by high officials of the Government, the heads of the diplomatic missions, and a small group of invited guests.

Harvard University will be represented by Courtney Crocker, LL. B., former foreign adviser at the Court of Siam, and an alumnus of Harvard. Representing Yale University will be Henry Barrett Learned, a graduate of that institution and president of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia. Princeton University will send William Kelly Prentice, professor of Greek. Columbia University will be represented by Marcus Benjamin, of the Smithsonian Institution; the University of Virginia, by Hugh Obear, a prominent member of the bar; Johns Hopkins University, by William Walter Cort; the University of Chicago, by Richard Norman Owens, a member of the faculty of the George Washington University. Dr. Charles Riborg Mann will represent the American Council on Education, and Benjamin W. Frazier, the United States Office of Education.

Prayers by Dr. Freeman.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will offer the invocation and pronounce the benediction. Music will be played by the United States Marine Band under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson.

Columbian Women of the George Washington University entertained at a brilliant banquet on Friday evening at the Chevy Chase Club in celebration of the thirty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the organization. The presence of a distinguished group of official ladies, who attended as guests of honor, marked the occasion as the outstanding university social function of the year. Miss Elizabeth Cullen, president of Columbian Women, presided at the banquet, the program for which was arranged by Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr.

On Saturday evening the George Washington University Drama Club presented its spring play at the Wardman Park Theater. The production, St. John Hankin's "The Cassilis Engagement," was staged under the direction of J. Milner Dorey, lecturer on play production in the university.

Glee Club Sings May 8.

The George Washington University Men's Glee Club will give its annual concert on Friday evening, May 8, at the Mayflower Hotel. The concert will culminate a most successful season for the club, during which it has won honors for the second time in the national intercollegiate glee club competition; has appeared upon the program of a local theater; has sung at a number of important conventions, including the Modern Language Association of America and the Daughters of the American Revolution; has given several radio programs and has been chosen to participate in the Festival of Nations.

The final group of songs on the concert program will be given by the combined men's and women's glee clubs, with a chorus of 60 voices.

Civic Pride Urged On School Pupils

Assembly at Business High Addressed on Subject of Cleanliness.

In this week's assembly the seniors at Business High School were urged to make Washington a better city. Principal Allan Davis said that one's personal order and equipment showed even in the contents of a man's pockets or in the files of his desk. Mr. Davis believed that his students could and did help by their interest in every effort made by the citizens.

Miss Selma Borchardt presented Lynn F. Woodworth, who has recently been honored by the French Academy. As teacher of physical training, Mr. Woodworth was asked to give advice on personal cleanliness, but "since that was a subject so close to the skin it was a bit tender." Mr. Woodworth contented himself by a review of the radio advertisements on cleanliness.

George Adams, secretary of the unemployment committee and of the Junior Citizens Alliance, then addressed the students on the clean-up campaign. Mr. Adams asked the seniors to think of themselves as the "city builders of tomorrow."

INSPIRATIONAL TALK IS HEARD AT BOYD'S

Fourteen Points of Pleasing Personality Are Described by Speaker.

Napoleon Hill, of New York and Chicago, an inspirational speaker of national reputation, addressed the Boyd Business University students in its assembly Tuesday morning.

Mr. Hill spoke on "The Habit of Doing More Than You Are Paid For," and "A Pleasing Personality." In Mr. Hill's opinion these two points constitute the right combination for success.

Mr. Hill described the 14 points which make up a pleasing personality is poise, versatility, appropriateness of clothing, posture of body, voice—tone, pitch and color; tactfulness, sincerity of purpose, choice of language, sense of humor, imagination, good health, method of shaking hands, be a good listener and positive thoughts.

In the course of his talk Mr. Hill pointed out what he considered appropriate clothing for the future secretary and office worker to wear. He said, "Lasting impressions may be made in the way of dress. The best-dressed person in business is dressed in such harmony that you can not tell how he was dressed a few minutes after his departure."

Received With Enthusiasm.

Mr. Hill's talk was received with considerable enthusiasm and interest as he related several success stories of how it pays to do more than one is paid for. In his opinion many people today are trying to get more than they really are worth. He thinks that if a person would try to give more, that they would naturally receive more in the majority of cases.

He urged the student body and its guests to try always to give the best and not be a clock watcher; to be active, courteous and an efficient secretary.

Every Tuesday morning the Boyd Business University has a speaker of national importance to address the students on inspirational and vocational subjects. This is one of the things that Boyd School does in its vocational work to assist students to make the right decision in the selection of their life work. Vocational guidance is stressed in these talks, which are open to the public. They start at 11:15 a. m. and last for about 45 minutes.

Zain Contest Aid.

On Friday morning at assembly Mr. Dickinson, of Livingstone Academy, gave a brief talk on "What Constitutes a Good Advertisement."

This series of Friday morning talks by local advertising men is in the interest of The Post-Zain advertising contest, in which $10,000 is offered for the best advertisements. The Boyd School gives special prizes each week to the best advertisement written by a student in this contest.

This is another of the many interesting educational features the school is doing to make its students think more accurately and constructively that they may be able to give more and better service to their future employers.

Sport Plans Made By Law School

"C" Club of University to Divulge Future Program at Dinner.

Plans for increased athletic activity at Columbus University Law School will be divulged at a dinner of the "C" Club May 16 in the Colonial Hotel. Among the speakers will be Tom Mills, director of athletics at Georgetown University; Curly Byrd, Maryland football coach; "Dutch" Bergman, director of athletics at Catholic University; Fred J. Rice, former basket ball coach at Catholic University; Walter Young, director of athletics at American University; Charles W. Darr, president; William E. Leahy, dean, and Ray Walter, representing the students.

The organization will be presented with a cup for ranking second in the basket ball season of the Washington College Conference. The award will be made by B. E. Hunsinger, president. Sefton Darr, assistant dean, will preside.

Herbert W. Reichelt, "C" club president, will be chairman of the committee on arrangements. Other members will include Charles Iovino, Edward Dolan, George Cozzens, jr., Frank Lovelace, John Dwyer and Mr. Walter.

"Night of Fun" Planned By Friendship House

A "night of fun" will be given by the Friendship House, 324 Virginia avenue southeast, next Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock at the Hine Junior High School, Seventh and C streets southeast.

There will be plays by the various clubs and the Friendship House Glee Club will render a group of songs. After the entertainment there will be dancing in the gymnasium with music by the Concord Club Orchestra.

After saving pennies until they had 500, a couple appeared at Greenville, S. C., for a marriage license and paid for it with them.

STUDENTS TO VISIT PHILADELPHIA PORT

Georgetown Foreign Service Class to Study Harbor and Facilities.

Georgetown University students, members of the class in international shipping at the School of Foreign Service, will visit Philadelphia May 1, to study harbor and freight facilities. Similar inspection trips have been made by the class in recent years, alternating between Philadelphia and Baltimore.

At Philadelphia the Georgetown group will be taken about the harbor by Port officials and entertained during their one-day stay. Several members of the faculty and Government officials are expected to accompany the delegation.

These trips are arranged annually by Prof. Alfred H. Haag, head of the department of international shipping at the school. They have become a part of the shipping course, and students making the trip are called upon to submit written reports for which they are given credit.

Butler Debate Is Tomorrow.

Announcement was made at the School of Law that the Butler Law Club debate would be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, the winner receiving as a prize a photograph of the United States Supreme Court, bearing the autograph of each justice. This prize is donated by Assistant Dean Hugh J. Fegan. The law school club is named after Associate Justice Pierce Butler.

While debaters have been selected, as result of recent competitions, the sides they are to take in the debate had not been determined. The question is: "Resolved, That the present laws restricting immigration into the United States are in the best interests of the people." James A. Sullivan, of Illinois, and Mervyn T. Grosjean, of Ohio, seniors, and Peter J. Toner, of Pennsylvania, and J. R. Cummins, of Canada, second-year classmen, are the debaters.

The three judges for the contest are J. C. Cromelin, William E. Furey and William H. Collins, Assistant United States Attorney. Each is a graduate of the Georgetown Law School. The Butler Club will hold its annual banquet Tuesday night at the Carlton Hotel with Justice Butler as guest of honor.

Gould Club Member Wins.

An interclub debate was held at the law school Tuesday night between the John Carroll and Ashley M. Gould Clubs. Cornelius K. Hurley, of Gardner, Mass., member of the Gould Club was adjudged winner and James F. O'Donnell, of the District of Columbia, a member of the Carroll team, was chosen second best speaker.

Mr. Hurley holds the Ph. B. degree from Holy Cross College and is a student in the first year afternoon class at the law school. Mr. O'Donnell is a member of the same class, having graduated cum laude from Georgetown College.

Other debaters were William J. Madden, of District of Columbia, representing the Gould Club, and Robert Walton Crisuolo, of Trenton, N. J., for the Carroll Club. Al Philip Kane, of the District, chancellor of the Carroll Club, presided. The judges were Richard A. Mahar, South Trimble and Vallie Whittington, all graduates of the law school.

Dr. Coutinho to Speak at New York.

Dr. J. DeS. Coutinho, head of the Portugal and Brazil Seminar at the Foreign Service School, is to give a lecture at New York University May 1 on the Portuguese language. While in New York he will call upon the Consuls General of Brazil and Portugal, the former, Senor Santalo, having been formerly Commercial Attache to the Brazilian Embassy in Washington and a staunch friend of the Foreign Service School.

In view of great interest in the foreign policies of Soviet Russia, Dr. Andrei Popovici, Secretary of the Roumanian Legation, was invited to address the seminar on the Russian revolution and the Soviet state at the Foreign Service School Thursday evening. His subject was "Roumania and Soviet Russia."

The Georgetown Mask and Bauble Club will present "If I Were King" at three public performances May 4, 5 and 6 in Trinity Parish Hall in Georgetown. Before the Washington performance, however, the club will enter the annual Fordham University dramatic contest next Friday, May 1. It will present "The Valiant," the successful play given by the Hilltop aggregation in Philadelphia last year.

Will Meet Other Colleges.

The same cast, consisting of C. DeWitt Coffman, Desmond Murray, Lester Burdett and Gerard MacAllister, will represent Georgetown against St. Joseph's College, of Philadelphia, Canisius College, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Fordham. Two of the judges will be Wilton Lackaye, the actor, and S. Marion Tucker, of Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. Mr. Lackaye is an alumnus of Georgetown.

Competitions for the Quicksall Medal will take place at Georgetown College Monday evening, and for the Brennan Medal the evening of May 4. The Quicksall award is for the best oral examination in three plays of Shakespeare, chosen by Dean R. Rush Rankin, S. J. The plays this year are "The Taming of the Shrew," "Henry IV" and "Othello."

The Brennan Medal is awarded the student who obtains the highest rating on an oral examination taken from Doyle's "Defense of the Catholic Church" and Chetwood's "God and Creation."

Cooper to Deliver AmericanU.Speech

Annual Commencement Is to Be Staged on June 1; Functions Begin.

Dr. William John Coooper, United States Commissioner of Education, will deliver the commencement address to graduates of American University on Monday, June 1, it was announced last night by Dr. Lucius C. Clark, chancellor of the university.

Dr. Cooper will speak at 10 o'clock Monday morning in the college gymnasium-auditorium on the campus, Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues. Diplomas will be awarded by Dr. Clark as head of the institution.

Already student activities have begun their precommencement functions, with receptions, "formals" and annual banquets.

Dr. and Mrs. Clark and Miss Mary Louise Brown, dean of women of American University, attended the ceremonies at Baltimore Friday, when Dr. David Allan Robertson was inaugurated president of Goucher College.

NATIONAL U. TEAM RESUMES DEBATES

University Class Is Guest of Register of Wills for One Day.

National University's regular debate schedule was resumed last night when the two class teams argued the merits of Senator Capper's proposed Constitutional amendment on marriage and divorce laws. The debate program had been interrupted by a two-week series of preliminary tilts for the final interclass debate of the year next Saturday.

In last night's debate M. H. Mooney, Tillie Oesbord, Borah Epstein, D. Moreland and Irene Leonard contended that Senator Capper's proposed amendment to the Constitution should be adopted. A second team, including Rosie Klutch, Alberta Williams, John E. Gormley, M. E. Simmons and H. L. Cotman, argued against its adoption.

Guest of Wills Register.

Prof. Fred P. Myers, faculty adviser in debating, conducted last night's contest and completed plans for next Saturday's concluding interclass meet. At that time the fourth contender for the title "Best Debater of the Year" will be selected through actual competition.

The class in practice and procedure in the National University school of law was guest of Theodore Cogswell, register of wills, in the Circuit Court yesterday morning. Mr. Cogswell lectured the class on the practice and procedure of the Probate Court. The lecture included a discussion of several wills of Presidents of the United States, some of which were exhibited to the student lawyers.

"Segnu Forum" was the name chosen by the new organization of students of National's school for economics and government. The name is compounded of the initials of the school and stands for the first organized effort of the college department of the university to establish an institution for scholastic advancement. At the meeting during the week at which the constitution was ratified Dr. James F. Couch, professor of science, addressed the forum on the "Opportunities Before the Segnu."

Professor of Auditing.

Herbert L. Davis, new District superintendent of insurance, is professor of auditing and legal accounting at National University. He was made District superintendent of insurance to succeed Thomas M. Baldwin, jr., who resigned.

Dr. Hayden Johnson, chancellor of National; Richard Ford and W. W. Millan presided as judges of the university's moot court of appeals Wednesday night, when one-third of the cases on the court's calendar were disposed of. Other sessions of the court will be held Wednesday night, April 29 and May 6. The public is invited to these court sessions, where the law students apply the lecture room theory to court procedure.

Plans were completed last night for the founders' day banquet of Mu Chapter of Sigma Delta Kappa Fraternity, on May 2 at the Racquet Club. Dr. Johnson, the chancellor of National, will be the guest of honor, while Judge Charles S. Hatfield, of the United States Court of Customs Appeals and professor of Federal procedure and the law of agency at National, will be the speaker. An initiation of new members of National's Mu Chapter was held at the chapter's headquarters in the Carlton Hotel Thursday night.

Howard Men Pass Tests as Dentists

Establishing a new record for State board examinations, the Howard University 1930 class of the college of dentistry has attained 100 per cent before examination boards of five States, according to a statement made by Dean Arnold Donawha yesterday. Examinations were taken by seven members of the class, in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Texas, Georgia and the District of Columbia, and were passed without difficulty.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"TAURUS"

IF APRIL 26th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to noon, from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger hours are from 8 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. and from 5:30 p. m. to 7:30 p. m.

April 26th promises to be a Sunday full of pleasant surprises, chiefly in the form of renewed association with old-time friends. The signs also denote that a long outstanding difference will be healed, and amity, instead of enmity, will reign supreme. The evening will be propitious for lovers.

Children born on this April 26 will not amount to much, if left to themselves. They must unite with those of a strong and assertive nature. They will serve better than control. Sweet-tempered, humble, kindly and acquiescent, they will need companionship of a robust and an energetic type.

Born on April 26, you are original and inventive. You delight in doing things in a way different to standardized methods. This streak marks, not only your actions, but your sayings. Your ideas often shock those of the conventional school. You have a distinct ability in discovering inaccuracies, and you can generally put your finger unerringly on the weak spot of any failing organization. Not only can you do this, but you are strong as a constructionist, and can prescribe the remedy for the ills that you have diagnosed.

If a woman, you have a shrewd common sense, and can make a little go a long way. You are, without shocking conventions, quite original in your clothes. Fond of bright colors, you are neat and tidy in the home, and an artistic atmosphere pervades everything.

Both men and women, born on April 26th, have strong intellects, and quick tempers. They pay too much attention to faults of commission, but too little to those of omission. Whilst loving and affectionate, they permit themselves to be too much influenced by passing trifles and make mountains out of mole-hills. They are exceedingly jealous, but not vindictive. They will be loving parents, erring on the side of leniency all the time.

Successful People Born April 26th:
1—Alice Cary—Author.
2—Martha Finley—Author.
3—John Clark Ridpath—Historian.
4—Harvey Fisk—Financier.
5—Henry Morganthau — Ambassador to Turkey.
6—James P. Kimball—Geologist.

Summer Planned By Law College

Fall Schedule of Examinations for Present Semester Is Posted.

Dean Grace Hays Riley, of Washington College of Law, announces plans for the 1931 summer sessions which will commence June 22 and conclude on August 1. The subjects scheduled are "Damages," "Evidence II," "Common Law Pleading I and III," "Evidence I and II," "Sales," "Criminal Procedure," "Contract Cases," "Bailments," "Personal Property" and "Elementary Law." Instruction will be under the direction of the regular teaching staff.

The full schedule of final examinations for the present semester has been posted. These will begin on May 25 and end on June 5.

The regular debating schedule, under the direction of Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Cooperative Builders Association, and Mrs. Rebekah S. Greathouse, assistant United States district attorney, will continue through to the end of May. The students selected to participate in the final prize debate to be held on May 23 are Alfred E. Page, Mary V. Marraffa, Walter F. Coleman, Joseph M. Munroe, Bernice Woodward and Henry B. Robertson.

Uses 7-Year Rotation Plan.

Dalton, Ga., April 25 (A.P.).—W. W. Seaton, winner in a profitable farming contest of Georgia, uses a seven-year rotation scheme to build up his land. The plan is as follows: First year, wheat or oats, seeded with grass and clover; second year, same; third, hay; fourth and fifth, pasture; sixth and seventh, corn.

Pageants, Races In Raisin Week

California to Celebrate at Fresno During Week of May 3 to 9.

Pageants, automobile races and other events will feature California Raisin Week to be celebrated in Fresno, Calif., from May 3 to 9.

May 7 has been designated Raisin day. During the last three days of the week, the twenty-third annual raisin festival will be held in Fresno. On May 7 there will be a pageant parade of floats, an event that is known as "Fiesta de la Raisina." There will also be a program of dirt track automobile races.

On the evening of May 9, the fifth annual West Coast relays, one of the most important track and field events on the Pacific Coast, will be staged in the stadium of Fresno State College. During raisin week, railroad and steamship lines, hotels and restaurants and grocers and others interested in the sale and distribution of fruits and foodstuffs will cooperate with California raisin growers in featuring the sales of raisins and serving raisin dishes.

New Air Services Planned.

Manchester, England, April 25 (A. P.).—A new British air service, connecting Manchester with the Isle of Man, more than 100 miles away, is to be inaugurated this spring. Another service will connect Manchester with North Wales, and a connection to Ireland is to follow.

STOCKS DROP LOWER WITH HEAVY LOSSES

90 Composite Issues Hold Only 4 Points Above December's Bottom.

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—Heavy selling of a few issues weakened what little resistance the stock market had been able to muster during the early transactions today, and prices dropped heavily at the close.

In addition to making a new low for the year, the Standard Statistics-Associated Press composite of 90 stocks finished only 4 points above the bear market bottom, established last December. The day's average decline was 2.7 points. Rails made a new 1931 low for the fourth time this week, industrials for the second time.

Pronounced weakness in Westinghouse, Goodyear Rubber and Johns-Manville, followed by a late assault on General Electric, unsettled sentiment. Opening changes were narrow and small gains in a number of key shares suggested the presence of support, but the hammering received by special stocks quickly discouraged any covering that might have followed. For the first hour and a half the decline was slow and although in some measure it reflected the Friday suspension of a large commission house, the market as a whole seemed to have taken that news without undue alarm. The late selling represented a bear drive fortified by increased liquidation. Sales totaled 1,400,000 shares.

Pivotal Stocks Drop.

Pivotal stocks were generally off 1 to 2 points net. General Electric's 2-point loss carried that industrial to a new low for the present shares, created by the 4-for-1 split-up early in 1930. U. S. Steel, however, held above its 1931 low and lost only a point. A similar decline occurred in American Telephone, Standard Oil of New Jersey, General Motors, Sears-Roebuck, Texas Corporation and Bethlehem.

There was less resistance in numerous utilities, including Consolidated Gas, American Water Works, Electric Power & Light, North American and Public Service of New Jersey, which dropped 2 to 2¾.

Rails were soft. Atchison and Union Pacific canceled their late Friday gains. Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Pacific, New York Central, New Haven, Canadian Pacific and Erie yielded 1 to 2. Southern Railway sagged more than 3. General Theaters Equipment and Fox Film, two amusements identified with Pynchon & Co., lost 1⅜ each.

Gold Ship Rates Restored.

Coincident with the announcement that the week's shipments of gold from Paris had been increased $2,500,000 to $28,500,000 came word that two steamship companies had restored the old shipping rates on the metal. It was the recent lowering of this transportation charge that stimulated the flow, so reversion to the former rates pointed to at least a temporary stoppage of the shipments, possibly without recourse to a change in the Federal reserve rediscount figure.

The previously expressed view that present steel ingot output was apt to remain fairly steady for several weeks received confirmation, for the time being, in the estimate of operations in the Youngstown district next week. Unofficial advices said the rate would be unchanged at 43 per cent of capacity. Another encouraging piece of week-end news was the sales report of Sears-Roebuck for its fourth calendar period, showing a reduction of only 5.80 per cent from a year ago, the best comparison of the year.

Firmness of bonds was in contrast to the easiness of commodities. Wheat closed as much as 1¾ lower on reports of bad weather in the Southwest, bearish Kansas advices and large receipts. Corn's decline was about a cent, reflecting a bearish Argentine estimate and a lower market at Buenos Aires. Cotton lost 6 to 9 points.

Narrow movements ruled in foreign exchanges. Sterling cables eased in common with the French franc and the Dutch guilder.

Cotton Manufacturers Elect New Officers

Augusta, Ga., April 25 (A.P.).—Cason J. Callaway, of La Grange, Ga., was elected president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association at its closing convention session here today. He succeeds B. T. Geer, of Greenville, S. C.

B. B. Gossett, of Charlotte, N. C., formerly second vice president, was elevated to the first vice presidency, which Callaway had held. Donald Comer, of Birmingham, Ala., was elected second vice president. The association reelected W. M. McLaurine of Charlotte, N. C., secretary and treasurer.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—A slight opening advance in cotton today was attributed to week-end covering and some buying on reports of continued cool rains or showers in the South. The demand seemed to be quite readily supplied, however, and after selling up to 10.44, July broke to 10.32 under a renewal of liquidation and scattered selling which seemed to be promoted by reports of weakness in the stock market. Closing quotations were within a point or two of the lowest on most positions with July quoted at 10.35. The general market closed steady at net declines of 6 to 9 points.

The market opened steady, 1 to 3 points higher on covering, which seemed to be coupled with some local and commission house buying, which may have been due to the outlook for continued low temperatures in the Southwest and the reports of further, although comparatively light rains. The initial demand was quite readily supplied around 10.18 for May and 10.83 for October, with the market later easing under a renewal of liquidation, while there was some reselling by early buyers. May sold off to 10.07 and October to 10.69 in the late trading, or 7 to 10 points net lower and closing quotations were within a point or two of the lowest on most positions.

Business was generally quiet and one of the chief trading features was the further liquidation of May contracts in anticipation of notices next Tuesday. This was largely in the way of switching from near to late months, which was accomplished without much change in the differences. There seemed to be no very decided opinion as to the number of notices that might be issued in the market here, but the view was quite generally expressed that they would be stopped by trade interests at about the prevailing late month premiums.

Liverpool cables reported local and foreign liquidation absorbed by trade calling and covering at the decline in that market. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 69,000 bales, against 78,000 last year and 98,000 two years ago.

Curb Review

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—The curb market sold off substantially in spots today, in a moderately active turnover for the two-hour session, transfers approximating 328,400 shares.

A few issues with the distribution of which Pynchon & Co. had been associated, declined, while others rallied. It is understood that none of these companies are effected by the suspension of the underwriting house.

American States Public Service A, which had dropped sharply yesterday, recovered 6 points, with a closing price of 9. Associated Gas sagged fractionally, while the class A stock rallied a little. Consolidated Aircraft, however, tumbled 4½ points to a price of 2½. Utilities Power & Light closed ¾ of a point lower at 8, and General Theaters convertible preferred finished ½ lower, also at 8.

Elsewhere in the list, some of the oils were again under pressure. Vacuum breaking 3 points to another new low. Cities Service and Indiana declined fractionally, Indiana recording a new minimum. In the utilities, United Light A declined a point to a new bottom, and Electric Bond & Share lost as much, coming within a fraction of its low.

In the industrials, American Hardware and Perfect Circle broke 4 points each in a few transactions. Mead Johnson lost 3, and Heyden Chemical 2.

In the investment trust group, the Continental Shares preferred issues again broke to new lows.

WRITER SEES CHEER IN YEAR'S NEW TITLE

1931 Is Designated as Date After Trade Troubles of 1930 Period.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

"Some cheer is to be derived from the title recently applied by an eminent economist to the year 1931," writes Norman E. Towson, assistant treasurer, Washington Loan & Trust Co., in the April business bulletin issued by that institution. "He called it a post-depression year, continues Mr. Towson, and implied in the appellative is the suggestion that the depression is past. But a post-depression year is, at best, a year of convalescence, a period of alarms, of chills and fevers and possible relapses.

"A definite improvement of business sentiment is, however, apparent. This is noticeable in the comments of business authorities, in newspaper headlines and in what now seems to be the majority opinion that the patient is going to live, after all.

"The swing of sentiment is an important factor, the psychological element looming large in periods of commercial depression, and an improvement of sentiment doing much to abbreviate the span of subnoral conditions. The turn from extreme pessimism to optimism should, nevertheless, be accepted with caution."

Reilly to Address Meeting.

A meeting of the fiduciaries section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, at the Willard Hotel, May 5, at 7 p. m., will be addressed by Edward J. Reilly, trust counsel in charge of operation of the estate and trust service of Moody's Investors Service, legal editor of Trust Companies Magazine and former trust officer of Fulton Trust Co., of New York. His subject will be "Supervision of Trust Investments."

A New Yorker by birth, Mr. Reilly received his education at Fordham and New York Universities, lectured in finance at the College of the City of New York and in law at the Washington College of Law. He was for two years assistant counsel of the War Fiance Corporation, of Washington, D. C., and before coming to the Fulton Trust Co., was for five years trust officer of National Bank of New Jersey, New Brunswick, N. J.

It seems evident that the wage scale is weakening, and that this movement will be somewhat intensified between now and next fall, states a current bulletin on viewing the situation from Washington, issued by Standard Statistics Co. of New York.

Statement on Wages.

It continues, in part: "The preponderant influence of Washington is against wage cuts. The motive is partly economic, probably mainly economic, but there is a side motive of politics. It is a well-established fact that men vote their economic dissatisfaction at the political polls, and the polls of 1932 are steadily approaching into the scope of the political vision.

"No one in Washington pretends to say precisely how far wage cuts can go without disturbing business, meaning purchasing power. Every one admits that there are certain industries where downward adjustments might well be accepted by labor in order to reduce production costs and increase consumption. It is extremely difficult, however, to figure how much consumption might be increased if the wage costs in the product were moderately lowered. Hence, the insistence on maintaining wages and not "experimenting" with wage cuts. These are fancy theories. They have worked well in practice in the past, but it remains to be seen how they will operate in the latter part of the depression, as the pressure for wage cuts increases.

"Prominent industrialists are reported to be preparing a series of promises to employes, guaranteeing a fixed amount of employment for the future. This is considered a very important development, for under these circumstances labor will be more easily persuaded to accept wage reductions. Public works this summer and fall will take up much slack in employment. The Federal Government, through Col. Woods' committee on employment, is working strenuously to get relief facilities organized in various communities throughout the country."

BOND TRADING QUIET AS PRICES CHANGE

Rails Are Irregular, With Further Declines; Foreign Issues Lower.

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—Narrow fluctuations among the better-grade issues, sharp changes in a number of more or less speculative obligations and quiet trading generally were the principal features of the bond market today. The average price of 30 leading issues was unchanged, indicating steadiness among the more representative bonds.

Railroad obligations were irregular. Reports of March earnings showed further decreases, compared with that month last year. Seaboard Air Line stamped 4s of 1950, Western Pacific first 5s, New York, Susquehanna & Western refunding 5s, Missouri Pacific Series F and G 5s, International Great Northern adjustment 6s and Series C 5s and Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville 5s were among the rails to close 1 point or more lower. However, some striking gains were made by bonds of recognized good credit rating. The Cairo division 4s of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis; Kansas City Southern refunding 5s, Great Northern 5½s of 1952, Northern Pacific 4½s and the prior lien 4s, St. Louis Southwestern first 4s and Southern general 6s and consolidated 5s all appreciated.

General Theater Equipment 6s and Warner Brothers Pictures 6s made good gains. The reduced volume in both issues was another indication that the recent selling pressure in them had been reduced. Paramount Famous Lasky 6s closed at a new low at 90. Goodyear Tire 5s dropped sharply. Fluctuations of other industrial issues were principally fractional; price changes in public utilities were narrow.

Chilean obligations, following a break in home securities markets, and Argentine bonds were generally lower but the fluctuations in other foreign issues were mixed. Both issues of Uruguayan 6s and the 8s closed lower although the minister of that Nation announced that full payments on the dollar bonds will be made punctually in regard to principal, interest and sinking fund. Belgian, German and French issues were steady to higher.

PARIS SEES OLD TIE IN CUSTOMS TREATY

Political Line-Up of 1828 That Led to German Union Recalled.

Paris, April 25 (A.P.).—The French see in the proposed Austro-German customs agreement, which England has asked the League of Nations to examine in May, a facsimile of the tariff pact, signed in 1828 between Prussia and Hesse-Darmstadt.

Eventually that old pact led to the union of all German states, for it was upon it, as a foundation, that Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor, built the empire of the Hohenzollerns.

Fear Union Is Planned.

So strikingly similar are the terms and wording of the old and new pacts that the French fear that a union of the two German republics lurks in the background.

Such a union, they say, can not be permitted in the present-day Europe.

One commentator compared the treaties, article by article. He found that, while the styles differed, they were alike in all essential traits.

He said that in the 1828 treaty economic unification was the first motive, but political union was the second. He asked if that was not the case today.

Political Treaty Noted.

Recalling, too, a secret political treaty which was signed between Prussia and Hesse-Darmstadt on the same day as the economic agreement makes Frenchmen further suspicious of the 1931 accord.

They fear that, despite denials from Berlin and Vienna, the proposed customs union would inevitably lead to creation of a strong German state in central Europe.

This, from the French viewpoint, would set Europe back a hundred years.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, April 25 (A.P).—Keeled over in a sudden storm of stop-loss selling today, all grains except wheat plunged to fresh bottom price records. Corn and oats suffered especially from rushes to abandon ownership, whereas wheat was partly sustained by indications of dearth of moisture in spring crop territory, both American and Canadian.

Suspension of Pynchon & Co. and prolonged unsettlement of securities were bearish factors, intensified by late reports that Pynchon & Co., although not having much interest in grains through the Board of Trade clearing house, had considerable business with other firms.

The close was nervous in all grains, at about the day's lowest figures, with corn and oats ranging from 1 cent to 2⅛ cents lower; rye, 1¾@1⅞ off, and wheat unchanged to a setback of 1¾. Provisions finished unchanged to 7 cents higher.

At first, the Pynchon failure apparently exerted only slight influence, notwithstanding that the formal announcement read from the gallery just before trading began was listened to with unusual attention by throngs on the exchange floor. Talk was current that the firm was short of much wheat in Chicago and long at Liverpool, but surmises that big selling orders would be executed here to even up accounts received no verification. On the contrary, the fact that the Liverpool wheat market showed comparative strength had a temporary steadying pull.

New shattering of low price records in corn and oats, however, unnerved holders of those commodities. Early breaks in the feed grain markets were but little below yesterday's quotations, but a deluge of selling in corn, oats and rye set in and met with only a thin demand. Minimum prices reached by oats were the lowest since 1901. Corn values were also at a bottom not duplicated for years, and rye was under the present season's record.

Contrasting with drought Northwest, moisture was general elsewhere, and crop prospects for domestic winter wheat were acclaimed as almost perfect. Exporters, however, apparently were not buying more than just sufficient for hand-to-mouth needs. Wheat at the finish was the lowest with one exception since 1896.

Provisions were firm, upheld by steadiness of the hog market.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May, 81¾, offers; July, 58⅜@58½, 61@61⅛; September, 58⅜@58½, 61@61⅛; December, 61¾@61⅞, 64½@64⅝. Corn—May, 53⅞, 56⅝@56¾; July 56⅝@56¾, 59; September 56⅝, 59⅛@59¼; December 50⅝@50½, 52½.

NEWS AND NOTES OF ACTIVITIES OF VETERANS' ORGANIZATIONS

SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

MEETINGS THIS WEEK.

Monday—Pettit Auxiliary, Naval Lodge Hall.

Tuesday—Pettit Camp at 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Lawton Auxiliary at Pythian Temple.

Auxiliary staff visitation to Lawton Auxiliary.

CAMP VISITATIONS.

Tuesday—Dewey Camp to Pettit.

Richard J. Harden Camp met April 16 with Commander V. E. Watkins presiding. The death of Past Commander Francis C. Huhn was announced to the camp. His life and services to the organization were eulogized by Junior Vice Commander William O. Ohm, and Comrades Hudlow and Orken. A vote of thanks and a letter of appreciation was tendered to Comrade Alfred Heitmuller for furnishing the chairman of the sick committee with potted plants for delivery to the sick.

Department Historian John A. Gallagher complimented the camp upon the history of the camp, which he had received and stated it will be placed in the archives of the department along with the histories of other camps of the department.

The adjutant reported that the new rosters of the camp will be ready for distribution among the members about May 1. Past Department Commander Charles W. McCaffrey, chairman of the Memorial Day committee, told of plans for the Memorial Day services. He urged a large attendance at the department services at St. Elizabeths in Hitchcock Hall on Sunday, May 24. He said as these services were the department observance of Memorial Day a large attendance of the members of all the camps is desired.

He stated that a speaker of national reputation has been secured and a vocal and musical entertainment of a very high order will be rendered. Past Commander Philip Hemminger of Naval Camp No. 1 of Philadelphia also addressed the camp.

The regular meeting of Pettit Camp was held April 14. Owing to the illness of Commander Robb, Senior Vice Commander M. C. Moxley presided.

Past Commander Charles A. Strobel spoke on Memorial Day and urged a large turnout of the members of Pettit Camp in the uniform of the organization. He also spoke on the propriety of the members to turn out Sunday, June 7 at the exercises of the Confederate veterans, at Arlington.

The financial report showed a gain of over $1,000 during the past year.

Astor Camp met Monday with Commander T. F. Donovan presiding. Joseph Flannagan, Battery A Seventh U. S. Artillery, was mustered into the camp. There was a large attendance of members present to welcome Pettit Camp on their visitation. Remarks were made by several members of Pettit.

Senior Vice Commander Moxley, in the absence of Commander Robb, extended the greetings of Pettit Camp to Astor. Department Inspector Charles A. Strobel spoke on the observance of Memorial Day. He stressed the necessity of a large turnout of members of all the camps. He told the members that as new legislation was coming up at the next session of Congress concerning increases in pensions, that if veterans wished to make an impression upon the interests that were opposed to that increase they should show by their numbers on Memorial Day that they were solidly behind our leaders.

Remarks were also made by Junior Vice Commander W. I. Watts, Department Chaplain Samuel G. Mawson, C. Dechazo, C. S. Hunter. Responses for Astor Camp were made by Department Commander Motley, who also urged a large number of veterans in line on Memorial Day. Past Commander Oscar Feldsor and Past Commander Hemmiter also spoke.

Bertha R. Cook, department president of the U. S. W. V. Auxiliary of the District of Columbia, announced last week that owing to the great demands made on the Navy Department for Memorial Day, the department auxiliary of the U. S. W. V. have secured the Navy launch Apache to take the members of the auxiliaries down the Potomac River Sunday, May 31.

The strewing of flowers on the waters of the Potomac in commemoration of the men who lost their lives at sea in defense of their country is an annual custom with the ladies of the Spanish War Auxiliary. The boat will leave the Navy Yard dock at 10:30 a. m., Sunday, May 31, and will proceed to Mount Vernon and then return to the Navy Yard.

The department president stated that tentative plans have been arranged and she is now in communication with a prominent citizen to secure his services as orator of the day. He will give the principal address. The singing of patriotic songs and the ritual of the auxiliary will be carried out by members of the department staff assisted by members of the different auxiliaries, after which the flowers will be strewed on the water. She stated that people who have witnessed this ceremony said that it was inspirational as well as patriotic. Complete arrangements of the program will be announced later.

She also wishes it understood that the allotment of red carnations that the auxiliaries were to make for decorating the graves of the soldier dead of the cemeteries have been completed and turned over to the chairman of the U. S. W. V. Memorial committee.

Helen M. Kennicutt, captain of Gen. Nelson A. Miles Auxiliary Drum and Bugle Corps, announced last week that the corps would participate in the Memorial Day parade of the veteran organizations. She also stated that a meeting of the ways and means committee of the corps will be held Wednesday evening to make arrangements for the card party that the corps will give Friday at Pythian Temple.

Gen. M. Emmet Urell Camp met April 15 with Commander James B. Freeland presiding. William T. Evans, United States Navy, was mustered into the camp. Report of the sick committee was made by S. J. McWilliams. The officers and members of Miles Camp were welcomed on their camp visitation. Past Department Commanders C. W. McCaffrey, Jere A. Costello, Lorin C. Nelson, of Miles Camp, and Arthur H. League and Harry Patterson, of Urell Camp, addressed the members on matters pertaining to Memorial Day parade and other topics of timely interest to Spanish War Veterans. Past Commanders G. V. McAlear, D. F. Cooney, J. B. Carver, Commander Gerald F. McGillicuddy, sr., Vice Commander Cleveland Kennicutt and Junior Vice Commander Milton D. Mettee also spoke.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

MEETINGS THIS WEEK.

Monday—Federal Post, Thomas Circle Club.

Monday—Front Line Post, Logan Hall.

Tuesday—National Capital Post, Pythian Temple.

Monday—Auxiliary, Federal Post, Thomas Circle Club.

Monday—Auxiliary, Front Line Post, Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club.

Tuesday—Auxiliary, National Capital Post, Pythian Temple.

The Overseas Military Band, Drum and Bugle Corps, which has twice had the distinction of winning, in open competition, first honors at the Shenandoah Valley Apple Blossom Festival, at Winchester, will again strive this year for the third consecutive award of top honors. In order to make the achievement of such a goal possible, however, 100 members of the corps must be transported from Washington to Winchester on the second day of the festival. Bus accommodations for 60 of the men are already arranged for, but the other 40 bandsmen must be conveyed by private cars, and the cooperative assistance of the Veterans of Foreign Wars members who are going to witness the festival pageant is earnestly solicited.

The buses will leave the District Building, Fourteenth street side, at 8 o'clock sharp Wednesday, May 6.

There will be a final drill of the corps this morning at 10:30 o'clock at Sixth and B streets southwest.

Comrade M. J. Martufi, chairman of the hospital visitation committee, has administered the duties of his office in a zealous manner, and has appealed to the comrades of all the local posts and to the people for the contribution of a large stock of old magazines for distribution among the hospitalized veterans. Notifications of the availability of magazines and books should be addressed to room 324, Colorado Building.

Equality-Walter Reed Post.

The members of Equality-Walter Reed Post, the post's auxiliary, and a number of guests were entertained at the post's last meeting by a group of local artists under the direction of Miss Edith Reed. During the evening the Hon. Charles P. Sisson, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, gave an interesting talk on Alaska. He told of the many industries and customs of the country, and interspersed his remarks with numerous amusing anecdotes. Miss Reed presented Miss Dorothy Skinner in songs and several of her radio kiddies, including "Rudy Valee" and Sophi Tucker. At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments were served by the Ladies' Auxiliary, a practice which will be followed by the ladies of the auxiliary at the close of the last meetings of each month.

Equality-Walter Reed Post purchased a block of tickets for the card party recently given by the several units of the Ladies' Auxiliary for the benefit of the widows and orphans domiciled at the National V. F. W. Home, at Eaton Rapids, Mich.

Howard W. Woerner, Herbert O. Allen, E. S. Bettelheim, jr., Leon E. A. Chagnon, Jay D. Coulter, L. Edw. Donaldson, L. B. Dunn, N. H. Glueck, N. D. Golden, N. H. Laden, Manley C. Lawton, James H. Reed and W. L. Smith have been elected delegates of the post to the annual encampment of the D. C. Department, and Comrades Bacon, Hengst, Inselbuck, Knowlton, Krah, Ashby Martin, McDougal, Robbins, Ryan, Sims, Snyder, Trust and Williams have been elected as alternates.

The delegates will go to the encampment unpledged and it is hoped that outstanding men may be prevailed upon to accept nominations for the offices of the department to the exclusion of office-seekers. The post passed a resolution expressing its deep sorrow over the death of the late Nicholas Longworth, whom the post regarded as a true friend of the veterans. The sending of a letter of sympathy to the husband of the late Mrs. W. B. Jaynes, who was murdered by robbers in the Garden T Shop, was also directed. Mrs. Jaynes had performed many acts of kindness for the post.

National Capital Post.

National Capital Post celebrated its twelfth birthday anniversary on April 11. The programed speakers and honored guests were Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of Staff of the Army; Admiral William S. Benson, World War chief of naval operations; Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs; Col. Rice W. Means, past commander in chief, V. F. W.; Samuel G. Mawson, department commander, Department of the Potomac, G. A. R.; Emmet Bateman, commander of Commodore John Barry Garrison, Army and Navy Union; Dr. B. C. MacNeil, department commander of the District of Columbia, American Legion; William L. Mattocks, representing the United Spanish War Veterans; Walker H. Colston, president, D. C. Chapter, Rainbow Division Veterans.

Also Capt. Edwin S. Bettelheim, national legislative officer, V. F. W.; E. C. Babcock, commander of the D. C. Department, Disabled Veterans of Foreign Wars; William L. Thomas, department commander, D. C. Department, V. F. W.; John I. Spreckelmyer, commander of Equality-Walter Reed Post; John G. Strobel, commander of Federal Post; Frederick A. Livingstone, commander of Columbia Post; Edwin W. Warren, commander of Potomac Post; Dr. A. Victor Carcell, commander of Front Line Post; Philip R. Belt, commander of Follow Me Post; C. Jackson, captain of Robert E. Peary Ship Post; Mrs. R. C. Muschlitz, president of Ladies' Auxiliary of National Capital Post, and the following past commanders of National Capital Post; George J. Neuner, Joseph B. Cardella, Daniel J. Leahy, A. E. Pierce, John J. Allen, Oscar W. Hollingsworth, Reuben C. Muschlitz, Harry Clements; Past Department Commander George L. Tait and Past Department Judge Advocate Edgar H. Hale, both of Columbia Post, V. F. W.

Father Hurney's theatrical troupe presented an excellent program of entertainment. At the Tuesday night meeting, April 14, the following recruits were obligated into membership: James R. Atkins, Headquarters Troop, Thirtieth Division; Ray N. Carr, U. S. M. C.; Francis C. Tinkham, U. S. N.; Samuel Herkowitz, Company E, Eighth Infantry; K. F. Jenks, Thirty-seventh Company, U. S. M. C.; William E. Dove, Company D, Fourth Infantry; John L. Farmer, Eighth Company, C. A. C.; William O. Ohm, Company F, First D. C. Infantry, Spanish War, and Rufus S. Tucket, Company H, Fourth Infantry.

Front Line Post.

Front Line Post has been advised by national headquarters that Comrades Louis Cukela and John B. De Spears have been honored by being appointed as aids on the staff of Commander in Chief Paul C. Wolman, the former having been appointed as national aid de camp, medal of honor class. Front Line Post now has the distinction of having four of its members serving as aids de camp to Commander Wolman, the others being Comrades Earl D. Gregory (medal of honor class), and William B. Winslade.

The post will meet tomorrow night at Logan Hall and another large class of recruits will be inducted to membership. The entertainment committee has planned a distinctive social program. A capacity crowd is expected at the jamboree and minstrel show, to be held at the Press Club Auditorium on Thursday night, which is being sponsored jointly by Front Line Post and the Second Division Post of the American Legion. Comrade H. F. Volkman, chairman of the Veterans of Foreign Wars committee, reports that every detail has been completed for the affair, and that a wonderful entertainment is in store for all who attend.

The 52 delegates and alternates who will represent Front Line Post at the coming department encampment, attended a meeting on Friday evening at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, which was called by Commander Cercell for the purpose of outlining a definite program to be pursued by the post at that conclave. Perfect harmony prevailed at the session, and the entire delegation from this post promises to act as a unit in all matters that may be brought up at the encampment.

A special budget committee, recently appointed by Commander Cercell, will in the next few days meet and make an effort to draw up a budget for the balance of the present administration. The committee is constituted of Adjutant Joseph B. Gardella, chairman; Quartermaster William J. Harrington and Trustee Howard Cross, H. F. Volkman, jr., and Harry J. Hooley. Comrade Charles B. Jennings was recently elected Judge Advocate of the District of Columbia department. He takes the office vacated by Comrade Maurice M. Grudd, who left the city to make his home in southern California.

The National Home Hospital Fund committee will hold a meeting on Saturday evening, May 9, at the home of Mrs. Mary B. Guillermain, chairman, apartment 33, 1465 Columbia road northwest.

The Ladies Auxiliary of Front Line Post will obligate several new members at their meeting tomorrow night. A social party will be given in conjunction with Front Line Post. The monthly visit to the patients of Ward H of Naval Hospital was made on Friday evening.

THE AMERICAN LEGION.

Regular meeting of the department executive committee of the American Legion was held on Thursday evening in the board room of the District Building. This meeting was called by the department commander Dr. B. C. MacNeil, and was attended by post commanders of the department and the several department officers.

An invitation has been extended by department commander of the American Legion, Dr. B. C. MacNeil, to the United States Minister to Canada, Hanford MacNider, past national commander of the legion, to deliver the Memorial Day address at the amphitheater, Arlington National Cemetery. Reply has been received from Mr. MacNider, Ottawa, Canada, advising that the invitation is now receiving consideration.

Alfred Picchione has been appointed by Department Commander Dr. B. C. MacNeil as department membership officer. Mr. Picchione succeeds Mr. Newell in this office.

The department convention committee has released a communication to the presidents of the Southeast, Southwest, Anacostia and Woodridge Business Men's Associations requesting information whether or not these associations desire to have the local department convention meet in their locality. The department convention will be held during the first week in August and William P. Morrell is chairman of the general committee in charge.

Sergeant Jasper Post.

A representative contingent of Sergeant Jasper Post attended the birthday party of the Sergeant Jasper Unit, the American Legion Auxiliary, on Tuesday evening. Among the post members attending were:

Commander William A. Kehoe, Past Commanders Fraser, Frailey, Orlosky, Past Senior Vice Commander Edward L. Marthill, Capt. Daniel H. Pratt, Austin Van Wooten, Charles P. Ruby and Morange F. Hall.

Post Finance Officer Paul H. McMurray, has issued a report showing that 341 members are in good standing, which is the largest membership the post has ever had. The next meeting will be held on May 6 at Thomas Circle Club.

8 and 40.

La Socite des Huit Chapeau et Quarante Femmes met at the Hotel Washington on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Marion Martin and Miss Paro were admitted to membership in the Salon. The special May Day committee, Le Chapeau Carolyn Herman, general chairman, met at the home of Partner Mabel Staub, with Partners Fawcett, Hammond, Knight, Witcomb, Armstrong, Yates, Patterson, Lois McRae and Mary Kolhos in attendance. Vice Chairman Gregory Cipriani, Chef de Gare Joseph Byrne with Voyagers Morrell, Malloy, McGee, Guthrie, Knight, Jack Keller, William Kehoe and James Kehoe representing the 40 and 8 were also present.

Le Chapeau Herman has extended invitations to the coming party to National Commander of the American Legion Ralph O'Neil, National President of the Auxiliary Mrs. Wilma Hoyal, Chef de Chemin de Fer Charles Perry, La Chapeau National "Billie" Murphy, Dept. Comdr. Dr. B. C. MacNeil, Gen. John J. Pershing, President General D. A. R. Mrs. Lowell Hobart and many others prominent in American Legion activities.

The party for the children to be given at the Immaculate Conception Hall on Saturday, under the direction of Chairman Fawcett promises to be a wonderful affair. It is hoped that all voyagers of 40 and 8 as well as partners of 8 and 40 will be at the party.

Coming From New York.

Headed by Department Commander Edward J. Neary, more than 500 American Legionnaires from the State of New York, accompanied by a large number of war mothers, will arrive in Washington by special train on next Sunday, May 3, at 12:30 p. m., on their second annual pilgrimage to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. After luncheon at Union Station, where they will be greeted by Commander B. C. MacNeil and other outstanding legionnaires of the District of Columbia department, they will go by special buses to Washington Cathedral, where at 3 p. m. memorial services will be conducted and a wreath deposited on the tomb of former President Woodrow Wilson.

From the cathedral the group will proceed to the amphitheater at Arlington Cemetery, where at 4 p. m. there will be a memorial ceremony honoring the unknown soldier. A colorful ceremony of massing the flags will be participated in by representatives of the more than 50 posts comprising the pilgrimage group. A special uniformed guard of honor for this ceremony will be provided by members of the Drum and Bugle Corps of Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, of the District of Columbia department.

The New York department sponsored the resolution by which the American Legion national convention at Louisville, Ky., in 1929, directed the institution of annual pilgrimages to the Unknown Soldier's Tomb by all departments comprising the national organization. Over 30 States and the Territory of Hawaii made pilgrimages during the year 1930.

The American Legion's national pilgrimage committee is in charge of all arrangements. Lieut. Col. H. Edmund Bullis is chairman, Clyde B. Stovall, vice chairman and Edgar R. Baker, secretary.

Lincoln Post.

The Lincoln Post, American Legion, met Monday evening. The post has now doubled its membership and is lacking at this time only seventeen members of filling the quota required by the department, and it is planned to incorporate the post.

The motion to assist the newly organized police post of the legion in making the Mardi Gras, which they have planned, a huge success was unanimously approved and in this connection the post favored sponsoring Miss Martha Bean, of 902 Shepherd street northwest, as their selection in the beauty contest to be held during the Mardi Gras. The winner will be sent on a trip around the world with all expenses paid.

The members of the post also voted to accept from the War Department a large 35 m. m. gun captured from the Germans during the late war. This gun was procured through the efforts of Past Commander Robert M. Tolson. A suitable place to permanently erect the gun is now being sought in Columbia Heights.

Maj. E. P. Van Hise, commander of the post, presided and complimented the members on their efforts to increase the membership and urging young men to join the military training camps this summer.

The following candidates were admitted to membership in the Lincoln Post at this meeting: H. D. McMumm, Paul A. Sebastian, E. H. Campbell, William T. Howley, Patrick J. Cavanaugh, James P. Wiley, Ralph H. McGarity, James E. Granger, N. T. Chaconas and Aberts G. Morgan.

Vincent B. Costello Post.

Vincent B. Costello Post met in the board room of the District Building on Tuesday evening, when the following named were elected to membership: Frank J. Smith, John J. Ryan, Leonard M. Crampton, William C. Price, Francis DeSales Kavanaugh, James D. Falzarano, J. Milton Rowe, John D. Lyons, William R. Rollins, Joseph Harrison, John P. Quill, Earnest T. Corry, Henry F. Hinckley, John A. Spudis and John A. Eppley.

Resultant of a ruling of the Police Department against members thereof engaging in outside activities for which they would receive compensation, the post voted to assist in the matter of selling tickets for the Mardi Gras Ball to be given under the auspices of Washington Police Post at the Shoreham Hotel on June 6, and a committee was appointed to formulate plans for the promotion of this program. A committee consisting of Past Commander Richard A. Obrien, chairman; Vice Commanders Gregory Cipriani and Norman R. Grant, Assistant Adjutant Edward R. Kelly and Comrades A. Sterns and Edward McCabe will officiate for Costello Post.

Joseph Walsh, representative of the Allied Enterprises of New York, addressed the post in connection with the Mardi Gras Ball, assuring it that the program would be carried out in its entirety and that all prizes heretofore announced, and for which ample bond has been posted, would be awarded according to the terms of the advertisement. The post pledged, by unanimous vote, its whole-hearted support to the program of the Police Post and assured its commander, William H. McGrath, who was the guest of our post, that every laudable effort would be put forth looking to its success.

Chaplain Francis E. Hurney addressed the post concerning patriotic services to be held in Immaculate Conception Church on Sunday, May 19, and Commander Jacob N. Halper appointed Vice Commander Gregory Cipriani to cooperate therein. There will be a flag presentation, the flag being the post's gift to the church, and the establishment of the votive perpetual light in honor of the war's dead. The services will be broadcast by one of the local radio stations.

Costello Post adopted the suggestion of Comrade Miller, department judge advocate, and voted to incorporate under the laws of the District of Columbia, and Assistant Adjutant Edward R. Kelly, who presided in the absence of the senior officers, appointed Commander Jacob N. Halper and Vice Commanders Gregory Cipriani and Norman R. Grant as a committee to file incorporation papers.

U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post.

At the meeting of the post held on April 12 reports of the welfare, finance, ways and means, membership, auditing, Americanism, athletic, entertainment and Legion convention committees were submitted to and accepted by the post. The chairman of the committee for the revision of the constitution and by-laws has had mailed to each member a copy of the proposed changes, and requests are to be presented at the May meeting of the post.

The names of four new members, Alice Mahoney, M. E. Brown, Sue V. Sullivan and Selby were submitted and accepted to membership. There was one reinstatement.

After the business of the evening had been transacted, the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee, whose program included songs by the post members, a reading by Past Commander Helen McCarty entitled "My Mother," and vocal solos by Past Commander Mabel F. Staub, accompanied by Comrade Marie Luebkert at the piano. At the close of the program an informal reception followed, after which refreshments were served.

The honor guests of the evening included Mrs. N. N. Nock, past president of War Mothers; Mrs. E. C. Wagner, organizer of War Mothers; Mrs. M. C. O'Neil, a War Mother, and many mothers and friends of post members.

The announcement of the appointment of Past Commander Mabel F. Staub, of this post, as department adjutant, to take the place of Howard Brock, has been made by Department Commander B. C. MacNeal.

The anchor of poppies on display was made by post members from materials presented by Mrs. Killeen, to be used for this purpose, and will be carried by the mothers of sons lost on the destroyer Jacob Jones when they make their pilgrimage to the scenes of the World War, sailing from New York on May 28. The ship on which these mothers sail will hold an appropriate ceremony at or as near as possible the spot where the destroyer was sunk and the anchor will then be cast overboard.

Comrade Charlotte Berry and her committee, which includes Comrades Elsie Pinney Helen Opitz, Mary Tatspaugh, Mary Weide, Elizabeth Gladman and Eloise Broaddus, met at Comrade Pinney's home Tuesday evening for the purpose of formulating plans for the post's twelfth anniversary celebration.

The orchestra sponsored by this post, members of which are children from Kendall School, contributed to the entertainment of the newcomers' group of the Columbian Women of the George Washington University, when Dean Elizabeth Peet, of Gallaudet College, was hostess to them on Tuesday.

National Capital Post Auxiliary.

Ladies Auxiliary, National Capital Post, made its monthly visit to St. Elizabeths Hospital Sunday, April 19, and had as its guest Mrs. Alfred Johnson, State regent of the State of Wyoming, attending the D. A. R. Conference. Candy and cigarettes were served to the patients in the seven wards of S P B buildings.

The theater party given by the auxiliary at the National Theater on Monday night was an outstanding success and the current play, "Coquette," was much enjoyed.

The monthly visit to Mount Alto Hospital was made Wednesday evening when several members of the auxiliary, accompanied by friends, played bridge and five hundred with the patients in the Red Cross house. Refreshments were served later.

The regular meeting of the auxiliary will be held Tuesday night at Pythian Temple, when two new members will be obligated.

Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post.

The members of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post assisted at the funeral Tuesday morning of one of its members, Walter J. Fay. On Monday night the post paid its legion tribute to the departed comrade, when, under the leadership of Post Commander James F. Kehoe, a large group of members attended legion ritual services, which were read by the post chaplain, Nathan Williams. A post guard detail stood watch for half-hour periods beside the casket for a considerable portion of the night preceding the funeral.

G. A. R. MAY 30 PLANS.

The Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Day Corporation of the Department of the Potomac, having in charge the Memorial services this year in the various national and local cemeteries, is proceeding with the programs in which the veterans organizations of all wars will actively participate. The program at Arlington National Cemetery on Memorial Day will start at 1 o'clock and will be the most important event of the day. In addition to being chairman of the reception committee, James G. Yaden, president of the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, is in personal charge of the selection of speakers and the arrangement of the musical program at Arlington.

Included in the program this year is a copy of General Orders No. 11, issued by Commander in Chief Maj. Gen. John A. Logan on May 5, 1868, as the result of action of the forty-fifth national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and is required to be read as a part of the public exercises on each Memorial Day.

As provided in the order, says President Yaden, "The 30th of May is designated for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village and hamlet churchyard in the land. In this observance no form of ceremony is prescribed, but posts and comrades will in their own way arrange such fitting services and testimonials of respect as circumstances will permit. We are organized for the purpose among other things of preserving and strengthening those kind and fraternal feelings which have bound together the soldiers, sailors and marines, who united to suppress the late rebellion."

The following committee chairmen for this year have been announced by President Yaden to date, as follows: Grand marshal, Charles W. McCaffrey; reception, James G. Yaden; flowers, William F. Franklin; services at Arlington, James G. Yaden; invitations and tickets, Charles H. Reilley; carnations, Charles W. McCaffrey; ushers, James W. Lyons; transportation, Watson B. Miller; press, Howard S. Fisk; finance, Arthur R. League; lunches, Mrs. Addie W. Hickman; supplies and printing, Charles H. Reilley; poppies, Mrs. Edyth M. O'Connor; auditing, E. Claude Babcock.

In decorating the graves with flags, poppies and flowers, 300 Girl Scouts have volunteered their services for the early morning hours on Memorial Day, and 100 Boy Scouts, while 400 Boy Scouts will start out early on the morning of the day previous to Memorial Day in this work. Automobile trucks will collect the flowers from the 175 public schools, which will be donated by the school children following an annual custom. These details are now being worked out by William F. Franklin, who will have charge of this feature of the program, as chairman of the flower committee.

The other members on the flower committee this year include Maj. Raymond O. Wilmarth, Maj. J. B. Gordon, J. Wise Byrnes, Dr. William Tindall, Theodore C. Howe, Maurice McGrath, Edward Kelley, James Pistorio, George Custard, Mrs. Leon Arnold, Mrs. Emily Bach, Mrs. P. J. Hazes, Thomas Dowling, Edward P. McCabe, P. J. Curtin and Herbert A. McProuty.

Your Name
WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph.D.

THE family name "Cunningham" has come down to us from two main sources. In some cases it is derived from the Old English "cyningham" which may be translated "the home of the king" or "the royal manor." Many families which bear this name have received it because of a former residence in Cunningham, a district in North Ayrshire, Scotland. In Ireland "Cunningham" is generally the modern form of several slightly different Celtic names such as "O Cuinneachain," "O Cuinneagain" and "O Connagain." These names all mean "the descendant of little Conn." The personal name "Conn" is also of Celtic origin, and means "wisdom" and "counsel."

The family name "Gump" is frequently of German origin. Its German source is the old personal name "Gumpo." "Gumpo" is a diminutive form of both "Gundobald" and "Gundobert." "Gundobald" (which has also given the modern name "Gimbel") means "strong battle." "Gundobert" (which has also given the modern name "Gompers") may be translated "famous battle" and "bright battle." "Gump" is also found as a modern Cornish name. As such it means "the flat place," and indicates an original place of residence.

The personal name "Andrew" (often shortened to "Andy") is ultimately of Greek origin, and may be translated "the man" or "manly."

The family name "Halloran" (also written "Halleron," "Holloran," "O'Halloran," etc.) is of Celtic origin. Its source is the Irish "O Hallmhurain" which means "the descendant of Allmhuran." The personal name "Allmhuran" means "the stranger from beyond the sea."

REPUBLICAN OPINION.

Questions propounded by The Post to Republicans who were delegates to the national convention of 1928 have brought out interesting answers as reflecting upon the probabilities of 1932. Virtually all of the replies indicate the opinion that President Hoover will be renominated for President, and the majority seem to expect that the campaign will be fought out on economic issues rather than prohibition. Vice President Curtis is looked upon as the probable choice for second place.

Individuals in widely scattered communities unite in the opinion that the Republican party will be hard pressed in the next campaign, but some of the former delegates qualify this opinion by stating that much depends upon the man and issues put forth by the Democrats. Incidentally, most of these Republicans regard Gov. Franklin Roosevelt of New York as the most formidable champion the Democrats could present.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Senator Morrow, Secretary of War Hurley, Representative Tilson, Ambassador Dawes, Col. Hanford MacNider, Senator Borah, Senator Fess, Postmaster General Brown, Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania, and several others were mentioned as suitable running mates for President Hoover in case Vice President Curtis should not wish to make the race.

Many former delegates look upon the prohibition question as an inevitable issue, which may become paramount if business conditions improve. Others have their eye upon the power question, the tariff, and farm relief as factors in the next campaign. Southern delegates lay stress upon the prohibition question, while those in industrial States emphasize the economic situation as the leading issue.

This symposium of Republican opinion, expressed by men who with few exceptions will participate in the national convention of 1932, is of great interest in its details, as outlined elsewhere in this issue of The Post.

THE NATION'S FOUNDER.

That great span of steel and concrete which is being erected over the Hudson River at New York is to be named the George Washington Bridge. The Port of New York Authority decided that it would render homage to the founder of the United States in spite of protests from numerous people who wished to have names of their own selection applied to this remarkable engineering achievement.

A controversy over the name of this bridge began last January, when the Port Authority decided to call it the George Washington Memorial Bridge. More than 250 other names were suggested, but none was so appropriate as that originally selected. To meet one objection that the original name was too long the Port Authority decided to drop the word memorial and designate the project as the George Washington Bridge.

It is particularly fitting that this beautiful bridge over the Hudson should be so named as part of the bicentennial observance of Washington's birthday. Commissioners acting for the Port Authority agreed that "it is impossible to add luster to the name of George Washington by any act within the power of the present generation." But the dedication of a truly magnificent piece of work to his memory helps to keep Washington and his ideals ever before the public. Within gunshot of New York's towering skyscrapers Washington and his handful of soldiers fought for American independence. The commission recalls that the terrain in the immediate vicinity of the bridge over the Hudson has been made historic by the Commander in chief of the Revolutionary Army.

The American people owe Washington a debt of gratitude that can never be paid even in the homage of the millions who acknowledge him as the greatest American. But in honoring his name a city, a civic group or a State honors the Nation which he founded. A monument to Washington becomes a symbol of patriotism. It stimulates devotion to the ideals with which the name of Washington is associated, at a time when reorientation of American principle is much to be desired.

NO MONOPOLY.

Some of the spokesmen of big business think they are making progress in the campaign to repeal or modify the antitrust laws. They present plausible arguments to show that "cooperation" is the true principle, and not competition. They picture the horrors of unrestrained cut-throat competition, which they contend is destroying American prosperity. They ask permission to combine in large, philanthropic trusts, which shall "cooperate" in improving the output and reducing prices by amicable agreement among themselves, all for the benefit of the dear public. The Sherman antitrust law and its amendments are out of date, in their opinion. They do not demand the right to operate monopolies in restraint of trade—Oh, no! They suggest that an agency of the Government be set up to pass judgment upon proposed combinations, to determine in advance how nearly they may approach the deadline of monopoly without running afoul of the penalities that open the doors of Atlanta Penitentiary.

The efforts to tear down the antimonopoly laws are wasted breath. The public is not to be fooled by suggestions that big business is now so unselfish and enlightened that it can be permitted to operate without restraint of law. There is too much evidence of monopoly and attempted monopoly to warrant any assumption that business will voluntarily put a curb upon its greed.

When the United States provides tariff protection for its industry and labor it creates a monopoly of the American market for the benefit of Americans. Within this imperium there must be competition in order to improve quality and hold prices down. The antitrust laws are necessary corollaries of the tariff law. With both branches of legislation carefully drawn and effectively enforced there is prosperity and a square deal for all Americans.

The proper tribunals for passing judgment upon alleged infringement of the antitrust laws are the courts of justice. No commission or board can be substituted for the courts in this respect. A commission might decide that a proposed combination is not in restraint of trade, and the combination might then proceed to do business, only to run afoul of the law and be punished by the courts, notwithstanding the prior decision of a commission.

The attempt of certain spokesmen of big business to get out from under the jurisdiction of the courts is foredoomed to failure. Big business, as well as little business, must face competition and be subject to the penalties provided for monopoly and restraint of trade.

BLIND THEORISTS.

The persistence with which bankers, college economists, and certain industrialists advocate abolition of protective tariffs is worthy of a better cause. An examination of the interests behind each of these advocates discloses that they are as selfish in their motives as they claim tariff beneficiaries to be. The bankers thrive on foreign loans, which they discount heavily beside collecting fat commissions. It is to their interest to cancel the foreign war debts, so that the debtor countries can reenteer the American market for fresh loans to be handled by the bankers. "There's millions in it."

The academic theory of free trade, which captures the imagination of most university professors of economics, runs directly contrary to existing facts and conditions which govern the world's commerce. Free trade is a beautiful and altruistic theory, but it is nothing more than a theory. The struggle of nations for trade and for a higher standard of living compels them to safeguard their own markets for their own producers. This is especially necessary for the United States, on account of the higher standard of living that has been attained by protecting the immense home market for American producers.

The industrialists who are clamoring for removal of tariffs are interested in enterprises that are not in need of a protective tariff. They seek foreign markets, and in order to obtain them they are willing to sacrifice other enterprises that are in need of protection against foreign competition. The automobile industry needs no protection, and therefore some of its spokesmen are demanding the removal of tariffs. These spokesmen are blind to the fact that if their advice were followed they would destroy the business of thousands of enterprises that are dependent upon protection. Where would the automobile industry be if American industries generally were put out of business by unlimited foreign competitors who produce goods on starvation wages? The American working man is the backbone of the automobile business. Put him out of work, and the sale of automobiles will be negligible. All the gains in foreign markets resulting from the proposed mutual removal of tariffs would be but a drop in the bucket compared with the tremendous loss of the American market. The automobile builders can not afford to trade off the American market for all the rest of the world. Their true interest lies in the protection of the American market for Americans, so that American citizens may continue to purchase three times as many automobiles as all the remainder of the world.

It is fortunate for the selfish interests that are trying to tear down the protective tariff system that they will not be permitted to have their way. The American people have repeatedly passed judgment upon the tariff, and will do so again when they have the opportunity. They will not subject themselves to unrestricted competition with pauperized foreign labor. They will protect their own industries in order to provide employment for all.

TOO MANY LAWS.

It was hardly necessary for Gov. Roosevelt publicly to announce that he is dissatisfied with the overproduction of laws by the New York legislature. The governor has vetoed about one-third of all the bills passed by the legislature, and he has a few more left on his desk. He thinks that half the bills he has approved are unnecessary, and that better results could have been obtained by simple amendments to the general statutes.

New York's legislature adopted 1,120 new laws out a total of 4,312 bills introduced. When Gov. Roosevelt gets through vetoing, something less than 800 new laws will be added to the statute books. He is confident that a fraction of that number would have been enough to serve all the needs of the State.

It is interesting to note, however, that Gov. Roosevelt is as much dissatisfied because the legislature failed to pass certain bills as he is with the general superabundance. The greater part of his address deals with the failure of the legislature to adopt measures which he thinks ought to be on the statute books. Eleven such bills are mentioned specifically.

Without being conscious of the fact that he is doing so, Gov. Roosevelt explains the underlying cause of the modern plethora of law making. The legislature adopted too many laws of its own and not enough of the governor's. No doubt every member of the legislature feels the same way about it. Each participant in the legislative process believes that his own suggestions are urgently needed for the welfare of the people and that most of his neighbor's bills ought to be thrown out. The same attitude is noticeable among groups which sponsor legislation. Every one thinks that new laws ought to be held down to a minimum, but that minimum ought to include the particular measures in which each is interested.

The result of this condition is that one group finds it necessary to support other groups to get its own pet measure enacted. So the process of law making goes merrily on. Group interests and not the public welfare is the motivating cause; and the mainspring behind group interests is the modern fallacy that all the ills of life can be set right by legislation. The people are in the habit of lambasting their representatives in the State assemblies and in Congress for the constant multiplication of laws. Yet few measures are passed except under pressure from powerful groups. Public opinion is brought to bear on legislators, and of course they are sensitive to it, even though it comes from only one small section of the people they have been elected to represent.

There is little hope for reduction of the output of laws so long as the clamor for paternalistic and socialistic legislation continues. The American public seems to have the "fix-it" fever. Legislation is proposed for every sort of maladjustment, economic, social or otherwise. Before the glutting of statute books can be overcome the people must learn that a country can't be legislated into perfection. Instead of gratifying every whim of their constituents for special laws, legislatures must become strong enough to take care of new situations by bringing existing law up to date.

CHILD HEALTH DAY.

"Community responsibility and cooperation for child health and protection." That is the keynote for the observance of May Day, or National Child Health Day, as it has come to be called throughout the Nation where it is so generally observed. May Day, that formerly was looked forward to only with apprehension as an anniversary on which radical demonstrations were to be feared, has become a day that emphasizes one of the most praiseworthy and necessary movements in this country.

President Hoover has issued a proclamation requesting the governors of all the States to "declare to their people that May Day should be used wherever possible as Child Health Day for the consideration of all public and private measures by which the health of our children may be conserved and advanced." The recent White House conference on this subject brought interested delegates from all parts of the United States to report and exchange views.

Official statistics showing the backwardness of the United States in the care of mothers and infants are surprising. It is humiliating to learn that the maternal death rate here is higher than in 25 of the largest nations of the world, and that "only the wealthy and very poor get adequate medical and nursing care." These questions, and measures of relief for blind and partially seeing children, the children who are illegally employed, those who are not in school, others who need immunization against disease, the mentally deficient, epileptic, feeble-minded, crippled, tubercular children, all receive attention and study through the State and local branches delegated to carry on this laudable work.

Not the least of the association's aims in the more positive field are those directed toward helping the many "gifted children" who should have special education. It is estimated that there are probably 1,500,000 children in the United States having an exceptionally high order of intelligence, deviating from the average to such an extent that their capabilities should be developed through special courses. To assist in providing opportunity for the training of this great potential asset, to help budding genius in art, literature, business and invention is to render a service to all humanity.

MONARCH OF THE FARM.

So much is heard of the economic woes of the farmer that it is quite a relief to learn from such writers as Mark Van Doren that the farmer has other troubles which are not so well known to the public. The real tragedy of the farmer, says Mr. Van Doren, is that he has lost his independence. Not many years ago the farm was almost a self-sufficient establishment, and the farmer was his own master. Now the farmer has been caught in the whirlwind of modern economics and has become only a part of the great production machine which feeds, clothes and provides luxuries for the Nation. Mr. Van Doren has written a novel in verse called "Jonathan Gentry" to show how this change has affected the lives of agricultural people.

Mr. Van Doren's chief lament is that the farmer has ceased to be a monarch of his own kingdom and has become a petty manufacturer. He has been bribed by motor cars, finer clothes, electric lights, machinery, water systems and numerous other modern conveniences. Pity the poor farmer! A few years ago when it was necessary to communicate with the city he hitched up his team and spent a couple of days jogging over a dusty road. Now he uses the telephone or spends an hour or two skimming over concrete roads in a motor car. Mr. Van Doren's argument sounds a good deal like that of the Communists who complain that American workingmen have been bribed with high wages.

What the farmer has really lost is not independence but isolation. Many a farmer whose hands are hard with toil will smile at the poet's notion that unnecessary work and unnatural isolation mean independence. The farmer has brought economic problems upon himself because he has learned how to do his work more easily and is therefore able to produce more. He has not yet learned how to control his output so that it will bring him what it is worth. Middlemen continue to reap much of the profit that he should have. Nevertheless, much of the drudgery, the toil, and the monotony of farm life has disappeared.

Mr. Van Doren is able to arouse a good deal of sentiment about the passing glory of farm life. But farmers are looking toward the application of economics and not sentiment to their problems. In spite of the distress which they are experiencing in many parts of the country, it is safe to assume that a large majority recognize that modernization of the farm is a blessing not yet fully realized.

CONSUMERS' DEBTS.

Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's committee dealing with unemployment, stated last week that consumers owed $10,500,000,000, and that buying on a normal scale could not be expected until this debt was paid. Presumably this figure represents the balance due from purchasers of goods on the installment plan. Col. Woods did not fix the date of this debt—that is, he did not make it clear whether this was the amount of consumer debt at the beginning of the depression or at the present time. Probably a highly encouraging situation would be revealed if it were possible to ascertain how much the installment indebtedness of consumers has been reduced since the crash of 1929.

Gen. Hines, veterans' administrator, is authority for the statement that a large proportion of the money borrowed by veterans has been devoted to the payment of debts. The amount already advanced to veterans, including loans made under the prior loan law, has reached $912,000,000, and there are applications for $140,000,000 more. Thus the estimate that the "soldiers' bonus" would reach $1,000,000,000 has been more than verified. The Treasury is required to furnish more than $100,000,000 in addition to all sums previously allocated to veterans' insurance certificates. The bonus, therefore, increases the Treasury deficit, which will approach $800,000,000 on June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

The fact that a considerable portion of the bonus money is applied to payment of debts goes far to justify the action of Congress in forcing through the bonus bill over the President's veto. To the extent that this money is employed in reducing private debts it is a factor in restoring good times. A large part of the bonus, however, is squandered, and it can not be maintained that the operation as a whole was a prudent use of Federal funds.

The increase of savings deposits does not seem to bear out Col. Woods' estimate of the consumer debt, unless it can be shown that this debt has been cut down since the depression began. It is more than probable that debtors have reduced their obligations, while at the same time increasing their savings deposits.

Assuming that the present debt of consumers is $10,500,000,000, there need be no concern over its apparent great size unless it is abnormal. How much is customarily owed by American consumers? No doubt the figure runs into several billions. The present debt may not be more than $3,000,000,000 more than it has been at any time during the last ten years. This is a comparatively small sum, considering the huge number of individuals whose earnings run into many billions. If they can run their savings deposits up to $26,000,000,000 it is evident that their debts are not a crushing burden.

Col. Woods reports that it is impossible to tell whether the shelves of merchants are bare or loaded up with unsold goods. It is fair to assume that stocks are greatly depleted, because buying has been on a restricted scale for many months. Consumers have worn old clothes, and have put off building improvements, the purchase of new automobiles, &c. The needs of consumers must now be met. They have actually saved money during the depression. They are able to buy new goods. The extinguishment of the present debt is a comparatively easy job for the 40,000,000 individuals who have been at work all this time at good wages.

Gov. Ritchie tells the dry South that national prohibition "must give way to something which will square with American traditions and institutions." That must mean Raskob.

News of Annapolis and Other Maryland Cities

Annapolis Gay With Events in Spring Season

Dinner to Jahncke by Comdr. Riddick Among Events of Week.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 25.—Commander William J. Riddick, of the Navy Medical Corps, and Mrs. Riddick entertained at dinner Thursday evening in honor of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Ernest Lee Jahncke. Other guests included the acting superintendent of the Naval Academy, Capt. Charles Philip Snyder, and Mrs. Snyder, Capt. and Mrs. John B. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hardie, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Grace Roward Morton, of this city.

Mrs. Menocal, wife of Lieut. George L. Menocal, of the Navy, was hostess Friday at a contract bridge tea in the east room of Carvel Hall. There were seven tables. Mrs. Friedell, wife of Capt. Wilhelm L. Friedell, one of the most popular matrons on the naval reservation, poured tea, and Mrs. McDougal, wife of Gen. Douglas C. McDougal, of the Marine Corps, poured coffee. Mrs. McDougal, who has just returned from Nicaragua with her husband, is now living in Washington. Dr. W. E. Kellum, of the Navy, of Washington, passed last week-end at Carvel Hall as the guest of Lieut. and Mrs. Menocal. He, too, has recently returned from Nicaragua.

A large group of guests, most of them Navy people from Washington and this city, assembled at the home of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Charles W. Weitzel, Green Gables, South River, last Saturday evening for a masquerade party, which proved one of the outstanding social successes of a crowded week-end. The party was planned by Mrs. Weitzel, who is a very clever hostess, in celebration of her husband's birthday anniversary.

There were 30 guests, among them Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Harrison Avery, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Harold Biesemeier, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. A. R. McCann and Lieut. Comdr. Stellman, of Washington; Commander and Mrs. Harry G. Cooper, jr., Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Archie E. Glann, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Cassin Young, Lieut. Comdr and Mrs. John C. Lusk, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Ralph Skystead, Lieut. and Mrs. John S. Phillips, Lieut. William K. Phillips, Lieut. Comdr. M. Gilmore, of the Navy, retired, and Mrs. Gilmore, Lieut. and Mrs. Carl Espe and Mrs. Espe's mother, Mrs. Soule, of San Francisco.

The announcement that Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Weitzel are among the Navy folk leaving this city June 1 is causing deep regret to their numerous friends here. During their tour of duty at the Naval Academy, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Weitzel have occupied a spacious and attractive house at Green Gables and have entertained frequently. They are sailing for China June 19 from San Francisco, Calif.

Lieut. and Mrs. Norman R. Hitchcock entertained at a buffet supper last Saturday evening for Lieut. and Mrs. Frederick W. McMahon, of Norfolk, Va., who came here from Washington, where they have been visiting Mrs. McMahon's brother-in-law and sister, Lieut. and Mrs. E. C. Beck. Among those present at the supper party were Lieut. and Mrs. Harold F. Pullen and Mr. and Mrs. Norman, of Washington. Mrs. Hitchcock's mother, Mrs. John C. Roth, and little Amy Hitchcock, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Hitchcock, returned on Monday to Acton Place, after passing three months in Florida.

Commander and Mrs. James A. Logan entertained at dinner Tuesday evening in honor of Capt. and Mrs. William L. Calhoun. Covers were laid for twelve, the others present including Commander and Mrs. Clyde R. Robinson, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. William G. Greenman, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Otte Nimitz and Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Reinicke.

Rear Admiral Frank B. Upham, chief of Bureau of Navigation, Washington, who came here last Sunday to address the Midshipmen's Christian Association, and Mrs. Upham dined en famille with the acting superintendent of the Naval Academy, Capt. Charles Philip Snyder and Mrs. Snyder. Last Saturday afternoon Capt. and Mrs. Snyder entertained at tea Mr. and Mrs. Niles, of Baltimore, and Mr. Allen, of England; Mr. Niles, a graduate of Johns Hopkins University and former Rhodes scholar, is a member of the committee that selects the Rhodes scholars for the Middle States, in which Maryland is included. Mr. Allen is in charge of the administration of the Rhodes scholarship. His home is in Oxford, England, and he is visiting this country in an official capacity.

Annapolis society was well represented at a tea held last Sunday afternoon at the Brice House in connection with the exhibition of decorative screens painted this winter by Mrs. Ida M. Starr, mother of Prof. Nathan Comfort Starr, of the St. John's College faculty; Lieut. W. A. P. Martin and Lieut. Joseph H. Severyns.

Mrs. H. C. Gearing, Mrs. Severyns, wife of Lieut. Severyns, and Mrs. Rossell, wife of Commander Henry E. Rossell, poured tea.

Among those present were Capt. and Mrs. Albert T. Church and Mrs. Church's sister, Mrs. Smead; Mrs. Carlos Cusachs, Rear Admiral Samuel A. Robison, of the Navy, retired, and Mrs. Robison, Mrs. Ida Shannon Heath and her guests, Dr. and Mrs. Ranlet, of Old Lyme, Conn.; Commander Rossell, Mr. Allen B. Cooke, Prof. and Mrs. Vertrees J. Wickoff, Dr. Robert E. Bacon, Mr. John Mason, Prof. Howard McCormick and his sister-in-law, Miss Houston, of Salisbury, Md., and Lieut. and Mrs. Charles C. Hartman.

Capt. and Mrs. Roland W. Schumann are issuing invitations for a dinner party at the Annapolis Roads Club Saturday evening, May 2, when they will entertain for a number of Navy people who are leaving the station this spring.

Commander and Mrs. Walter B. Tardy entertained at a buffet supper last Saturday evening at their home in Hanover street for their daughter, Mrs. Perry, wife of Lieut. Roger Edison Perry, of the Navy, and Mr. and Mrs. Burleigh C. Fooks, of Bloomfield, N. J.

Mrs. Weber, wife of Lieut. Comdr. George K. Weber, of the Navy, entertained at a bridge party Friday evening at her home at Green Gables, South River. Mrs. Weber is leaving this city May 1 to join her husband in San Diego, Calif.

Lieut. and Mrs. Allen D. Brown and Lieut. and Mrs. Charles Lee Andrews, jr., entertained at a treasure hunt last Saturday night for 38 guests. The hunt began and ended at the home of Lieut. and Mrs. Andrews, in Wardour. Mrs. Herbert L. Clark and daughter, Miss Eleanor Clark, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., wee luncheon guests Friday of Lieut. and Mrs. Andrews. They are cousins of the latter.

MME. ALY ISMAIL BEY

and Mr. Aly Ismail Bey, First Secretary and Charge d'Affaires of the Egyptian Legation, will give a dinner tonight in honor of the Vice President and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann.

Takoma Park Town Caucus Is Tomorrow

Councilmen to Be Named at Election to Be Held May 4.

Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock the annual town caucus for the nomination of candidates for council will be held at the fire house and community center. Town Clerk Bryan Davis will call the meeting to order and preside.

Each year three councilmen are elected to serve for a period of two years. The terms of Councilmen John R. Adams, M. F. Iverson and H. Edson Rogers will expire June 1 and it is reported that each will stand for reelection. Others may be nominated to oppose the incumbents. On the following Tuesday and Wednesday registration clerks will sit at the fire house from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. to register new voters.

Monday, May 4, the annual election will be held. Polls will open at 6 a. m. and close at 7 and will be located at the fire house and community center, Denwood and Carroll avenues. Albert E. Bryan, Fred D. B. Austin and Henry W. Scharger are the judges of election, and Mr. J. Oscar Foulk is clerk. Mrs. Foulk and Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle have been appointed registration clerks.

The Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce meeting scheduled for tomorrow night has been postponed one week in order that more information may be had on a proposal to establish local bus service in Takoma Park. Conferences have been held with Capital Traction Co. officials and there is some hope that this company will provide the service proposed.

In the event this company refuses to provide service it is expected a local company will be formed and a charter sought from the town and the Public Utility Commission of Maryland. Outlying sections of Takoma Park are remote from present transportation facilities and it is for these sections that the local chamber of commerce aims to provide a much needed bus service.

Gordon W. Bonnette, president of the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce, will represent the chamber at the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce at Atlantic City next week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Joy Hopkins had as guests the early part of the week Mr. and Mrs. George A. Stuart, of Harrisburg, Pa.

At Trinity Episcopal Church this morning the Rev. J. Manly Cobb will conduct Holy Communion at 8 o'clock and again at 11 o'clock. At 11 o'clock Rev. Cobb will give a sermon. The Rev. A. H. Lucas, headmaster of the Cathedral School for Boys, will talk to members of the junior and senior departments of Trinity Church Sunday School. There will be a meeting of the Young People's Society at 6:45 p. m. and at 8 o'clock tonight Rev. Cobb will conduct the evening prayer service.

The Rev. William E. La Rue, pastor of the Takoma Park Baptist Church, will preach this morning at 11 o'clock, giving a sermonette for children on "Alexander Duff, Pioneer Missionary Educator," and will follow immediately with a sermon for adults on "The Major Motive." At 8 o'clock tonight Miss Luella Adams, of the Christian Rankin Center, Pittsburgh, Pa., will speak.

The Rev. R. Paul Schearrer will preach at both the 11 o'clock service this morning and the 8 o'clock service tonight. On Thursday night he will continue his lectures on the "Book of Amos." The particular subject for the coming talk will be "Prepare to Meet Thy God." Miss Helene Walker will lead the meeting of the senior C. E. Society at 7 p. m. The subject for this meeting will be "The Unmet Needs of the World." "What Do Missionaries Do?" is the subject for the meeting of the intermediate C. E. Society at 7 o'clock, and will be led by Miss Laura Mattoon.

Mr. Roy C. Pierce is on an extended business trip in West Virginia, where he went in the interest of the Federal Government.

The Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Daniels, former residents of Takoma Park, now living at Loma Linda, Calif., arrived here the first of the week. They were accompanied by their daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. Grosvenor Daniels, jr., and her small daughter.

Mrs. Alvin Brown entertained Circle No. 3, of the Fortnightly Book Club of Takoma Park Thursday afternoon. Mrs. J. Bond Smith gave selections from Lord Dunsany's "Fifty Poems," and Miss Ayesha Straughn presented a review of the book "Death Takes a Holiday," by Alberta Caselle.

Chevy Chase Party Is Given By Miss Lozier

Mrs. Harper, Visitor of Pittsburgh, Is Much Entertained.

Horse Show Is Set In Middle of May At Bradley Farms

Preparations are complete for the National Capital Horse Show, one of the annual spring events which society always anticipates with enthusiasm. It will be held May 13, 14, 15, 16, at the Horse Show Association's Grounds in Bradley Hills, Md.

A luncheon for the purpose of reducing the debt on the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Clubhouse will be served each day at the horse show in the clubhouse at Bradley Farms.

Mrs. Fuller, wife of Maj. Gen. Fuller, commandant of Marine Corps, who is president of the league this year, is taking a keen interest in planning a different luncheon for each of the four days of the horse show.

Mrs. Lutz Wahl, who is again chairman of the committee, has made several improvements in the tea rooms where the luncheon will be served as well as on the porch and lovely lawn.

The University Club will open its clubrooms Thursday night to the ladies for the last time this season. Following the many dinner parties which are being arranged for the occasion, the entertainment committee will present its final concert for the spring.

Horse Show At Front Royal Set for May 9

Remount Event Will Be More Elaborate Than Ever Before.

The ninth annual Horse Show of the Remount Depot, Front Royal, Va., will be held on Saturday May 9. The show last year was one of the best ever held and the one this year is expected to even surpass those heretofore.

The Remount Horse Show is rapidly becoming one of the most delightful spring features of this part of Virginia. The location of the Remount on one of the main highways, and the beautiful scenery throughout this section, particularly at this season of the year, adds much to the popularity of this event.

The first class will begin at 10 o'clock. Several classes have been added this year which should make this an outstanding show. The judges will be Lieut. Col. Adna R. Chaffee and Maj. George S. Paton, jr., of Washington.

Mrs. Victor Strausberger, who passed a week with her sister, Mrs. Robert Meyer, at the Broadmoor Apartment, has returned to her home in Norfolk, Va.

Miss Annell Hardie departed Friday for her home in Chicago, after passing two months with Mr. and Mrs. George Muller at Twin Oaks, their country place near Vienna, Va.

Arrival of King and Queen of Siam to Crown Spring Season With Halo of Regal Festivity

Dinner at White House on Wednesday Will Welcome Royal Visitors to Capital; Society Set Turns Attention to Impending Kentucky Derby and National Horse Show; Regret Over Departure of Senor Padilla and Family Mingled With Satisfaction Over His Successor, Senor Salvador de Madariaga, Author and Scholar.

EXIT a prince and princess. Enter a potentate, with the sun of public favor shining still upon the Far East which, this week, will send to Washington the King and Queen of Siam and last week beckoned homeward to Japan (the "fountain of light") the Prince and Princess Takamatsu. These are busy days for the Department of State as well as everybody else, for the grand manner prevails and entertaining will again reach its peak in a state dinner at the White House on Wednesday night, where King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambai will be the guests of the President and Mrs. Hoover at the only state function arranged during their stay in the United States.

From magnificent Ophir Hall, the estate of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid at Purchase, N. Y., the youthful king and queen and their suite will come to the large house of the Larz Andersons on Massachusetts avenue, proffered to the government by its owners although they are now in San Francisco on the last lap of a world tour. Although the Capital abounds with large city homes, there generally is "tall scrambling" on the part of Uncle Sam to settle the housing problem when royal visitors come to town. Were it not for the Larz Andersons, the Eugene Meyers and other "understanding and generous" hosts the Department of State might be at its wits' end sometimes.

* * * *

BOTH Belgian and Japanese missions have been put up at the Anderson house in days gone by. The house now occupied by the Mexican Embassy, formerly the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh and leased by the Breckenridge Longs during the visit of the King and Queen of the Belgians, solved the puzzle of a setting for royalty shortly after the close of the World War, and when the Prince of Wales came to Washington during the administration of President Wilson he found "regal shelter" in the Perry Belmont house on New Hampshire avenue. And more recently Dr. Julio Prestes, then President-elect of Brazil and now exiled from his country, was entertained as guest of the Nation in the house of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, jr.

In addition to the glamour of the sovereign's stay in Washington is the special interest in his suite from the local standpoint of the attachment as the king's press agent of Mr. Ralph Hayes, who formerly lived in the Capital. Mr. Hayes, who is a New York banker, served as private secretary to Mr. Newton D. Baker when he was Secretary of War. Later he was assistant to Will Hays. One former Washingtonian certainly anticipates the coming of the king—Mr. Edward H. Loftus, former Counselor of the Siamese Legation, upon whom King Prajadhipok conferred not long ago the Order of the White Elephant, with the rank of commander, in recognition of long service to the state. The honors, which included an honorarium of a handsome sum with which to purchase a house, were tokens of the king's approval of Mr. Loftus' record of 29 years in the diplomatic service of Siam. Mr. Loftus, with his wife, left Washington some months ago and has been living in Charlottesville, Va. That they will come to Washington this week for the festivities incident to the king's stay is probable.

* * * *

BY way of relaxation from a chapter brimming over with events royal and (whisper it gently), a bit fatiguing, the swift-moving circle that follows the procession begins to look outward toward other States to find of paramount importance the Kentucky Derby, which is almost upon us, and the annual horse show which May will bring, the one to Louisville, the other to Bradley Farms. Then, the horse will be king, and no less a personage than the Vice President will trek to Kentucky, where rules the classic turf event of the continent. Mr. Curtis will attend this year, as has been his custom. He will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Gann.

Middleburg probably will be pretty well deserted on the red letter day, represented as it will be by the Jock Whitneys, Mr. and Mrs. William F. R. Hitt, Gen. and Mrs. Mitchell; and from Washington will go the Sydney Clomans, the Bernard B. Joneses, Mrs. George T. Marye and a dozen or so horse fans for whom springtime centers about the Kentucky race. Even lacking the presence of the bright particular star of last year, Lord Derby, the event touches close to the Capital, what with Mr. Jones always entering several horses from Audley Farms, and Mr. and Mrs. Leiter going in for possible laurels there.

Underwood & Underwood.

Bachrach.

AMONG THE "YOUNGER MARRIEDS" in Washington none is more popular than Mrs. C. Mathews Dick (left), who is spending a few days in New York. Another interesting member of the young married group is MRS. ALICE NIBLEY SMOOT, who has returned from a short stay in Atlantic City.

CLAIMING greater local interest will be the National Capital Horse Show Association's annual meet, which will bring here sportsmen of many States to furnish a list of visitors of imposing names, many of them headliners in the realm of the hunt. The show will do its bit for the spring season, which by that time will be waning a little as state functions travel toward the inevitable close which ends at the Rapidan and in Newport.

For the Rapidan this year will again be the summer White House, as reports have simmered the President's vacation down to the confines of Washington and the Virginia hunting lodge, although some happy turn of events may favor President Hoover and the needed rest and change come in spite of the present gloomy outlook. Campaigns must be waged and the distressing loss of the Speaker of the House, Mr. Longworth, has added its quota of complications to the old-line Republican band wagon.

* * * *

So engrossed has the Capital set been in the state of affairs in Spain, Nicaragua and other distant points that local politics have been somewhat submerged.

With the naming of the new Ambassador from the Spanish republic and regrets over the loss of Senor Padilla as envoy and his departure with his family to take up their home in Spain, tea table gossip has centered about that country and its future.

DISPATCHES name Senor Salvador de Madariaga, noted author and scholar, as Spain's new envoy to Washington, where gossip the last two days elevates the distinguished Spaniard to the highest ranks of Latin intellectuals. Of aristocratic family, Senor de Madariaga married an Englishwoman, Constance Archibald, and has two daughters, now in school in England. The new ambassador is now in Mexico City, where he is delivering a series of lectures. The new Spanish republic apparently has "gone intellectual," as practically without exception the newly appointed envoys to the world's important capitals form an imposing set of names in the Spanish roster of litterateurs.

Notable Guests Fill the Corridors Of Washington

Cabinet Dinner of Secretary and Mrs. Wilbur Held an Interesting Roster; Coolidge Festival Welcomed Music Lovers; D. A. R. Leave.

THE visitors' book last week boasted names of high degree, with guests of distinction arriving in town for the dinner honoring the President and Mrs. Hoover when the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Wilbur were hosts. Names formidable in the world of finance and education were on the list, headed by Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr. So interesting the guest roster and so original the setting, with an Alaskan mountain range, village and "properties" forming the background for the Cabinet dinner, that memories of receptions for royalty last week and resplendant plans for this week almost found themselves submerged in Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur's successful venture.

The visit of the Princess Alexandra Victoria, of Schleswig-Holstein and her husband, Capt. Reumann, will beckon an interesting coterie to the house of Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin today and the arrival of Viscountess Harcourt as the guest of the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay also added impetus to the week's entertaining.

At the White House during the week was Miss Helen Keller, a luncheon guest on Wednesday; Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge came on for the series of chamber music programs at the Library of Congress; the D. A. R. Congress lent its usual flutter of the great and near great, and the delegates of the Pan American health conference brought people of far countries to a "maelstrom" of teas and receptions, until the last seven days nearly equaled the hectic week of grand opera and Japan's royal visitors. Mrs. Robert Coppinger, of New York, who was Miss Frances Traver, and Mrs. Arthur Haldane Doig are in town renewing acquaintances. Mrs. Doig is the former Miss Adelaide Heath and has come from her home in St. Louis for several weeks' visit. Whether the Duchess de Richelieu, who reached New York a few days ago from France, will come to Washington is not known, but it is assumed that she will, as her brother, James D. Wise, and Mrs. Wise live here on Nineteenth street, Mr. Wise having gone to New York to meet his sister. The duchess will spend some time at Berkeley Springs, W. Va., where her mother makes her home. Another probable visitor in town will be the Countess de Chambrun, formerly Clara Longworth, sister of the late Speaker of the House, who, with her son, is now in Cincinnati.

Hydes Will Honor President Hoover

Hoovers Take Sail for Stay at Cape Henry

Vice President Is Guest at Dinner Given by Guggenheims.

The President and Mrs. Hoover will be the guests in whose honor the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Hyde will entertain at dinner on Tuesday.

The President and Mrs. Hoover sailed yesterday afternoon for Cape Henry, where they will attend the 324th anniversary of the landing of the first colonists at the cape. They were accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, Dr. Robert Millikan, of Pasedena, Calif., sailing aboard the Sequoia, an inspection boat of the Department of Commerce. They will return tomorrow.

The Vice President and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann will leave Washington May 13 for Louisville, where they will attend the Kentucky Derby. Mrs. Gann, who has been ill for nearly a fortnight, is improved and may leave her apartment during the week for outdoor excursions.

The Vice President was the guest in whose honor Lieut. Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim entertained at dinner at their residence at Bethesda, Md., last evening. The other guests were the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, the Minister of Albania, Mr. Faik Konitza; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. James W. Good, wife of the late former Secretary of War; Mr. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose and Mrs. Robert Love Taylor.

The Attorney General and Mrs. William De Witt Mitchell have as their guest over Sunday their son, Mr. Bancroft Mitchell, of New York.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Walter F. Brown have taken an apartment at the Shoreham, which they will claim this week and will occupy permanently.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Arthur M. Hyde will be hosts at dinner on Tuesday at the Mayflower.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont entertained during the week the Irish poet, Mr. George Russell, who has been in this country on a lecture tour. Mr. Russell left the latter part of the week for New York, and will sail within a few days for Ireland.

Morrises in Capital From Philadelphia.

The former Ambassador to Japan and Mrs. Roland S. Morris have arrived in Washington from their home in Philadelphia and are stopping at the Carlton.

Princess Michael Cantacuzene, of Sarasota, Fla., is spending the week-end at the Mayflower on her way to New York. Her niece, Princess Elizabeth Cantacuzene, of Paris, is with her in Washington.

Lord Luke, of Paxenham, and Lady Luke, the former a brother of Mr. Ormond Lawson, of London and Washington, will arrive in Washington on Friday to attend the International Chamber of Commerce meeting. They will be at the Mayflower.

Princess Alexandra Victoria, of Schleswig-Holstein, and Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin will be at home this afternoon at 2633 Sixteenth street and will have receiving with them Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Miss Frances McKenney, Miss Mary Clarke, Miss Sally Hewes Phillips, Mrs. Richard Sims, Mrs. Samuel J. Graham, Mrs. John L. Chamberlin, Mrs. John L. Chamberlin, jr., Mrs. Larkin White Glazebrook, Miss Virginia Glazebrook, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh and Mrs. E. Crane Chadbourne.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol have as their guest, Mrs. Bristol's sister, Mrs. Henry Goldthwaite, who has arrived from her home in Panama.

Representative Walter G. Andrews, of New York, was host to a party at dinner on Friday at the Shoreham Hotel to guests from Buffalo, N. Y. They were Mrs. Sterling Deans, Dr. W. H. Glenny, Mr. and Mrs. S. V. R. Spalding, Mr and Mrs. J. L Crane and Mr Charles W. Goodyear.

Representative and Mrs. Fred A. Britten entertained at dinner on Friday evening in their home on Sheridan Circle in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Strawn, of Chicago.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Arthur Wallace Dunn will entertain informally at a tea this afternoon.

An engagement of interest in Army and Navy circles is that of Miss Nancy Griswold to Mr. Hugh Kemp Clark, of Norfolk, Va.

Miss Griswold is the daughter of the late Capt. Ralph Griswold, U. S. N., and granddaughter of the late Col. Thomas Sharp, U. S. A., and of Dr. Elisha Griswold, who was at one time in the Army Medical Corps.

Mrs. Lillian M. Gilbreth, of Montclair, N. J., is at the Mayflower.

HIGH LIGHTS ON SOCIETY TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

NOTE—Looking backward through the stereopticon of a quarter of a century ago, The Washington Post presents on the stage of society.

The seventieth birthday of the Speaker of the House, Joseph G. Cannon, will be celebrated by the members of the House who have issued invitations for May 7, at the Arlington Hotel.

Justice and Mrs. McKenna feel compelled because of the disaster in San Francisco and the uncertainty as to Mrs. McKenna's father and Justice McKenna's sister, from whom they have not heard definitely, to recall the invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Marie, to Mr. Davenport Brown, of Boston, on April 25. The marriage will take place in the presence of relatives of the two families.

The Secretary of the Navy entertained at luncheon yesterday for the officers of the French Navy who are here to participate in the Paul Jones memorial exercises.

Owing to the fact that on Friday afternoon, May 4, a large fete is to be given at Friendship, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean, the concert that is to be given by the Washington College of Music for the California relief fund will take place on May 2, at the Columbia Theater instead of on May 4.

Mrs. Bonaparte, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, has given up her home in Baltimore for a charity concert.

The Secretary of War, Mr. William Howard Taft, has left for Atlantic City to pass the week-end with Senator Dryden, where he will be joined by Mrs. Taft.

Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd, of Winchester, Va., a sister of Representative Flood, of Virginia, is visiting Mrs. Martin, wife of Senator Martin.

Mrs. Zalinski, wife of Maj. Zalinski, U. S. A., is the guest of her brother, Senator Brandegee.

The British Ambassador and his niece, Miss Everild Durand, have sailed for Europe. The Ambassador will be abroad only a short time, but Miss Durand, who spent the winter in Washington, will rejoin her family in England. Lady Durand and her daughter will go to Lenox, Mass., on May 8 for the summer.

Composers of Music Visiting in Capital to Be Feted Today

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, woman music composer from New Hampshire, is the house guest of Mrs. Edward Hood Watson, and her mother and father, the United States Marshal and Mrs. Edgar C. Synder while in Washington in attendance on the Coolidge Festival of Music at the Library of Congress. Mme. Sturkow-Ryder, of Chicago, joined the composer-house-party, as the guest of Mrs. Watson on Friday and Miss Mabel W. Daniels joined the group yesterday.

Miss Daniels is one of the well known New England women composers from Boston. All are active members of the composer group of the National League of American Pen Women, of which Mrs. Watson is national chairman for music.

Mrs. Watson entertained at her home on Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. Beach and will entertain again today in honor of the other visiting composers attending the Coolidge Festival of Music.

Col. and Mrs. Albert E. Truby will entertain at dinner on Wednesday evening.

A. E. Kennelly, professor emeritus of electrical engineering at Harvard University, is at the Powhatan. Adjt. Gen. C. E. Black, of Springfield, Ill., also is at the Powhatan.

Children's Country Home Board to Give Tea at Inspection

The board of managers of the Children's Country Home, of which Mrs. Alexander Legare is president, will entertain at a tea on Wednesday, May 6, from 3 until 5 o'clock, for an inspection of the new home at Bunker Hill road, at Eighteenth street northeast.

Other members of the board are Mrs. Joseph Leiter, vice president; Mrs. Archibald Davis, secretary; Mrs. George Pulver, assistant secretary; Mrs. Lee Warren, treasurer; Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. Kenna Elkins, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. R. S. Reynolds Hitt, Mrs. H. H. Kerr, Mrs James Mitchell, Mrs. Henry Benning Spencer, Mrs. Joseph Noell, Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, jr., Mrs. Upshur Moorehead, Mrs. Joseph Hines, Mrs. Frederick Faust and Mrs. William Payne Meredith.

Mrs. Joseph E. Davies will entertain at luncheon tomorrow in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas P. Cheesborough, of Bronxville, N. Y., who has been her guest for several weeks.

Tellez Leaves This Week for Mexico City

Ambassador and Family Will Spend Month in Home There.

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Tellez, with their children, will leave Washington the middle of the week for Mexico City to pass about a month in their home there.

April and May are the loveliest months in the southern republic, and the ambassador usually tries to take his vacation then rather than in the summer. So, while his colleagues are basking at Newport, Bar Harbor or some European spa, Senor Tellez remains at his Sixteenth street embassy poring over international problems.

On Tuesday evening the Ambassador and Senora de Tellez will be the guests of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Del Mar at their home in Belmont road.

The Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Ferrara, who left Washington Tuesday, are en route for California, from where they will sail Thursday for the Orient. They are accompanied by Senor and Senora de Whitmarsh. The ambassador will inaugurate the first Cuban Legation in Tokyo, after remaining there several weeks to see that affairs get "under way," will leave Senor Whitmarsh as charge d'affaires, and will proceed through Russia to Europe.

The Counselor of the Embassy here, Senor Jose Baron, is charge d'affaires in the absence of the ambassador.

The retiring Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Padilla, with their family, will leave Washington Thursday for New York, where they will remain about two weeks before sailing for Spain.

Senora de Padilla was the guest in whose honor Mrs. James Couzens entertained at luncheon Friday at her home on Woodland drive. The luncheon was planned as a farewell to Senora de Padilla and as a compliment to the guest of honor, the table was decorated in Spanish colors, red and yellow flowers being used, with a service of exquisite Venetian glass in red and gold.

The guests, friends of Senora de Padilla, included Mme. Claudel, wife of the French Ambassador; Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mrs. William R. Castle, jr., Mrs. William Bayard Cutting, Mrs. William S. Benson, Mrs. Robert Hinckley, Mrs. Woodbury Blair, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Miss Patten, Miss Bessie Cullen, Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning, jr., daughter of the hostess, and Miss Margaret Wade.

Senor and Senora de Padilla and their son, Ramon Padilla, went to Baltimore yesterday afternoon for the Maryland Hunt Cup Steeplechase, which was run over the estate of C. L. A. Heiser, in the Worthington Valley.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Claudel entertained at a small luncheon yesterday in honor of the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, when the decoration of the French Loyal Legion was conferred on Dr. Cumming.

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Davila will entertain at dinner on May 10 for the Vice President, Mr. Charles Curtis.

The Charge d'Affaires of Egypt and Mme. Ishmail Bey will entertain for Mr. Curtis this evening.

The Chilean Ambassador, Senor Don Carlos Davila, returned to Washington yesterday from New York, where he passed a short time. Senora de Davila will go to New York the end of the week to attend the opening of an exhibition of her paintings at the Roerich Museum on May 2.

The German Ambassador and Frau von Prittwitz und Gaffron will entertain a company of 30 guests at dinner tomorrow evening at the embassy.

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Malbran will entertain at dinner tomorrow evening at the embassy.

The British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay entertained at luncheon yesterday at the embassy in honor of the Viscountess Harcourt, who is visiting in this country, and is the guest at the embassy for several days.

The other guests included the Belgian Ambassador, M. Paul May; the Minister of Hungary and Countess Szechenyi, Representative Ruth Bryan Owen, Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Col. Arthur Woods, Mr. George Wickersham, Mrs. Cadwalader Jones, of New York, who is a guest at the embassy; Mrs. Morgan Hamilton, also of New York; Mrs. Frederic A. Keep, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Brig. Gen. Charles L. McCawley, Mr. Henry May, the Counselor of the Embassy, Mr. Ronald Campbell; the Second Secretary of the Embassy, Mr. Michael Husley; the Assistant Military Attache, Capt. J. T. Godfrey, and Miss Irene Boyle.

Lady Harcourt, the widow of Viscount Lewis Vernon Harcourt, is an American by birth, and was formerly Miss Burns, daughter of the late Mr. Walter Hayes Burns, of New York, and a friend for many years of Lady Lindsay, both in England and before their marriages, when they lived in New York.

The Minister of Norway and Mme. Bachke have given up their apartment at the Mayflower, where they have made their home since their arrival in Washington several years ago, and have moved to the recently completed legation at Thirty-fifth street and Massachusetts avenue.

The Charge d'Affaires of Colombia, Senor Don Jose Coronado, will go to New York tomorrow to meet the newly appointed Minister of Colombia, Dr. Fabio Lozano, who will arrive in this country on Tuesday. Dr. Lozano, who will be accompanied by Senora de Lozano, will come directly to Washington and will be established in a local hotel until a suitable house is found for the legation.

Dr. Lozano is the former minister of public works in the cabinet of President Olaya, former Colombian Minister to Washington, and before that Dr. Lozano was Minister to Peru.

The Commercial Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Weidel have motored to Middleburg, Va., where they are passing the week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Goodwin.

Sr. Luis Marino Perez, attache to the Cuban Embassy at Washington, is at the Hotel Taft in New York.

Capital Men Start Out For Bear Hunting

Senator Hale and Seth Richardson to Try Sport in Arctic.

Bear hunting in the Arctic Circle is the thrilling program of adventure mapped out by several Government "servants," Senator Frederick Hale and Assistant Attorney General for Public Lands, Mr. Seth W. Richardson, who with Mr. Samuel Stern, of Fargo, N. Dak., will try their hunting prowess in the snows of Kodiak Island, off the coast of western Alaska this month.

The trio sailed yesterday from Seattle for Juneau and will proceed into the north and west and to the famous hunting fields of Kodiak. They plan to be away until June 1.

Mrs. Richardson, who remained in Washington, will go to New York this week to be absent some time on a visit with friends and will also visit her sister, Mrs. Fred Sargent, in Chatham, N. J. Mrs. Sargent, with her son, Robert, returned to her home a few days ago after spending several days with Mrs. Richardson. While here her son, Mr. Carl Sargent, of Princeton University, spent the week-end in the Richardson home.

Dean Doyle Speaks At Democratic Club Forum Tomorrow

Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of George Washington University, will be the guest of honor and speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club's weekly forum luncheon tomorrow when he will discuss "The Revolution in Spain."

The club entertained at dinner Friday evening when the guest of honor and speaker was the Rev. Dr. Joseph Sizoo. He talked of "Development of American Life." Among those at the dinner, many of them entertaining guests, were Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Keating, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Dr. Henry Selby, Mrs. M. A. J. Markley, Mrs. Rosa Mulcare, Mrs. Charles A. Douglas, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Dr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Battle, Judge and Mrs. E. K. Campbell, Mrs. Ollie James, Miss Lyda Mae Francis, Mrs. Rust-Smith, Miss Cora Walters, Mrs. Frank Hiram Snell, Mrs. John T. Grimsley, Mrs. F. J. Kennedy, Mrs. Arlenne Spangler, Miss Mary Edith Coulson, former Gov. Nellie Tayloe Ross and Mrs. Ida H. Dugan, of Indianapolis.

Mrs. Junkin Hostess For German Princess.

Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin entertained last night at the National Women's Country Club for the Princess Alexandra Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein. Also entertaining at the club were Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, who had as their guests Mr. Cyrus H. K. Curtis, of Philadelphia, whose yacht, the Lyndonia, is anchored in the Potomac Basin.

THE NEW Jelleff's

Two Signs of Spring . . . You Will Welcome

Chartreuse, the color of April, combined with cloudy grey in a printed chiffon dance frock. The square neck is outlined with a soft ruffle just covering the shoulders and following the line of the deep V decolletage in the back. The little "modesty jacket," so important this spring, is of chartreuse crepe.

The flowers that bloom in the spring inspired the pattern of this print chiffon for the little woman. The bolero is skillfully designed to meet the needs of the woman below average height. The black background of the print is accented by the velvet sash. The graceful little cape is another point in the favor of this becoming gown.

Pacific Coast Wedding Is Gay Affair

F. C. Bryan Takes Bride in Los Angeles

Weds Miss Hamburger With Brilliant Church Ceremony.

The wedding of Miss Florence Evelyn Hamburger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Asher Hamburger, of Los Angeles, and Mr. Frederick Conger Bryan, son of Mrs. Frederick Carlos Bryan, of Washington, and the late Col. Bryan, which took place last Thursday in Los Angeles, had brilliant features.

Mr. Bryan left the Capital early this month accompanied by his ushers, and a round of gay festivities started with his arrival in Los Angeles and lasted up to the day of the wedding.

The ceremony was performed at St. John's Episcopal Church at 8:30 o'clock, the Rev. George Davidson officiating. The church was decorated with pale pink flowers, in great profusion; apple blossoms and pink and blue hygrangeas decorated the altar, and clusters of pink and white camillias and gardenias marked each pew.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of delicate flesh-colored satin, fashioned with two short side-trains and a long center-train. A veil of fine rose point lace fell from a cap of the lace, and the sleeves of the gown were made of the lace and fell in points over the hands. She carried a prayer book made of the same material as the gown, with a shower of pink baby orchids.

Mrs. John Kelly, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, and wore a gown of powder blue chiffon made with spiral flounces on the skirt, and a small blue straw hat to match, trimmed with bows of apple blossom pink. She carried a bouquet of pink hydrangeas. Miss Mary McAllister was maid of honor and was costumed like the matron of honor.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Florence Payne, Mrs. John Winfield Dennett, Mrs. Lester Griffith, Miss Celeste Durand, Miss Honore Higgins, all of the West, and Miss Virginia Harris, of Washington. They wore gowns like those of the other attendants, in pale pink chiffon with small pink straw hats to match, trimmed with powder blue bows, and carried blue hydangeas.

Little Gloria and Peggy Lloyd, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd, of Hollywood, were the flower girls, and wore Kate Greenway dresses of apple blossom pink with blue sashes and blue hair ribbons.

The best man was Maj. John Stewart Hunt, of Washington, and the ushers were Mr. John Devereux, jr., Mr. Wolcott Waggaman, Mr. Lester Griffith, Mr. J. Ross Clark, Mr. Sheppard Rolvier, Mr. Harold Streight, Mr. Donald McDonnell, and Mr. Arthur Hamburger, brother of the bride.

The ceremony was followed by a reception and dance at the Town House. The club was decorated in pink flowers and the bride's table was covered with a mass of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Bryan left for their wedding trip to Honolulu, the latter wearing a beige suit trimmed with beige fox and a brown straw hat. On their return they will spend a short time in Los Angeles before coming to Washington in June, where they will make their home at 2540 Massachusetts avenue.

For the benefit of Gadsby's Tavern court yard, which will be landscaped this summer, the Alexandria Garden Clubs will stage a tour of famous gardens on Saturday when Gunston Hall and Ordleigh will be thrown open to visitors as well as Ripon Lodge, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis; Wellington, the old place of Dr. Tobias Lear, and lovely Windsor, known as the Campbell place.

Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, of Glen View Falls, Rockville, Md., and her sisters, Mrs. Edward Everett Robbins and Mrs. N. Hopkins Heft, of Washington, will arrive today from Florida where they have been for an extended visit.

Mrs. Harrison H. Dodge and Mrs. Halberg will be at home this afternoon for the last time this season.

Mrs. Mathews C. Dick is in New York at the Savoy-Plaza.

Mrs. Robert Cox Post, of Englewood, N. J., and her daughter, Miss Margaret Post, are at the Shoreham, having come to attend the Festival of Nations. Mrs. Post was formerly Miss Elizabeth Dixon, daughter of the late Chief Justice of New Jersey, and is well-known in Washington. Miss Post is a debutante of last season in New York and Englewood.

Notzes Will Attend Goucher Inauguration.

Dr. and Mrs. William Notz went to Baltimore on Friday to attend the installation of Dr. David Allan Robertson as president of Goucher College.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cheney Hyde, of New York, are at the Powhatan.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrington Mills, who have been spending the winter at Ormond Beach, Fla., will return this week to their apartment at the Grafton Hotel, for a short time before going to their summer home in the Adirondacks.

Dr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Hess, who were recently married in Baltimore, Md., were the guests in whose honor Dr. Bernard Dietz entertained at a bridge supper at his home in Colorado avenue. Among those present were Miss Helen Marie Hess, Dr. Valentine Hess, Miss Bernadette Sheehan, Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Norris, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Brennan, Dr. and Mrs. William Donahey, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bailey, and Mr. and Mrs. Howenstein, of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Belmont, of Middleburg, Va., are at the Carlton for a short stay, accompanied by Mrs. Belmont's daughter, Miss Winifred Maddux.

Mrs. Albion Noyes Doe, of Jackson Heights, L. I., who has been the guest of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Doe, of San Francisco and winter residents in Washington, will leave for her home today. Mrs. Doe spent some time in the Capital last winter.

The Roerich Society of Washington will present Eleana de Sayn and Charlotte Klein in a violin and piano concert on Thursday at 8:15 o'clock in Stoneleigh Court ballroom. Miss Ada Rainey is chairman of arrangements. During the evening the aims of the Roerich Society will be outlined.

Engagement Recently Announced

Harris & Ewing.

MISS LUCY PARKER LARNER, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Larner, have announced her engagement to Mr. Hugh McAlister Banks, son of Dr. and Mrs. William H. Banks, of Mifflintown, Pa. The wedding will take place in the late summer at Annsfield, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Larner.

Hitts Witness Kin's Wedding In New York

Mr. Austen Gray Takes Mrs. Teresa Wood as His Bride.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Reynolds Hitt are in New York, where they went to attend the marriage on Friday afternoon of the latter's brother, Mr. Austen Gray, son of the late Mrs. John Clinton Gray, of New York and Newport, and Mrs. Teresa Schwab Wood, also of New York and Newport. Mrs. Thomas F. Witherspoon, another sister of Mr. Gray, also went to New York to attend the wedding.

Mrs. Gray was the widow of Mr. Rawson Lyman Wood and is a well-known tennis player, having played many tournaments throughout the country. Her son, Mr. Rawson Lyman Wood, jr., is engaged to Miss Elizabeth Ford, daughter of Prof. J. D. M. Ford and Mrs. Ford.

Mr. Austen Townsend Gray, son of the bridegroom, was best man for his father, and the bride was unattended.

No formal announcemnt had been made of the engagement, but many friends knew they were to be married. To society in general, however, the news of the wedding comes as a surprise.

Dr. Lulu I. Waters entertained at luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel on Thursdy in compliment to Miss Inez Harrison, noted concert singer. The guests included Miss Grace Goodpasture, Mrs. Mary Lewis, Miss Marjory Webster, Mrs. Jewel Downs and Mrs. Bess Fisher.

Some Reasons Why You Have Not Purchased An ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR.

You have never sat down and made an honest estimate of your ice bill for a period of two, three or four years, adding thereto the cost of the numerous times that you have used your car to supplement the daily delivery.

You have never faced the fact that your ice bill for one of these periods, depending on the amount you expend for ice, would purchase a WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR and that during this period you would be enjoying same.

You have never went further and realized that thereafter incomparable WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC REFRIGERATION would cost you less than former ice refrigeration.

You have never reasoned out the fact that a WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR would allow you to increase your purchase of perishable food items, thus lowering the weekly food cost by placing you in a position to take greater advantage of attractive prices.

You have never acquainted yourself with the fact that a WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR, in addition to perfectly preserving foods and making an abundance of ice cubes also delivers delicious frozen mousses, creams, parfaits and other desserts—dainties unthought of with ice refrigeration.

You have never concerned yourself about the work and worry that is necessary to keep the old style ice refrigerator in a sweet, sanitary condition and properly iced.

You have never visited the show rooms of the Edgar Morris Sales Company and inspected these beautiful cabinets, at the same time having their superior points and easy purchase plan explained to you.

You have never visioned the pride of ownership that would be reflected in the eyes of your wife.

In fact—you have never informed yourself of the desirability, from every comparative standpoint, of a WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR, or you would now be numbered among the thousands of satisfied users.

One Bill We Enjoy Paying

Gentlemen:

My husband and myself have often discussed the truly remarkable Serviceability and Economy of electricity.

We use an—Electric Washing Machine
Electric Iron
Electric Radio
Electric Vacuum Cleaner
Electric Coffee Urn
Electric Waffle Iron
Electric Curling Iron
Electric Toaster
Electric Heating Pad
Electric Lamps and Lights

Our monthly bill for electricity seldom reaches Three Dollars.

What a truly marvelous service electricity is when it will do a heavy washing, bring comforting heat to a disturbed stomach in the wee hours, and light the way generally to comfort and accomplishment.

It is our ambition to have a home fully equipped electrically. How foolish people are who are not taking full advantage of that unobtrusive, ever-ready, all-powerful servant—Electricity.

No kidding! Our electric bill is one bill we enjoy paying.

When you have a difficult task to perform you naturally select the help that will give you the best assistance.

Washing and ironing are hard. But with the A. B. C. Washer and Conlon Ironer the work is reduced to almost nothing.

The A. B. C. Washer is built to withstand hard usage. It cleans the clothes thoroughly with the least wearing effect upon delicate fabrics. It has no wringer to pull off buttons and creases the clothes into such deep lines that ironing them out becomes a discouraging task.

It whirls the clothes dry in the machine in a fraction of the time it takes to pass each piece through a wringer.

The Conlon Ironer cuts your ironing time in two. Each piece is run through instantly and comes out smooth and ready for use.

Modern families no longer tolerate old-fashioned back-breaking methods of doing the family laundry. Why do you?

Come in today. We will be glad to demonstrate these two wonderful aids to housework without obligation to you.

Mrs. E. Richard Gasch Honored

D. A. R. Regent Honor Guest At Luncheon

75 Attend Function for Mrs. Gasch by Chapter.

In honor of their regent, Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, Constitution Chapter, District of Columbia, Daughters of the American Revolution, arranged an elaborate luncheon at the Willard Hotel Friday at 1 o'clock. Details were under the direction of Mrs. Charles L. Dascher, vice regent of Constitution Chapter.

About 75 members and guests gathered around a flower bedecked, U-shaped table. Visitors to the D. A. R. Congress from many States attended.

The scheme of table decoration was colonial with quaint china and old fashioned blossoms; the place cards bore medalion likenesses of early national celebrities. A cake, adorned with the D. A. R. insignia, in colors, cut with the sword of a Bunker Hill patriot created a pretty feature.

The honor guests were: Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, regent of Constitution Chapter, trustee of the Soroptimist Club and national State vice president of the League of American Pen Women; Mrs. David D. Caldwell, vice president general of the National Society, D. A. R.; Miss Helen Harmon, state regent of the District of Columbia; Miss Mae Helm, State recording secretary, former officer of Constitution Chapter and attorney at law, and Miss Elizabeth Pierce, charter member and past regent of Constitution Chapter, former chaplain general, N. S., D. A. R.

Among the visitors from other States were Mrs. W. W. McCredie, State regent of Oregon; Mrs. John C. Coulter, State regent of South Carolina; Mrs. A. T. Atwood, State recording secretary of Wisconsin; Mrs. Mary Horton McDowell, State director of the Children of the American Revolution of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Edward Thurman Smith, of St. Louis, first woman legislator of the State of Missouri.

Additional guests included Mrs. Clement L. Shaver, of West Virginia; Mrs. Frank C. Croxton, Mrs. James Varley, Mrs. Robert K. Noble, Mrs. H. W. Hayes, Mrs. Lee Brock, Mrs. Arthur Adams, Mrs. F. D. Reynolds, Mrs. Mary DeTorres, Mrs. Lulah T. Andrew, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, Miss Mary L. Ullah, Miss Clara M. Roemer, Miss Esther Croggan, Miss Sarah Dean, Miss Olive Vean, Miss Alice Leftwich, Miss Elsa Dayer, Miss Mary L. Wynne, also officers, past regents and members of Constitution Chapter.

Mrs. Harry F. Cary, of Cincinnati, former regent, was toastmistress, having come from her present home in Cincinnati to participate.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Madge Kathryn Thornton, daughter of the late Mrs. Jennie L. Thornton, to Mr. John Elliott McCullough, at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church on Saturday, April 18. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the church, at noon in the presence of the immediate families and close friends.

The bride, who was dressed in powder-blue chiffon, with picture hat and slippers to match, entered the church with her brother-in-law, Mr. Alfred H. Mori. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Irene Mori, whose dress was a pencil-blue chiffon, with small cloche hat to match.

Reid McCullough, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. McCullough left immediately after the ceremony for a trip to New York State and Canada. They will be at home in the Argonne Apartments after May 10.

Constitution Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, entertained with a beautifully appointed colonial luncheon for the regent, Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, on Friday at the Willard Hotel. The chapter had for its honored guests national and State officers, among them, Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general; Mrs. David D. Caldwell, vice president general; Miss Helen Harman, State regent, District of Columbia; Miss Elizabeth Pierce, charter member of Constitution Chapter; Miss Mae Helm, State recording secretary. Mrs. Harry F. Carey, former regent, of Cincinnati, was the toastmistress. Colonial flowers and place cards were used, and each guest was presented with a corsage of colonial flowers.

Mrs. Charles L. Dasher and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper were in charge of the arrangements for the luncheon, which is an annual affair. Fifty guests were present.

The senior council will give a breakfast Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock at Woodley Park Towers for the benefit of the ways and means fund. Mrs. Henry Jaffee is in charge of ar arrangements.

Mrs. Betty Rosenthal and daughters, Mrs. Florine Stone and Miss Hortense Rosenthal, of Baltimore, were guests in town over last weekend and attended the reception given by Mrs. Max M. Rich to announce the engagement of her daughter, Miss Fanny Rich, to Mr. Dunbar Rosenthal, of Chambersburg, Pa., the son of Mrs. Betty Rosenthal.

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of the Zeta Tau Alpha Fraternity will entertain two of its grand officers, Mrs. Howard Gardner, grand president, and Miss May Youngberg, national inspector, at a bridge party to be held at the home of Miss Beatrice Clephane, 6000 Connecticut avenue, on Tuesday evening. The committee in charge consists of Miss Beatrice Clephane, Miss Frances James and Mrs. John Warlick.

Reports will also be given of the recent convention of Alpha Province, held in Lynchburg, Va., on April 18-19, when Mrs. Laurie Hess, a member of the Washington Alumnae Chapter, was reelected as province president. Local members of the fraternity attending this convention were Mrs. Laurie Hess, Mrs. W. Paul Briggs, Miss Beatrice Clephane, Miss Phoebe Tauberschmidt, Mrs. Paul Loehler, Miss Olivia Watkins, Miss Grace White, Miss Katherine Phelps, Miss Dorothy Richtmyer, Miss Betty Monroe and Miss Virginia Story.

Pi Sigma Tau Sorority will hold its spring dance on Friday at Beaverdam Country Club. Miss Anne Chambers is chairman of the dance committee and Miss Peggy Griffin is assistant.

Sorority Plans May Day Ball Friday Evening

Sigma Tau Gamma Also Will Offer Bridge at Country Club.

Arrangements have been completed for the May Day dance of the Sigma Tau Gamma Sorority, of which Miss Ruth Duckett is chairman of the committee on arrangements. The annual dance will be held Friday evening at the Army-Navy-Marine Corps Country Club in nearby Virginia.

There will be tables of bridge in the sun room of the country club in addition to the dancing in the main clubrooms. Gay decorations of varied colored balloons will lend a festive air to the affair.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. William J. McCaughey and Mr. Karl Frazier are among the honor guests invited by the group.

Assisting Miss Duckett is a committee of girls of the Alpha Chapter of the sorority, including Miss Carl Louise Johnson, Miss Betty McCaughey and Miss Cornelia Reid.

The members of the alumni chapter of Pi Beta Phi sorority celebrated their annual Founders' Day luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel.

The guests of honor were the retiring president of the chapter, Mrs. Carl Smith Dow; the new president, Mrs Arthur E. Nesbitt, and the active chapter of the sorority at George Washington University.

The executive committee in charge of arrangements included Mrs. Charles H. Stewart, chairman; Mrs. Lewis Colbert, Mrs. George Ober, Mrs. Karl Loos and Mrs. Arthur Walsh, while the active chapter of the organization was represented by Miss Carolyn Jackson and Miss Pauline Schwab.

Art and Artists in Capital - - - By Ada Rainey

THE international character of Washington was again proved in the occasion of the introduction of the Princess Alexandra Victoria by Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin, at 2633 Sixteenth street last Wednesday evening.

Princess Alexandra Victoria is the niece of the former German kaiser and married his fourth son. The marriage was dissolved and her present husband is a captain in the German navy. The princess is a clever artist and has been in America for five years exhibiting her water colors and portraits. Personally she is a beautiful and charming woman, an enthusiastic swimmer and an excellent sportswoman. Her swimming caused her a severe injury to her knee recently for she was swimming in the surf in Florida and was violently thrown against the rocks and before she could recover herself was again thrown and a torn ligiment was the result which has kept her lame for weeks.

In her exhibition which is in the famous Richardson house on Sixteenth street, which Maj. George Oakley Totton, jr., removed from its former site on K and Sixteenth streets, and moved stone by stone further up the street and then reconstructed into an apartment house, are water colors and portraits. On the first floor of the former apartment of Mrs. Junkin, widow of Lieut. Col. Junkin, the large rooms have been reconstructed into an excellent gallery, where the paintings are hung. One is a portrait of Mrs. Junkin done in pastel, but so broadly is it painted and so rich are the colors that it has the look almost of an oil portrait. It is an excellent likeness and a brilliant and effective portrait as well. There are several other portraits which are equally effective.

The artist is almost entirely self-trained and has painted since she was a little girl. She could not paint in the manner of her instructors for she did not see colors and forms as they did, so she decided to paint as she saw nature and she has been most successful in her work. She has a decided individuality and succeeds in getting a light vibratory quality in her water colors which is delightful.

Most of the scenes are from California and Florida with an occasional view of the country round about Munich with a few paintings of the palaces of the old mad king of Bavaria which are so picturesque that they are loved by travelers.

The princess has exhibited in many cities throughout the country, in Chicago, in Miami, Palm Beach, in various parts of California where she has been received with great appreciation.

She painted the portraits of Bishop Stewart when in Chicago and has been painting Bishop Freeman since she has arrived here. Both portraits were done in the robes of the bishops and are life sized. She has received many commissions for portraits which have a certain distinction about them most attractive. This interesting painter does most unusual things. She and her husband travel in a caravan car which is fitted up with all the conveniences of a Pullman car. Here the paintings are carefully packed and they are taken with them on their journeyings across the continent. They do not have to depend on the uncertainties of the express to deliver them in time for the exhibitions.

Last Wednesday evening there was a large gathering of distinguished people to hear a musical by Florence Trumbull, pianist and Jurien Hockster, barytone. Afterward there was a supper and the company were entertained with dancing. The Princess and her husband were introduced to social and artistic Washington by Mrs. Jenkins.

The exhibition will be opened to the public until the first of June every day from 10 until 6 o'clock and on Sunday afternoons. The artists will be at the gallery every afternoon.

At the Arts Club.

The paintings by Fanny Burand-Sevastos and Angela Morgan at the Arts Club drew an interested group last Sunday, which was headed by the French Ambassador and members of the legations. The paintings of Miss Sevastos are interesting more for their promise than for their achievement. That she has talent is undoubted. She is young and her work rather immature. In the portrait of herself she has done something, however, that is distinguished. It is well constructed and the eyes have a quality that is rather occult. The blue of the eyes and the gown harmonized attractively.

Two landscapes are distinctly interesting. "Croton II" and "White Light." The others are rather disappointing. The nudes do not show real understanding and are not convincing.

The portrait of young Claude Bragdon, son of the well-known architect, is however well done and thought out.

The sculptures of Angela Morgan are few in number. There is a bas-relief of Elizabeth Clarke Freeman which is strongly modeled and well characterized. The portrait of "Faithful George" is of an old Negro and is well delineated and that of a little Negro girl is also most convincing. There is a group of the photographs of the sculptures done by Miss Morgan, for the criminal courts and jail building in the parish of New Orleans which are very effective for the place that they are intended to fill. They are rather in the style of Bourdelle and show his influence.

The photographs by the Japanese photographer really show more sensitiveness to beauty and form than do the paintings. It seems that the forms of art have rather changed hands. There is a subtle appreciation for the nuances of light and the beauty of simple natural forms that are strangely moving. A print of "Snowbirds" is appealing in its simplicity and the two lovely nude torsos are as fine as any drawing by a master hand. The artist has given rein to his imagination and his effects are satisfying. The Japanese have well-earned the reputation for being clever photographers and Amemya sustains this reputation adequately.

Then there are a large number of photographs of important estates on Long Island and elsewhere near New York which are done in an original manner which calls forth much admiration. His photographs of downtown New York are also most effective. The fountain in the gardens of Thomas Hunt, a view of the gardens of Percy B. Straus and bath house on the same estate are particularly beautiful. There are details from the gardens of Richard A. Strong, and from the estate of George H. Townsend and interiors from many others that show a wealth of architectural detail which is in the most recent houses on Long Island.

By Miss Bostick.

An exhibition of much intrinsic value was that of the paintings by Alma Bostick, shown at the house of James S. Pettit, 1718 Q street, last Sunday. This is the first "one-man show" that Miss Bostick has had and the impression received by the 200 visitors was that it was work of high quality. It is a pity there was only one private view by invitation, for the paintings merited to be seen publicly. Miss Bostick has exhibited from time to time with the Society of Washington Artists in the city. This past winter she has painted canvases which surpass anything she has accomplished. Her flower paintings always have charm with a fine color.

"Madame G," by Alma Bostick, recently exhibited at the studio of James S. Pettit, 1718 Q street northwest.

But the present show is far superior to anything she has done in new quality, a feeling for form and design which is a recent acquisition. A painting of anemones is lovely in form and color. The artist returned with the flowers one evening after dinner and realized that by morning their fresh beauty would have perished and so she worked all night and until early morning by a blue light. The enthusiasm of her work is seen in this painting.

There is another painting of leaves and foliage with a green background which has an excellent decorative beauty. The greens are finely handled and the canvas is one of the choice things in the show. However, her work is not confined to flowers and still life, but she has done some fine work in portraiture. There is an almost life-sized portrait of Mme. G, which shows fine construction and a splendid handling of the figure. There is a delicate pattern on the wall facing the sitter which is skillfully handled and adds richness and interest to the portrait which shows the back of the figure.

A portrait of Miss Esther Marks is done in rich orchid tones and another of Mrs. Stimpson Brown, the mother of Mr. Pettit, is also a fine portrait, as is that of a young artist who is now studying in London and which was shown in the last Society of Washington Artists and reproduced in The Post at that time. It is a fine character study.

A delightfully decorative group called "Persephone" is imaginative in form and unusually satisfying in color. This is an entirely different style from the other works, and shows the possibilities of the artist. It should prove an incentive to further work in the same direction, so successful is it. A smaller painting, symbolic in its nature, called "Onward Faring," relates to the passing of the soul, and was painted to illustrate a poem written by the artist a year or more ago.

Then there are other flower pieces, among them "Gloxinia," which is brilliant and effective, and some fine heads and other figures which make an exhibit that has true feeling for beauty and form.

The room in which the paintings were shown was an ideal setting. It was designed by the owner, who is also studying painting with Miss Bostick. It is a long room, extending the entire width of the house, which has been cleverly remodeled and effectively furnished with dull blues and rare antique pieces which some way stay in their places in the room and do not call attention to themselves, as they often have a way of doing when not arranged so skillfully. The afternoon was a social occasion as well as an artistic triumph for which Miss Bostick is to be congratulated.

Here From Turkey.

A personality that is outstanding in the world of art is that of the Turkish painter, Mihri Rassim Pasha, of Constantinople, who is in Washington to paint the portrait of the Turkish Minister. This painter is one of the few Turkish women who have gained distinction beyond the confines of her native land. She is vivid and delightful.

Mme. Rassim is a product of Young Turkey and is an ardent admirer of Kemal, who has done so much to revolutionize Turkey, especially for women. She is in sympathy with the progressive movement as established by Kemal and declares that Turkey is following along the lines of America in many instances. She is gathering material for a book on the economic condition of women in America, which will be published in Turkish, English and French.

But most remarkable of all she has established a school of art in Constantinople where men and women study together. This academy of fine arts is well attended and has been enthusiastically received. She says that the Turkish women have great artistic ability and are studying art in all forms. She herself has studied in Germany, France and England. She, however, follows no especial school but uses what she has learned from all of them in her teaching in her school at Constantinople. Men and women study and work together now and the old order is no longer in force. There is very little resistance to this new order except among some of the most conservative men who do not admire the new regime, but mostly all classes are enthusiastic followers of the modern ways.

Mme. Rassim has been three years in New York, and is teaching at a girls' school in Connecticut. She is at present staying at the Turkish Embassy until she finishes the portrait of the minister, which is being painted in oil.

Chapel in a Garden.

Now that our attention is being turned toward gardens and what can be accomplished in cooperation with nature to make harmonious surroundings, Christ Church in Kensington becomes particularly interesting. Christ Church is a tiny chapel set in a charming garden which has been cultivated by the rector, the Rev. Thomas Windiate. Dr. Windiate is a member of the Arts Club and is deeply interested in art, and is seeking to do what he can to beautify his church yard. He has planted bulbs and shrubs around the chapel, which nestles against the side of a hill, and the result is picturesque in the way of some of the small English churches that are so attractive to the visitor.

Forsythia and Japanese cherry blossoms in all their glory irradiate the grounds and "make a sunshine in a shady place" through the brilliant yellow of the blooms of forsythia and the jonquils. One day last week the grounds were at their best and the birds were dipping in the bird bath before the outdoor shrine, which consists of a wooden cross simply made, but which has a significance for the people of the parish.

With but small means, but with a mind keen for beauty, this rector has planned a procession of flowers which last through the summer. The vine-clad chapel makes a delightful background for the climbing roses, which are planted and tended by the rector himself without any help. He believes that the outdoor life of a church is important and seeks in this way to make an attractive place for meeting and social gatherings throughout the spring and summer. Always the little church makes a picture for those in Kensington to see who have their eyes set toward beauty.

The children of the primary class have done some excellent designing of pictures to illustrate the stories of the Bible, and the exhibition of their work is really stimulating to see.

Later on an outdoor shrine made effective with color will be placed at one end of the church in the manner of the wayside shrines of the churches abroad.

By Miss Hammond.

An exhibition of much originality is that of the paintings and drawings by Natalie Hays Hammond now on view at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. Miss Hammond is the daughter of John Hays Hammond, well known in Washington. She has been studying at the Roerich Museum this past year and her work shows the effect of sincere study. There are a number of costume designs which have been done for the one-act play "India," for Alla Nazimova, and the "Head of a Prophet," loaned by the actress. A "Joan of Arc" and "Mary the Madonna" and "Mary the Magdalene" are three strongly accentuated studies. They are medieval in feeling and are interesting and effective.

There is nothing soft and saccharine about these figures, rather are they the expression of an almost Hebraic sense of form. The three paintings in oil, all Cape Cod subjects, are decorative and primitive in feeling, with a sound sense of color. There is a group of amusing sketches in color which are numerous and achieve a good deal with a few lines. These paintings are childish and sophisticated, but at the same time are attractively thought out.

Of the costume sketches, which are perhaps the most interesting of all, one can imagine how effective they would be in a play and how really charming they are in their present form.

The paintings and drawings will be on view through May 3. Miss Hammond has exhibited in the Art Gallery, Rochester, at the Pennsylvania Academy, at the National Arts Club in New York, at the Palette Francaise Paris and at the Roerich Museum. The influence of her teacher, Soudekine, can be seen in much of her work. Miss Hammond is a sculptor as well as a painter, and an associate member of the Royal Miniature Society of London.

Seen in Lithographs.

At the art gallery of Howard University there is an exhibition of the American Print Makers which is the fourth annual exhibition sent out by the Downtown Gallery of New York. This exhibition is an advanced show of the modern artists who are here seen in lithographs, wood cuts and a few etchings. The names are well known to every one conversant with modern art. With the element of color lacking there is a decided bareness which leaves one rather at sea. There are, however, some fine prints by Rockwell Kent, "Boatman" and "Over the Untimate" and a portrait of Cleland in sepia.

Walt Kuhn, Morris Kantor, Peggy Bacon, Glenn Coleman, Ernest Fiene, Wanda Gag, Emil Ganso, Anne Goldthwaite and a host of other modern lithographers are represented. One can not escape the conclusion, however, that they are concerned with the sordid side of life, with men and women of the underworld. Surely there is as much pattern, design and intrinsic value in people of a slightly higher rung in the ladder of humanity if they scorn subject as the modernists protest that they do.

There is, however, much excellent technical achievement in the show, which is one of the most varied black and white shows that we have had this winter in the city. But it is depressing, none the less.

The work of the students of Howard University is now being shown in the College Art Association on Fifty-eighth street in New York. This association is a representation of over 30 colleges that have art departments in their curriculum. The work of the students of Howard University is the only work done by Negroes shown in the exhibition, which will go out on tour throughout the country.

A number of the Negro colleges and schools in the South are celebrating "art week" this week, when they stress the importance of art.

James Herring, the director, is giving a lecture on "Art in the Home" at Bennet College for Negro Girls at Greensboro, N. C., illustrated with lantern slides loaned by the American Federation of Arts. This is one of the ways that the Negroes of the South are being taught the principles of art.

At the Oakie Gallery, beginning on Thursday, there will be an exhibition of paintings by M. Califano, who has painted a number of prominent people in the city, including W. M. Ritter, which will extend through May 15. His exhibition will be of portraits of Mr. Ritter, Miss Leonora Corona, of the Metropolitan Opera, of New York, and others; water colors and landscapes in oil of Florida and Venice. The water colors are in the impressionistic style and the oils are attractive in color and the manner of treatment. "Storm in Palm Beach," which is of palm trees tossed by the wind, is an interesting composition.

The first public meeting of the Washington Roerich Society will be held Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Pen Women's League room at Stoneleigh Court, when there will be a concert given by Elena de Sayn. The aims and the details of the new society will be outlined and the plans for the coming year decided upon. All those who are interested in the art of Washington are welcomed. Further information can be had through Miss Helen Seymour, Stoneleigh Court, who is the secretary.

The concert, which was given on Wednesday evening by Miss de Sayn, violinist, and Miss Charlotte Klein, pianist, will be repeated on this occasion. A number of distinguished people were there, including the composer, Mrs. Beach, whose music was played on Wednesday.

The first one-man exhibition of the paintings of Senora Herminia Arrate de Davila, wife of Don Carlos G. de Davila, Chilean Ambassador to the United States, will open Saturday at the International Art Center of the Roerich Museum, 310 Riverside drive, New York.

Senora de Davila, who is one of the outstanding women in Chile, and a leading figure in the culture of the South American country, where her excellent work has achieved wide recognition since her initial exhibit there about five years ago, will show about twenty still lifes and a number of portraits and figures. She studied for seven years with the Chilean artist, Senor Don Pablo Burchard, and was awarded high honors at the exhibits of the Official Salons in Chile. Her paintings have been displayed in Washington.

Elmira Club Gives Tea to Honor Dean Emeritus of College

A charming tea was held yesterday afternoon, in honor of Dr. M. Anstice Harris, dean emeritus of Elmira College, at the home of Mrs. Frederick W. Crocker in Chevy Chase. Mrs. A. Lane Cricher, president of the club, received with Dr. Harris and Mrs. Crocker.

Mrs. Seymour Lowman, wife of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman, a trustee of Elmira College, and Mrs. J. Sloat Fassett, also a trustee, presided at the tea table. Mrs. Charles Rippey, Miss Mary McNair, and Miss Esther H. Hart, all past presidents of the club, assisted in the dining room.

The decorations were spring flowers in the college colors, purple and gold.

Returns From Stay In Atlantic City.

Mrs. Alvin Newmeyer and Mrs. Jerome Meyer have returned from Atlantic City, where they motored to pass the week.

The May breakfast of the Political Study Club, which will be held on Saturday, May 23, at the Mayflower Hotel, will complete the club year. Mrs. F. M. Shorhall is chairman of the breakfast committee. Mrs. Bruce Baird, the president of the club, will preside at the speakers' table.

DIAL FLASHES

ALTHOUGH official comment from the Commerce Department and the Navy Department has been withheld, the Coast Guard, through its commandant, Rear Admiral Frederick C. Billard, declares the silencing of broadcasting stations, even along the coasts, is no longer necessary nor desirable.

Washingtonians had another experience with loss of programs through an S O S call, which caused WRC and WMAL to shut down for more than an hour only a week ago, when a fishing boat operating off the Massachusetts coast was unable to give a clear signal because of a leakage in her boiler, causing her to lose power for her wireless set. It has been estimated that such a shutdown along the Atlantic seaboard costs each of the chains in the neighborhood of $5,000 an hour.

A survey has just been completed by Coast Guard headquarters to ascertain the extent of interference on 500 kilocycles, the distress frequency, caused by broadcasting stations. Interference was reported from the following stations only:

WNYC, New York City; WQAM, Miami, Fla.; WEEI, Boston; WEAF, WJZ, WABC, New York City; KTAB, Oakland, Calif., and KFSD and KPO, San Francisco.

"Interference from these stations is noted by Coast Guard units when in the vicinity of the station's transmitter, but no reports have been received which would indicate that they interfere with vessels at sea," the commandant's report continues.

"THE opinion seems to be fairly general that the silencing of broadcasting stations during distress is unnecessary and undesirable, insofar as the Coast Guard is concerned, except in specific cases."

On June 10, 1929, the Federal Radio Commission issued a general order which required only cleared channel stations within less than 100 miles from the coasts of the Atlantic, the Pacific or the Great Lakes and stations operating on 550 to 1,000 kilocycles to maintain a watch and to close down immediately upon receipt of a distress call.

Other broadcasting stations are required to cease operation only when ordered to do so by a Government or marine radio station. A system was worked out at the time whereby broadcasting stations, particularly in the New York area, might be permitted to go back on the air as soon as it was determined that they did not interfere with the distress call. The district naval officer has assumed the duty of notifying them.

William D. Terrell, chief of the radio division of the Department of Commerce, while declining to comment on the Coast Guard's declaration that the attitude of his division had always been that it is better to cause some inconvenience to radio listeners than to gamble with human life. Often a distress signal comes in faintly and only two or three times, he said, and every precaution should be taken to insure reception.

While official comment from the Commerce and Navy Departments has been withheld, indications are that vigorous objections will be offered if the Coast Guard seeks to have the radio act modified so as to permit broadcasters to continue operation after receipt of a distress signal.

THE American Society of Newspaper Editors, which met in Washington recently, was advised by Volney D. Hurd, radio editor of the Christian Science Monitor and president of the Newspaper Radio Editors Association, not to fight radio, particularly in the matter of program publication, but rather to seek to build up radio pages to the standard of the theatrical and music sections in an address on "Radio and the Press."

Reminding the editors that the press muffed a great opportunity to gain control of broadcasting in its pioneer days, Mr. Hurd expressed regret that more newspapers nowadays do not operate stations.

"Radio is essentially a public service function," he said. Even today the Federal Radio Commission particularly favors newspaper ownership and operation of radio stations, knowing that newspapers above all other groups have the greatest inheritance of years of public service in informing and entertaining the public, bringing to it good advertising, and safeguarding the public's interest."

WHILE pointing out that the two major chains are controlled by industrial organizations which have been accused of monopolistic tendencies, Mr. Hurd said: "We must congratulate the chains on their restraint so far as propaganda work for their respective backers is concerned."

Speaking of radio advertising, the radio editor declared that "the present long-winded advertising talks are rapidly driving away listeners from the radio."

"My own concept of radio advertising can be summed up in the phrase 'Too brief to tune off!'" he said. "The best appeal may not be desired by certain people at certain times. But if it is brief it will be overlooked.

"That radio is losing a lot of its listeners may be considered fortunate by many newspapermen, but whatever our feelings, I don't think we can afford to take this attitude. We are primarily dedicated to looking out for public interest. Radio is a great gift to mankind and, properly used, may be of inestimable value. That it should be wasted through misuse, and therefore our readers deprived of its possible good, is certainly a concern of ours if we are to carry on our traditional roles.

"We definitely have a duty to perform in radio, and that is in controlling it through the power of the press, even though we failed to grasp opportunity to control it directly when it was offered a few years ago. Our need is to see that public opinion is sufficiently organized to keep radio at a relatively high level."

BELIEVING that the best music can be rendered adequately for the radio audience only by the best musicians, CBS has been engaged in recruiting noted players for its orchestras. Among these are Daniel Bonade, for thirteen years first clarinettist in the Philadelphia Orchestra, now under Howard Barlow's baton; Max Schlossberg, trumpet player in the New York Philharmonic, and Edward Horwitz, who has played the horn in famous continental orchestras.

The French Republic will invite Americans to attend the International, Colonial and Overseas Exposition in Paris, through a broadcast from the French capital today (WMAL, 1 p. m.). The band of the Garde Republicans will be heard in the program, playing the patriotic music of both nations. Ambassador Walter E. Edge will be the principal speaker.

Ten members of the famed Madrigal Choir of Stuttgart, Germany, will be heard in a half hour of choral music this morning. The program will originate in the studios of WRC at 10 o'clock. Prof. Hugo Holle, conductor of the choir, will direct the program.

The last in the series of Sunday morning concerts will be given from the Roxy Theater this morning (WRC, 10:30 a. m.).

The fifth in a series of easily understood explanations anent operatic history will be given by Deems Taylor this afternoon (WRC, 1 p. m.).

AARON BURR, Vice President of the United States, lawyer, statesman and duellist, must again face charges of treason, this time before a modern radio court, tonight (WRC, 9:15 p. m.). Clarence Darrow will be his counsel, while George Gordon Battle, of the New York Bar, will be the prosecutor.

More than 400 tenants along the easterly Sixth avenue frontage and in adjoining buildings from Forty-eighth to Fifty-first streets in New York City, have received notice to vacate by June 1 in preparation for erection of the first four buildings in the Rockefeller radio and amusement center.

Every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoon at 4:45 o'clock WBAL listeners may sail over the ether waves to visit "In Old Granada" long enough to do some musical "sight-seeing' in the one-time Moorish stronghold in southern Spain. The new program is under the direction of Michael Weiner.

Grace Moore, Metropolitan Opera star, is scheduled to apear tomorrow night (WMAL, 7:30 p. m.) in a half-hour recital. Her remuneration for this engagement is said to be about $2,250.

WHEN a boy runs away from home to attend church—that is news. Such was the experience of Evan Evans, CBS tenor, who at the age of 12 was gifted with an unusually mature singing voice. Although he wanted a professional career, his parents thought otherwise, and began making plans for his entrance into the cotton business. When he realized the hopelessness of his artistic cause, young Evan made periodic and secret trips to sing with the boys' choir of the Liverpool Cathedral.

FROM A LISTENER'S VIEWPOINT

An Amused Reader.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: As a regular reader of your column "Dial Flashes" your item in last Thursday's issue regarding insurance for B. A. Rolfe's Lucky Strike Band arrangements has furnished me the best laugh of the season.

Insuring those arrangements against fire and theft is like insuring "left-overs" in the ice box. Nobody cares. The guy who would steal one of the Rolfe arrangements would be a fit candidate for the booby-hatch. Of course there is a certain amount of humor in the announcement that they are arrangements. After several months of "listening-in" on the Lucky Strike program in hopes that it would improve, I have yet to discern any difference between numbers as played by Mr. Rolfe. They all sound alike—if that's an arrangement. As for the fire insurance any other band on either chain is "hot" enough to cause the Lucky Strike program plenty of worry.

Yours laughingly,
THE JAZZ ROOTER.

Praise for Soloists.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: Hoping that it may reach them through the medium of your column in The Post, I would like to say a word or two in appreciation of the two consistently worth-while programs now heard weekly. I refer to the hours which bring us Olive Palmer and Paul Oliver, Wednesday, and Jessica Dragonette, Fridays. It is my contention that no other programs contain so much melodious music each week. Other hours have their guest artists, some of them very fine, too, but you can always count on the lovely voices of these three soloists. I turn to them week after week and have yet to be disappointed in their offerings.

ACHIEVED! BY GENERAL ELECTRIC

Brilliant Performance in small sets

The new Junior—An 8-tube screen-grid superheterodyne with full-size dynamic speaker. Compact—and portable! Can be put on a mantelpiece, bookcase, corner table. So light a 10-year old boy can carry it from room to room. Easy to take along for vacation. Antique bronze handle for carrying. Widely variable tone control, and phonograph connection. Housed in rich walnut cabinet of 18th century mantel clock design.

COMPLETE WITH RADIOTRONS $72.50

The new Junior Console—An 8-tube screen-grid superheterodyne, designed to harmonize with smaller homes and apartments. Takes little floor space. Full-size dynamic speaker. Widely variable tone control, and phonograph connection. Rich brown walnut cabinet.

COMPLETE WITH RADIOTRONS . . $99.50

Junior, with clock—Similar to the Junior, with General Electric Clock included.

COMPLETE WITH RADIOTRONS $84.50

IT has taken 2 years of painstaking development to produce the General Electric Junior and the Junior Console. Small sets so good that in a masked test they were chosen unanimously over competing sets. So, confidently we ask you to compare their performance with any small set you've ever heard. Turn the dial on the new Junior or Junior Console. You will note at every point that the tone is startlingly human—as though someone were sitting in the chair beside you, talking to you. Tune in any station. Move the dial ever so little and the station is clipped off—like snipping a thread with a pair of scissors. And distance? . . . . so sensitive are these sets that they will bring in clearly stations which heretofore have been just a far-away murmur, or that you haven't been able to get at all. See your nearest General Electric Radio dealer. Hear the new General Electric Full Range Radio sets. Make your own comparisons.

The General Electric Highboy

Here is one of the larger G-E sets, 9-tube screen-grid superheterodyne, fitted with local-distant switch and tone control. Remote control available at additional cost. Brown walnut cabinet with French doors.

PRICE, LESS RADIOTRONS $179.50

YOUR G-E DEALER will give you easy installment terms. And he will tell you about the new G-E Certified Inspection Plan, which entitles you to many service privileges.

We invite you to listen to the General Electric program, broadcast every Saturday night, over a nation-wide N. B. C. network.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Conventions and Addresses Will Not Prevent War; Nations Must Be Brought Together to Understand That Peaceful Adjustment Can Be Effected; Nation Founded by War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Cause-and-Cure-of-War outfit, led by Mrs. Catt, have much to say about "cure," and that there must be no war, whatever the "cause" of one may be. The only way yet discovered to avoid war is to refuse to meet the aggressors and permit them to go their way, regardless of what they want or what they do. If no opposition is offered them there is no war; it is simply rapine and plunder, which is, of course, preferable to war.

The destruction of homes and the ravishing of women might not occur if there were war, but war must not be, for in such a case some men might be killed in trying to defend their homes and protect their wives and children. Men will do those things on occasion.

This great Nation had its inception and development, so that it is now a safe place for Mrs. Catt and her friends, because men were willing to fight, when it became necessary to realize their ideals, independence instead of serfdom and opportunity for individual initiative. It took conflict to maintain the integrity of the Union, and one now is led to wonder if they would prefer to see two governments where one is now happily conducting the affair of this Nation.

Meantime 4,000,000 human beings were released from bondage and in 1898 Cuba was rescued and set joyfully on the road to opportunity.

Germany had said that it was its purpose to put its heel on the neck of France, humble England and with her fleet sail into New York, Boston and Washington and collect a billion in gold with which to pay the expenses of such a sortie.

All this twaddle about curing war by conventions and addresses is waste effort. Not this Nation alone, but others that can make war upon us, should be the objects of effort, to enlighten them to understand that peaceful adjustment can be effected, and so avoid the horrors of strife. Meantime our Navy should be built up to treaty limit, our air service strengthened, and our military instruction put on a broader basis, so that it may be known, the world over, that while we desire peace and will go to any reasonable length to secure it, we insist on a preparation for emergencies that will enable us to destroy any aggression. This Nation must still be safe for women and children and our institutions must continue to function under the Stars and Stripes.

Rewards Are Suggested in Prohibition Reform Movement for Those Who Have Fought the Fight in the Humbler Ranks of Alcoholic Patriots.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I be permitted to broadcast my gratitude to the Women of the National Prohibition Reform convention, just recently in session at Washington, for its startling and welcome announcement that in the next Congress we shall find no less than 182 members meriting a place on the "patriotic honor roll."

In this hypercritical present, when most of us are glad at the adjournment of Congress, it is highly encouraging to be thus reassured by such a body of experts as represented by the above convention that our doubts about the mentality and moral courage of our statesmen are not only uncalled for but unjust as well to a large number of "superpatriots!"

Just what category to place the other 349 in is left to our independent judgments, and that, too, is quite a relief, for it leaves us a sufficiently large area in which to exercise our inborn cynicism regarding politicians. We hope, however, that in this recognition of the high-powered patriots will not be left in the immaterial form of a mere convention resolution. We would therefore advocate that at the opening of the next congressional session these women may have devised some more tangible index of their feelings, and by pinning appropriate medals on the chests of these 182 protagonists of simon-pure liberty they will advertise to all Washington's visitors the "Who's Who" in the antiprohibition Blue Book.

But why limit it to representatives who already enjoy a certain amount of legal immunity? Let's give honor to whom it is due, to those who bear the burden and heat of the day, to the men who, by land and sea, by day and by night, have toiled so nobly to supply the needed inspiration to palatial home and cabaret alike—the bootlegger. Isn't he the "man behind the gun," the "Horatius" who has for those past years of drought so gallantly kept clear (more or less?) our national "Bridge of Sighs?" So why not hand a wreath of liberty's laurel to such an outstanding minister to the thirsty as Al Capone?

It is said that that convention represented a billion dollars. Does this mean that such wealthy lovers of liberty were unable to rise superior to their usual social distinctions? If so, then we may see why a wet representative is singled out for honors but a plebeian bootlegger is ignored? Is this democracy?

It is this unfair discrimination that may also account for the present tendency on the part of wets to throw mud at the once popular, hard-working saloon-keeper. Ought they not remember the long and odorous hours he spent behind the bar, handing out a welcome stimulant to all comers—but not allowed to stimulate himself?

And while in search of recipients of honor ought not the wets to pay some respect, even erect some monuments, to the memories of those alcoholic patriots who "fit and bled" for their cause in that too little honored "whisky insurrection" of 1794?

Purposes Explained of Segnu Forum, Organized by Students of School of Economics and Government of National University.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The City of Washington is well known the world over. Besides being the Capital of the greatest nation on earth, it is a place of historical interest where monuments, memorials, museums, libraries, famous buildings, parks,, and schools and universities abound. It is not surprising, therefore, to know that people far and near come to the city to study or for a visit

The other day an event took place which is of importance to American and foreign students alike. We refer to the formation of the Segnu Forum, an organization of the students of the School of Economics and Government of the National University. This is the first time the students of this school will have an effective agency through which they could express themselves as a body and get acquainted with one another more intimately. It may be proper to quote the objects of the Segnu Forum, to wit:

"a. The mutual promotion of interests of the students in the School of Economics and government;

"b. The stimulation of the members in fields of literature and the social sciences;

"c. The creation of a spirit of fellowship through opportunities afforded for mutual acquaintance, and

"d. The fostering of closer contact betwen the faculty and the student body."

When it is borne in mind that during the last school year (1929-1930), there were over 180 students enrolled, coming from almost every State of the Union as well as from foreign countries like Palestine, China, Porto Rico, Egypt, Germany, the Philippine Islands and others, the significance of such an organization is made more apparent. The present school year has a larger enrollment—Americans and foreigners alike—and it is believed that the enrollment will increase greatly every year.

JUNIOR POST AND KNIGHTHOOD OF YOUTH

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, APRIL 26, 1931.

When Scot and Pole Measure Strength

Cameron Morrison, poised and serene when undisturbed by arguments against the eighteenth amendment, and as he looks when prepared to defend it with the bellicose vigor of his Scotch forbears. John J. Raskob, suave and unperturbed by the Southern senator's war on his wet plank plan and, in the circle, as he looks at the "take it or leave it" stage of the argument.

Widely Different in Their Philosophy of Life, Yet Alike in Their Early Struggles, Senator Cameron Morrison and John J. Raskob Find Themselves in a Party Headed Both Ways.

By David Rankin Barbee.

THERE was a time, not so very long ago, when a young Pole, born in Lockport, N. Y., gave up driving a street car and decided to become a financier. The first step in this career was to go to night school and learn shorthand and typewriting. His teacher set him the familiar copy which you find framed in every secretarial school:

"Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party."

Years and years have gone by and that young secretary, now become one of the richest financiers in America and one of the most powerful figures in our industrial and political life, has not forgotten his early lessons, for he has, so to speak, framed that old motto and hung it up in the camps of 48 States in this happy and harmonious Union of ours. It still reads:

"Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party."

About the time young Johnny Raskob tired of driving a mule hitched to the front end of a trolley car—now was it a mule? Well no matter mule or motor, it made the car go—down in North Carolina a young yokel told his old Scotch father: "Faither, I hae a higher ambeeshun than pl'ughing the old mule in the furrow. I maun gang to college."

So the old Scotch farmer, pleased with his ambitious son, and prophesying, in his own mind, that one day he would be Governor of the State, and maybe succeed Andrew Jackson and Jimmie Polk and Andy Johnson, all Tarheels, in the White House, mortgaged the old yellow mule and sent his boy off to college.

When a Scotchman buys an education, he always gets it and uses it. He does not care very much for mottoes, but he does care a lot for his rights. Those who grow up in the Piedmont of North Carolina are born talking and with doubled up fists. That is their tradition. They were the first on this continent to throw off the bridle of King George; they were the first to declare their independence; they were the first to set up an independent government; and with this honorable record back of them, though Presbyterians to the core, they give every child a baptismal name, the same as the Catholics, and that name is spelled Independent.

A belligerent and a bellicose race are those Scotch Tarheels. Slow to anger, ready of speech, spoiling for a fight, and, once in, they never give up.

Years and years went by in the life of this young Scotch yokel. He got his education, and then his law license, and then he went to the county seat and "hung out his shingle." Cases came his way, he made money, he saved it, he paid off the mortgage on the old yellow mule, he educated his brothers and sisters, he married himself a wife, and then he moved to the city where the big money was.

As the years kept streaming by he began to figure in politics, first in the local affairs of his county, then in the legislature, and finally he had reached the stature of the men from whom governors are chosen. Long before prohibition became a national matter he was the leading advocate of it in his community and then in his State. His share was not small in making North Carolina so dry that her home brew, distilled from corn that grows in the Land of the Sky, became the best known "licker" in the world. For that they made him governor. Thus far had the prophecy of his old father come true.

For one hundred and fifty years North Carolina had been the hermit State of America, but when Cameron Morrison became governor the gates were opened, the shades were thrown up, and all eyes were opened, not only of America but of the Tarheels themselves. They did not know their State was the richest in the South; they did not know it was, with one exception, the most beautiful place on the globe they did not know that "there was gold in them thar hills;" and they did not know that all the world would be making a beaten track to see their mousetrap. But Cameron Morrison knew that.

To some men there comes a vision of the future. I think Johnny Raskob had that sort of vision. He craved great wealth for the power it brings. I think Cameron Morrison had a similar vision. He craved great office for the opportunity it brings.

When he was inducted into the governorship, the knowing Tarheels said of him:

"Cam's a good fellow lots of hot air, but thrifty; he'll be sitting tight on the money. Nobuddy will steal any of it while Cam is guv'ner."

And they nudged each other and winked slyly when they said it. But little did they know Cam.

He did a lot of talking, to be sure. He said: "Come on, boys, and let's build some roads so we can visit from county seat to county seat; and so you wool-hat fellers can come down to Raleigh and watch the wheels run and when you get tired of that you can run over to Chapel Hill and see how Arch Henderson and Branson and Chase an 'them air fellers' put the eddication into our boys; and——"

Before the boys knew it Cam was spending $200,000,000 for good roads, and folks from all over America and Canada, who had never heard of North Carolina before, were motoring through the State on their way to the Magnolia Gardens in Charleston, or to Florida to pick strawberries at Christmas.

Then Cam did some more talking. He said: "Come on, boys, and let's build some fine brick schoolhouses for our country boys and girls to get their eddication in."

And before they knew it Cam had pried the lid of the strong box up a little higher and dragged out some fifty millions for country schools.

Cam kept on talking while this job was being done. He said: "Come on, boys, let's build a university at Chapel Hill. That old pile of ruins has been there since George Washington surrendered at Yorktown—(Cam never was very good on history)—and what we need is some fine new buildings as good as 'them air' palaces we have built for the country boys and girls."

And that is how the great new plant sprang up at the State University.

From the example and inspiration of this square-headed, hard-hitting, loquacious, argufying Scotchman there came almost an orgy of spending in North Carolina, which is something of a burden on the taxpayers now in these stingy times, but in years to come it will bear fruit and produce dividends.

James B. Duke, who lived in Cam's town of Charlotte, caught something of Cam's vision, and he, too, set to building a great university to perpetuate the Duke name, and his foundation is building country churches to match Cam's country schools, and country hospitals for every county in the State, and providing pensions for wornout preachers that will let them retire in comfort and dignity.

They cussed Cam while he was governor and when his time was up and the governorship went to eastern Carolina, and another Scotchman, a banker once well known in Washington, Wilton McLean, came to power, the cussing went on, now between Cam and Wilton, with Cam having the biggest voice and making the most noise. McLean is said to have in the bank the first dime he ever earned. These Scotch are thrifty. Wilton said Cam was a spendthrift, and Cam said he didn't steal it, he didn't spend a nickel of it on himself or to improve his own property, and that every dollar of it had been honestly spent. This was a fact. Three hundred million dollars, or some such sum, spent on public contracts and not one dime of graft.

Three years ago nobody in Washington had ever heard of Raskob. Six months ago nobody in Washington had ever heard of Cam Morrison. Today everybody in America is talking about the pair of them, the Pole and the Scot who are quarreling over "licker," one quoting his schoolboy motto and the other quoting Scripture.

Let those who are inclined to snicker at Cam Morrison pay due attention to his deeds, as I have but imperfectly outlined them. Let those who think Johnny Raskob is not one of the wisest and smoothest political leaders since Martin Van Buren, pay heed to what he has done in three short years of leadership.

Cam Morrison came to the Senate when Senator Overman died, unheralded and unknown. The "licker" issue was just as live when he got here as it is now. It has never been dead; it only slept for awhile, catnaps. In the Senate were a number of veteran Democratic senators from the South and elsewhere, all dry as powder horns, all as full of wind as Cam, and every one as loquacious as Cam when he has his belly full of mustard greens, cornbread and buttermilk. Yet Cam, violating all precedent, stepped to the platform and knocked the chip off of Johnny Raskob's shoulder, and spit on both hands.

In the entire history of the United States Senate there has been nothing like that. Cam has made Joe Robinson's presidential aspirations look like boarding-house hash. He has made every one of the veterans in the Senate take a back seat. He has jockeyed himself into the position of leadership in the South on this one wet-and-dry issue, and his is the voice that now touches the Southern heart like the mocking bird's solo on a moonlight night making love to the magnolia blossoms.

If you ask the reason for this, here it is: Cam is in dead earnest; he is sincere; he drinks dry, he votes dry, and he yells dry. Not so much can be said for all his dry confreres.

Johnny Raskob is a foeman worthy of Cam's trenchant blade, and of any man's steel, for that matter. He is no bawler like Cam. But he has a shrewd mind, he is a marvelous organizer, and he can stand fire. You can't rush Johnny Raskob. He must be a wonderful poker player; he plays 'em close to his shirt bosom.

From the time he became a trained secretary until now, Raskob resided in Delaware, where the Du Ponts live, and where he made his great fortune. Last fall he put all of his money on one of the Bayards, a wet Democrat, and member of the most distinguished family in the State, against a dry Republican, and Bayard lost. That was a crushing blow; it would have crushed most any political leader. When you can't carry your own State, you are not rated very high.

Knowing that the next political battle in the Democratic party, and in the nation, for that matter, will be the South, Johnny Raskob concealed his chagrin over losing this fight to a dry Republican, and changed his citizenship to Maryland, just across the border-line from where he has been voting for years. Now he belongs, the same as Cam, and Joe Robinson, and Carter Glass, and Walter George, and Pat Harrison, and Tom Connally, and ham-and-egs, and "Dixie" and "Old Black Joe."

His far-sighted planning for this battle was first evidenced by getting the bristling, bustling, oratorical, showy, horsey Mr. Shouse from Kentucky and Kansas—Jouett can play 'em both ways from the middle—as office manager, with the title of chairman of the executive committee. Mr. Shouse has done his job well. He drafted young Mr. Michaelson, from Idaho or Utah, for the pestiferous job of stirring up the angels, and after a conference with Johnny Raskob, he said to young Mr. Michaelson:

"Charley, Al Smith and John Raskob went to Biloxi and played golf with Pat Harrison in Jefferson Davis' back yard, and they shook hands and had a toddy or two with the old Confederates at Beauvoir. That made 'em both amen corner Southerners. Can't you get baptized in some such way?"

And young Mr. Michaelson thought for two days and phoned a bit and went duck hunting on the Edisto with Barney Baruch, and ate "Hopping John" and "shrimp pie" in one of Charleston's quaint old colonial restaurants, and rode over to Fort Sumter and cussed Abe Lincoln out loud, so he became as thoroughly a South Carolinian as Percy Whaley or Joseph Hergersheimer or Edna Ferber or Walter Lippmann, every one of whom now claims descent from our oldest Huguenot families.

If history does repeat itself, the Democrats have turned the clock back to 1860 and are about to walk into another spider's nest. In that fabled year the fight was made in the South and for the South's vote. There were thirteen candidates for the Presidency, twelve from the South and Stephen A. Douglas, who had married two wives from the South, and owned a plantation in North Carolina and another in Mississippi and had "a passel of niggers."

A native of Georgia, who was educated in New York, grew to manhood in South Carolina, where he edited a Union newspaper and made Union speeches, and spent his mature years in Alabama, a hardheaded, two-fisted, loquacious man named William L. Yancey, upset the applecart of Senator Douglas; more's the pity. Johnny Raskob probably knows that story, and that is why he moves so cautiously and is making his appeal to the ancient doctrine of States rights in his controversy with Cam and the Southern drys. The South still clings to that doctrine and in the 1928 election did not fail to exercise it, to the sorrow of Al Smith and Mr. Raskob. But how potent is it when the issue is wet and dry?

Both the Pole and the Scot must have done some figuring on this problem, for Mr. Raskob talks confidently of 12 States having no right to block 36. Let us figure them. There are fifteen States in the South. By the widest stretch of imagination only Maryland, Missouri and Louisiana could be classified as wet. The issue has never been tested in Maryland, and Louisiana, with Gov. Long leading the drys, though personally very wet, could hardly be classed as a wet State. Senator Ransdell, personally dry and very religious, went down in defeat with the support of the wet press of Louisiana before the wet Mr. Long supported by the dry contingent. I have talked to well-informed Democrats of Maryland who express doubt if their State is wet. Has it not now a dry Republican and a wet Democratic senator?

Should Cam Morrison be able to consolidate the dry contingent under his leadership—and he is the type of man who appeals to the imagination of the South, the Jackson-Polk-Johnson type of Scotch-Irish, grim, fierce, unhumorous, lacking wit, determined, serious, courageous—he can do what no Southern Democrat has been able to do in many years, unite the States of the South, twelve of them at least, maybe thirteen, under his leadership, and block any plans of a wet ticket or a wet platform.

The Democratic party is a poor man's party. If it is not that in the South, it is nothing, for there are not many rich men in that region. It has stood for the underdog in most of its party battles. Right now it is the plaything of the very rich, for Cam Morrison, by marrying the widow of a North Carolina tobacco baron, came into great wealth himself. It must be said for Cam, however, that he has never lost touch with the plain people, and in his library in his great mansion on his wonderful estate near Charlotte he has an oil painting, so I have been told, of that old yellow mule, or of one of his grandchildren, hanging where Cam is always reminded of the debt he owes it. I doubt if Johnny Raskob has a picture of his old street car mule lying about his estate on the Eastern Shore.

Which reminds me of a story an Irish priest once told me, a dear friend of bygone days. There was in our town an Irishman who had risen from ditchdigging to contracting and then to a seat on the board of the leading bank. When he died, he left a large estate, a widow and a daughter.

The widow rose socially with the riches her man accumulated until finally she became very aristocratic and withered any one who "remembered when Pat was a day laborer."

On the day of the funeral she had her daughter take her into the parlor to see the flowers. The lass read the cards and the dear old lady made some appropriate and tearful comment, particularly on those which came from the socially prominent. As they made the rounds she spied in one corner near the coffin a design that represented a broken column, with an anchor leaning gracefully against it, all wrought out in roses a favorite Victorian design.

Instantly she dried her tears; her form stiffened; resentment bristled from every pore in her body; her voice lost its soft and melancholy tones and became hard and resonant, as she exclaimed:

"Mary, who sent thot pick?"

That's what Johnny Raskob may be asking if Cam Morrison sends him any flowers.

Lord, let me do the worrying,
On me let all the burdens fall.
Let those around me laugh and sing
And never guess my care at all.
So long as they can happy be
And still have heart for mirth and song
Let all the troubles fall on me,
But keep me well and keep me strong.

Lord, if I falter at the door
Remind me that the day is done.
My children romping on the floor
Know naught of struggles lost or won.
Grant me the courage to go in
As though I had no pain to bear
And hide behind a father's grin
All dismal signs of doubt and care.

Lord, let me carry on alone!
To them my griefs I would not tell
Nor make my heavy burdens known.
I'd have them think that all is well.
They are so young and still so small;
Care does not yet to them belong.
On me let all the troubles fall.
My only prayer is: "Keep me strong!"

AN ART THAT IS REALLY AMERICAN

By Oliver La Farge.

WITH critics, artists and the public alike constantly regretting our lack of an art independent of Europe, or at least an art not merely imitative of what is going on in the Old World, it is strange that so little attention has been paid to an artistic movement devoid of any direct European influence, alive, vigorous and very modern, going on under our noses.

One will find more recognition in France and Germany than here of the one remarkable contribution that this country is making in the pure and applied plastic arts, which has long ago solved in unusual ways many of the problems with which the modernist is contending.

The abstraction of the object represented into a form that satisfactorily presents its essence; the projection into a picture not only of the thing seen, but of the artist's subjective response to it; the complete union of material and technique, are only a few of the achievements of the American Indian. Yet until now it has been abroad, and particularly in Germany, that his validity has been recognized, while here we still think in terms of "curios," of dolls and sweet-grass baskets and silly little bows and arrows for children.

The so-called savage whom the first white man found here was already well advanced on the road of artistic sophistication. Living in the stone age, with miserable tools and handicapped by a constant, arduous struggle to get enough to eat, he still had the urge and the energy to adorn practically everything he used. Long centuries of applying design, of working out decorations innately suitable to the uses of the tool or garment decorated, and of expressing religious and mythical conceptions through these designs, gave him a priceless schooling. Simplicity, balance, rhythm, abstraction and discipline of line and color were the result.

Times changed, on the whole contact with white men has made the struggle for survival less fierce. Money and sale of manufactures brought a new help to the artist. On the other hand, many tribes were wiped out and others live under such conditions of hopelessness and discouragement that one would expect them to give up any attempt of representing beauty. Yet, among the few 100,000 Indians who still remain to some degree Indian in character, there has continued a constant artistic growth in response to new conditions.

Some, like the group of Kiowa artists so much praised in Paris, or the Hopi and Pueblo Indian painters, have turned to pictures. The idea of a picture, as such, is borrowed from the white man, the possibility of earning a living by painting is due to contact with him. But the technique and psychology is entirely Indian, and the extraordinary thing about the Indian is that, while remaining entirely intelligible, he is amazingly modern. His pictures are patterns that cause real delight. Like a modernist picture of a great city in which the buildings slant this way and that, and the noise and confusion, the life within, are expressed by various interwoven fragments of drawing, bits of newspaper, planes of light and so on, his pictures symbolize and adjust his feeling about the subject, but do so in a manner devoid of the effort or the sense of strain characteristic of the work of white men.

He does it naturally because he sees it that way and because his long ancestral training in abstract design has provided him with the technique. From the realistic portraits of individuals to the purely conventional pottery designs of such artists as Nampeyo, the grand old woman of Hano, in Arizona, or Maria and Tonita Pena on the Rio Grande, is an unbroken transition. Their designs are all representative, and all have emotional content. Without stepping outside the constraints proper to applied decoration, they are dynamic, they express thought. Behind them lie cycle after cycle of evolution and countless forgotten geniuses of the past.

From tribe to tribe the variation is enormous, while the common genius remains remarkably the same. It is amusing to notice how many enthusiasts for modern decoration, seeing a really fine Navajo blanket in a modernistic room will believe it to be an expensive French product. To one familiar with the beadwork of the Plains Indians, it is likewise amusing to see their ideas unconsciously imitated again and again in materials for women's clothes.

The whole group of Indian arts and crafts is in a constant state of growth, sophisticated, yet virile. Why, then, do we white Americans who should be proud of it ignore it? Why, until now, have only scientific or ethnological museums thought of exhibiting this work? When the white man first came to these shores this art was alien to him. Then, as we began to look at an Indian in some other way than over the front sights of a rifle, we were artistically unprepared to appreciate his work. Charmed now and again by a bit of good design or the unvarying finesse of the workmanship, or some gay color, we took the stuff as curios or "souvenirs." Stone age savages, we felt sure, were not to be taken seriously as artists. How unlike the works of Mr. Currier and Mr. Ives! In the schools we established for the Indians we did our best to educate them out of their crude arts, or to encourage only the rapid production of "odd" souvenirs—and in many cases we succeeded lamentably well.

Souvenirs, to sell well, must be cheap. To be cheap, they must be made in quantity, of poor materials. The Indian works slowly in the best materials he can get. A good Navajo jeweler wants pure, massive silver and heavy hand-ground turquoise. The best weavers dye their wool with vege-

Where the United States Began

Mount Vernon, When Washington Was Master There, Contained in Embryo Many of the Possibilities Which Have Come to Full Flower in This Year of Grace 1931.

By Rufus Dart 2d.

THOUGH 1932, the year of the 200th anniversary of George Washington's birth, is still some distance away, the celebration of that event in which the nation will be asked and encouraged to join, begins to be rumor already. This is fitting enough, for the commemoration should match the event, and this is one whose importance, at least to Americans, it would be hard to exaggerate. The birth of Washington meant the birth of America. Certainly in the light of the record it would be hard to think of the country without him. Even though adversity be still upon us next year, it need hardly stay us, for the celebration, it appears, is to spring chiefly from the spirit, and least of all from the purse. Indeed some lingering adversity might even help us to bridge the two-century gap between ourselves and Washington, for over long stretches of his life he also knew adversity, and plenty of it.

We shall need, in fact, all the humility we can summon. In a way we can not celebrate Washington next year without celebrating ourselves. It will be hard to honor the Father of his Country without thought of what the child has become. And can any two-century period in history throw out a string of contrasts more striking and dramatic? Across these contrasts we can not think back to Washington's day without a pang of regret and a fruitless wish that he might be here to witness the riches and taste the life we have made from his comparatively pinched beginnings.

These contrasts, even in manners, between our day and his, begin at Mount Vernon itself, where hurrying visitors must sometimes be asked to remove their hats in a house once the soul of the social graces. Yet one hurries to add that with one other exception manners are the only thing established by Washington that we have not improved upon. The other exception is farming. In its day Mount Vernon was the United States in little, a microcosm, a self-sustaining state in itself. Roaming over the place, the visitor sees the carpenter shop, the weaving house, the hothouse and the kitchen garden. All the household needs at least were met on the place. In all the United States, farming remains the one-man job that it was when Washington farmed. Big business has taken over everything else. And there the contrasts begin.

In the one industry that remains for the most part unchanged since his day, the contrast is pretty much in Washington's favor. He seemed to think that the thing to do with a farm is to farm it. Which is precisely what he did, from the day he settled at Mount Vernon with his wife Martha. He was then 23, and might have been forgiven if he exhibited still the love of play that belong to youth. He gave us excuse for no such indulgence. At the end of each day he set down in journal or diary least of all what he thought and most of all what he did. And it was a plenty.

Day after day he begins the entry, "Rid to Doeg Run;" "Rid to Muddy Hole plantation!" "Surveyed my plantation in the Neck." He everlastingly was on the move, not in plowing or planting or harvesting time alone, but all through the year. His eyes moved when his body was stationary, for his diaries are loaded with comment on the look of his lands and on what they would yield next year.

He tried new things whenever the old gave him time to think of them. Suspicious of his duck-bill plow, he turned to a two-eye affair—whatever it was. He ordered two plows from Holland. Finally he invented a plow of his own—a combined plow, harrow and drill; the drill a barrel with holes in the bottom to let the grain drip as wanted. For days he experimented with this jigger before he got it under control. He found it dripped the fastest when it was nearest empty. When it was full, the weight of the grain, he observed, seemed to retard the flow of seed at the bottom. Once adjusted to suit him, he records time again, with the most patent satisfaction, the satisfactory number of acres covered by "my drill plow."

Because he bred mules he has been taken as the originator of the mule in America—even as the inventor of the mule. It happens that the mule was known to the Mysians, a very long time before Christ. The Greeks and the Romans bred mules. Long before Washington's day Spain was famous for the best of mules then known—high, wide and handsome mules, tall and fleet and strong. From Spain Washington got the ass he needed for sire. Nature attended to the rest of the mule. But the point is, Washington experimented with this new motive power and found it good.

He forever sought new fruits for his garden. The diaries bear witness to the fact that his very pastimes lay in the field of making his farm produce forever more and more. "Sowed choice Lucerne and rye grass;" "grafted Bullock Heart cherries;" "planted 55 cuttings of Madeira grapes;" "planted Spanish pines"—these were his diversions. He sought unusual trees for the grounds about his house, for Farmer Washington was also a landscape architect.

At the foot of his estate the Potomac tempted him with its fish. Evidently his riparian rights were never in dispute, and he fished the river for profit to his heart's content. And for his time the profits were not so small. Flood tide, he observed, was the best for hauling in herring, and his catches brought him as much as 40 pounds at a crack.

He mixed varieties of compost with his own hands, and carefully planted laboratory seeds of wheat and barley, and timed their growths for comparison. He knew what it was, too, for the breaks to be against him. His experiments often flopped, his crops failed him, his hands disappointed him in skill and perseverance. Yet in all his pages of journal—or diary-posting there is not a hint that he drove his people—certainly not as he drove himself. Once in awhile the diary carries a line of sarcasm that may have been report of the spoken word, but even the lazy overseer whom Washington found actually at work, with the diaried comment "most astonishing," can hardly have wilted if that observation was spoken as well as written.

The same bad breaks and the same sardonic comment stand written against Washington's peers, as well as against his hirelings. He raised wheat, barley, oats, and yet records: "Bought 150 bushels of oats—damaged." He contracted with one French for delivery of seventeen hogs. By the date of delivery the price of hogs had risen, a fact which French thought to turn to his advantage. It enraged Washington. He raised hundreds of hogs himself, and constantly bought pork on the hoof. Out of a delivery of nine pigs one day, he records one as lost on the way, "as the others might as well have been for their goodness." Hundreds of cows dotted his pastures, and at times he was desperate for butter.

But the point is that where Farmer George Washington of 1760, and Farmer George Washington Brown of 1931 differ, it is in the everlasting energy and attention of the leading farmer of the older day.

He yearned for land, more land, and ever more land. Draining the Dismal Swamp became one of his early hobbies—not as an engineering or reclamation feat, but because that swamp land was enormously capable of turning out crops. He and his brother-in-law, Fielding Lewis, became members of "The Adventurers' Co," formed under charter of the Virginia Assembly to buy up land in the swamp. The company appropriated £600 to start work, and eventually acquired 40,000 acres. Washington's own share in these holdings he appraised at £5,000, a rather smart sum for his day, and evidently something of a speculation, for nothing much appears to have happened in development of lands that remained Dismal for reasons other than physical appearance. But it shows Farmer Washington as forever reaching out to try the new and put it to work, and giving up prospects when they proved not to work. Is this a tip to Former G. W. Brown of today?

Off his own farm, the contrasts between this and the Washington era begin their run against him. The minute he rode from his lands he stepped into matters beyond his control and beyond even his powerful energies. That is, he got on a public road, and the trough through the swamps of Occoquan from Alexandria to Fredericksburg was then and remained until recently a wallow and a horror. Rather than traverse it, Washington, on his visits to Fredericksburg and Williamsburg—and he went to each place with almost the freedom and frequency of a modern motorist—ferried across the Potomac to the Maryland side below his property and referried the stream in nearing his destination. Today the contrast, in Route No. 1; very properly numbered in honor of the first real highway driven by the colonists, finally, from Boston as far as Savannah, through the heart of what was then the United States. Over its 1,800 miles of length, stages made as high as 53 miles a day. Today the motorist makes that distance in 60 minutes—or is vastly disappointed in his car. On a short stretch of this highway, as it was in his time, Washington lost a pig and thought nothing of it. If the modern motorist loses a minute, in the same distance, he feels that civilization has failed him.

That trunk-line road from Boston to Savannah, the National Pike from Baltimore to Cumberland, and the Old Lancaster road, the first paved road in the United States, were long the backbone of such transportation as then existed. This year the country counts more than three million miles of road, 662,000 and more miles of it first-class paving that may last as long as the roads of Rome. That is one contrast and note that the word is contrast, not improvement. This paper is meant to stick to fact and not to philosophy.

On the Washington estate shoes were made by hand, and a pair at a time. In the factory of 1931, it takes 150 machines to make a pair of shoes, but they make thousands of shoes a day, millions of shoes a year.

Cloth was woven in one of the little houses off the Washington's front yard—a few yards at a time, at a single loom. In the woolen or cotton mill of 1931 a single worker will handle 36 power looms. At least that was the figure of yesterday. They increase productivity so fast that the statistician can not keep up with them.

Washington got interested in a possible iron works in the Shenandoah Valley. The water power was there, he knew; and he thought there was iron in the hills. He got to Pittsburgh, too. What it is now every one knows; then there was not a rumor as to what a capital of steel it was to become. Nothing ever came of the iron works in the Shenandoah.

To trace the other hand industries of Washington's estate and of Washington's time into their present bulk as big business would be but a wearisome round

Most of us think of Mount Vernon as a place of flowers, trees in full leaf and meadows billowing away in green, but it often looked like this when Washington began his rounds of the plantation's wide acres of a winter morning.

In Washington's day the roads around Mount Vernon were so bad that he ferried across from this point to the Maryland shore, where the going was better.

The above portrait of Washington by Charles Wilson Peale shows the master of Mount Vernon as he looked when he farmed the acres there except, of course, that he did not do his farming in the uniform of a continental colonel in which he posed for his portrait.

Let's Follow the Conestoga Wagon

Since the Days When the Canvas Tops Went Creaking Westward We Americans Have Been Addicted to Wheels and the Motor Tourist Follows the Pioneer.

By William Ullman.

JOIN the army of motor tourists and see the world—for virtually nothing. That might well be the slogan behind the nation's greatest summer pastime. Among its other virtues as a slogan is that it is true. Its truth is ascertainable in two ways. One is to sit back and notice that everyone seems to be touring. Obviously this could not be so unless the cost were low enough to put it within reach of millions.

The second way is both more exact and more emphatic. It involves sitting down with hotel, restaurant, touring camp and lodging house rate cards and menus and putting into practical use the mathematics that came so slowly and went so fast in youth. The first effect of this process is so startling as to make one mistrust the figures. After checking has affirmed their accuracy, however, these significant results concerning some typical two-weeks' tours averaging 200 miles a day still will be standing:

That two persons traveling in a small car can have a motor vacation of the above general specifications at a daily cost of $3.70 each.

That the same two persons in a larger car and traveling on a more de luxe scale need only $7 each for essentials each day.

That for $9.50 a day, apiece, two persons can travel in a motor car in what amounts to a grand manner insofar as the fundamentals of cost—transportation, food and shelter—are concerned.

There is range enough in the prices of the various ingredients of these typical tours to permit the prospective traveler to compute one of almost any cost above the minimum of $3.70 a day. That tour is based upon consideration of the least expensive means of assuring the absolute essentials.

By way of indicating that the figures for these various typical tours came from rate cards instead of out of a hat, let us look at those comprising the average daily cost of the first one mentioned. It must be remembered, of course, that they deal only with essentials. The first item of cost is that of transportation. It is figured on a small car, one that will average 18 miles to the gallon of gasoline. At 20 cents a gallon, taken as an average price, the fuel cost for each 100 miles will be $1.10. The average car, at touring speeds especially, probably will consume a quart of oil every 100 miles. That will run the operating cost for such distance to $1.35. If 200 miles a day is covered, which it can be easily, the operation of the car will set the two travelers back $2.70, or $1.35 each.

No allowance, it will be noted, is made for depreciation or maintenance. That is because the first goes on constantly regardless of how the car is used and with regard to the second, there is no reason why it should be greater on the touring trip than at home. The latter, of course, presumes the car to be in good condition.

Now, as to the other items of this journey's cost. Beyond the expense of the car, the other essentials are food and shelter. The allowance made for these may seem small, but actual investigation reveals that it is ample. With so many special services developed for motor travelers and on such a scale that competition between them is of the keenest, costs are surprisingly low.

Tourist camps, lodging houses, restaurants and even some hotels offer wholesome, nourishing club breakfasts as low as 35 cents. Fifty-cent plate luncheons in tea rooms, inns, restaurants, cafeterias, hotel grills or coffee shops, and in boarding houses will take care of the midday food requirements of the two tourists trying to keep expenses at a minimum. Surprisingly good plate dinners can be had as low as 75 cents.

If the traveler is willing to confine himself to these, and they will meet his requirements, allowance of $1.60 per day per person will cover the 3 meals.

As to shelter, the low cost of this tour dictates that it shall be sought at tourist camps or private homes along the highway. Careful selection at either of these will provide the vacationists with cleanliness, comfort and quiet. It is possible to get rooms as low as $1 per night at such places, but for $1.50, the amount here allowed, one is assured of better facilities in the usual case.

Thus the essential items of this trip with their costs to the individual are: Transportation, $1.35; meals, $1.60, and shelter, 75 cents. Their total is $3.70. If four persons are taken on such a trip, the transportation cost again is halved for the individual making it approxmiately 68 cents each and reducing the average daily cost to $3.

However, for two persons alone, the two weeks' trip even if it covered as much as 2,800 miles or 200 miles a day, would cost each person only $51.80 for essentials.

The item that contributes chiefly to the higher cost of the second tour is shelter, although allowance also is made for more expensive meals and for a medium-size car rather than a small one. Here, it is assumed that the travelers will want to stop at a hotel in preference to the tourist camp or the lodging house.

The desire for a double room with bath in a substantial hotel can be satisfied for $6 a day, or $3 for each person. The larger car will use no more oil, but gasoline consumption will be greater. Allowing for a mileage performance of 15 to the gallon, fuel cost per 100 miles will be $1.32. With a quart of oil, the total cost of the car's 100-mile diet will be $1.57.

Larger meal allowances are made to the extent of increasing the 35-cent breakfast to one costing 50 cents. Instead of a 50-cent luncheon, these travelers can afford one of the many nourishing plates costing 65 cents and, as a substitute for the 75-cent dinner of the least expensive trip, they may use their $7 "essentials allowance" to get a $1.25 meal.

If the fundamental costs of this trip are thus budgeted, they will be, for the individual on the basis of 200 miles a day: Transportation, $1.57; room, $3; meals, $2.40. Total, $6.97.

For the third typical tour, the one done in the grand manner, all items again are increased. This is a tour that might be taken by the couple which owns a large, luxurious car, one that will give but 10 miles to the gallon in contrast with the 18 and 15 mile yields of the cars that might be used on the other typical trips.

The operating cost of such cars per 100 miles, again ignoring depreciation and maintenance, will be $2.25 for gasoline and oil. This pair of travelers is assumed to desire something approaching the most substantial in hotel facilities, yet by doubling up, they need pay no more than $8 for an excellent room, or $4 apiece.

A 75-cent breakfast, $1 luncheon and a dinner costing $1.50 will bring the total cost of meals to $3.25 a day, which, with $4 each for rooms and $2.25 each for gasoline and oil will make the daily cost to the individual $9.50 for essentials. The cost of a two weeks' vacation conducted on such a daily scale would be $133 to each of these more expensive, or expansive, travelers.

The quickest way of breaking down the average individual cost of any of these tours, or any other, is to include four persons instead of two. If they happen to be four adults, each sharing the transportation item, that saves the individual $9.45 for the two weeks of the first trip, $11 for the second, and $15.75 for the third.

The individual items covered by these three tour budgets can be juggled, of course, in any fashion the budgeteer chooses. And, when one person foots the bills, as when the whole family travels, there may be occasion for plenty of juggling.

For instance, the family of four with the luxury car can not change the transportation cost item, which is largely fixed by the size of the automobile, but it can reduce the total cost by adopting the meals or shelter budget of the middle-ground tour, or even those of the lowest cost trip mentioned.

Suppose such a vacation group is willing to utilize the wholesome fare and the clean, comfortable, if not luxurious, facilities of the tourist camp and lodging house. For four persons, one of whom pays all the bills, food would cost $6.40 daily, and shelter $3. With $4.50 for the car's operation cost, that will represent a daily outlay of $13.90.

Any number of other combinations are possible out of the various items set forth in these typical tours.

Each of the three budgeted motor vacations envisions a definite average daily mileage. While this is the case in a large number of vacation trips, in perhaps a larger number it is not. There are stops at resorts, with friends or relatives, for sightseeing, amusements and many other purposes. All of these modify the basic cost of the tour.

However, the figures dealing with the essentials are set forth in such detail that the prospective tourists can estimate with fair precision the essential cost of any particular type of trip they intend to take.

Motor touring costs are low for two main reasons. The first is that the actual outlay for transportation is small and becomes amazingly so if it happens to be divided among two or more persons.

The second reason is that touring is conducted on a quantity basis, a mass scale. Because it is, it has brought into being an immense number and variety of special services appealing for a share of the vast business created by motor travel. Among these agencies there is the keenest competition for the largest possible share of the potential tourist business in any area. It is competition based not alone on the character and quality of service offered, but upon price. That cuts the cost of the essentials in every single price class, save the very highest, the appeal of which is based primarily upon exclusiveness.

With regard to exclusiveness, the prospective motor traveler should remember that it applies only to a very limited degree. There is not a single spot on the map which he can not visit within the range of any of the three budgets mentioned in this article. That is because always side by side with the hotel catering to the $20 a day visitor, there are to be found lower priced hotels, boarding houses, tourist camps and other less expensive hospice. Perhaps the exclusive resort golf courses and tennis courts will be closed to tourists at such places, but the air, the hunting, the fishing, beach, boardwalk, mountain paths, scenery and other natural attractions are available for all to enjoy.

In all this two items have not been mentioned because rightly they can not be classified either as essentials or luxuries. They relate to tips and to storage for the car.

At the outside, tips for those services which seem to demand them should not be more than 10 per cent. That is all that is expected by hotel employes, while many of the restaurants, tea rooms, inns, lodging houses and tourist camps base their wage scales on the principle that no tips are to be accepted. It is at these latter, of course, that the majority of tourists stay.

Regarding garage storage for

Here are two modern day pioneers in a small Western town after 2,000 miles of motor travel and still 1,500 miles from home. The interesting point is that these travelers, the author and his wife, are dressed just as they would be for an afternoon's spin at home—and their clothes are not even wrinkled.

This old couple, drifting leisurely along, are reminiscent of the day when the westbound pilgrims traveled in a Conestoga wagon. They showed us how to cut below our budget, and it's great sport if you like the woods, streams and hills.

LOSE AT LOVE? TRY A HOBBY!

They Help Broken Hearts, Says Mentality Expert; Club Founder Claims They Foster Greater Educational Advances—Layman and Mental Expert Give Their Views, Not in Harmony.

By Marian Saul.

HAVE you a hobby?

"Great!" says Rose Martin, founder of the Hobby Club in New York, now boasting thousands of members, "Your tribe is increasing."

Have you a hobby?

"Watch out!" says Dr. George K. Pratt, eminent psychiatrist, "you may be misdirecting normal interests and desires. People too often ride hobby horses because a normal outlet in their lives has been thwarted or frustrated."

Have you a hobby?

"No better way to round out your life and supply an actual education stimulus that may have been lacking in early years," says Rose Martin.

Have you a hobby?

"Careful!" says Dr. Pratt. "Recognize it for what it is. There is great danger in going too far—in working up a mistaken feeling of accomplishment and superiority that the individual fails to find in actual life and work. Very often a person finds compensation in the hobby — compensation for lack of achievement in relations with the outside world."

Here are two views—one from the mental expert and one from the layman. Which is correct? Is the hobby a good thing? Should parents encourage their children to become interested in hobbies?

"By all means," says Rose Martin. "There is no doubt about the value of a hobby and more and more the people of this country are realizing just that. More and more parents are endeavoring to interest their youngsters in one definite activity that will make them more alive and alert to what's happenings in the world."

"I should say," remarked Dr. Pratt, "that the hobby should be encouraged only when the individual is living a perfectly normal life and makes the hobby an additional interest to an already well-rounded existence."

"A well-directed sublimation or diversion into other channels which the individual frankly recognizes as such is an excellent means of preserving mental health. But there is danger in becoming fanatical about it or in developing a fetish mechanism."

* * * *

A fetish mechanism? That, says the doctor, is what the former kaiser might have had when he collected about 2,000 pairs of old shoes belonging to famous people. You know the old story—he had the slippers of Voltaire, the great riding boots of Wallenstein, the bedroom slippers of the first Napoleon and others of notable individuals.

Remember the days when Jack the Ripper made a hobby of going about and snipping off locks of hair of people on the street and in the subways? The age of the poisoned pin when half-crazed individuals went around inoculating bystanders with a serum whose virulent nature made them faint and become oblivious to their surroundings?

Hobbies? you say, indignantly contrasting your small son's innocent collection of stamps to the actions of a menace to society. Those people weren't hobbyists. They were lunatics who had probably been frustrated in mother love or sex love. Their early environment was probably all wrong.

Ah, but what about the man who insists on talking about nothing but his collection of entomological or insect specimens? He grabs the unwary friend or visitor, and dragging him in his study displays his treasures with frenzied pride and joy. He's interested in very little but his hobby. He'll think nothing of spending time and money to acquire some little addition to his collection. He'll go miles out of his way to do so. Bugs?

There's always a question of whether our actions are normal or not. The line of demarcation is very slim.

But according to Dr. Pratt, you can't call a hobby normal unless the great majority of people have one. On the other hand, you can't call it abnormal because in many instances, perfectly normal people do have hobbies!

Most people when they take up hobbies, don't give a thought to the normalcy of their actions. Why should they? They become interested in certain things and they like to do them.

"Why, the response I've had has even amazed me," said Rose Martin, founder of the Hobby Club. "You know, I really started this club for children, but now it numbers members from 8 to 88. Old and young, they write in telling me of their various hobbies and of wanting to get in touch with others who follow the same line of interest."

Stamp collecting is one hobby which you can get "stuck" on.

Here's one letter from a grey-haired 80-year-old great-grandmother. She says:

"Now more than ever I have come to realize the importance of the hobby in the individual's life. I believe that every person should start a hobby in his early youth in order to have some definite intimate interest that will be part and parcel of his life no matter what happens to him or how old he grows. Take my case, for instance. I've had to work hard all my life. I married when I was quite young, had a large family which kept me plenty busy. Now I'm a great-grandmother with all the leisure in the world and what would I do without my hobby? I have a collection of all the little insignificant things that I, my brothers and sisters, my children, my grandchildren and my great-grandchildren would usually discard and throw away as useless. Thus, I have various trinkets from four generations and it is quite amusing and even educational to compare these and see the trend of the times from the child's angle. Whenever the children come to see me they always want Granny's scrap-book. It's such fun to leaf through the pages and see the little remembrances of days of the past."

Outside of the interest and zest that the hobby supplies to life, the trend nowadays is definitely educational, according to Rose Martin. She ought to know. She's in touch with hobbyists all over.

"You see," she said, "hobbies are of three kinds. Collecting things like stamps and coins; making things like bird houses and clay modeling; learning things like facts about astronomy or entomology. And the emphasis is placed upon the educational element.

"For instance, one member collects flags of different countries. On one side of the pages in his scrapbooks he pastes the flags; on the other side, the maps of the individual countries with bits of information written below about the history of the land, the outstanding people who have contributed to the country's welfare and made the flag symbolic of certain traits. In this way he learns about history, geography, society, all the while his interest is being kept at topnotch by his zest for collecting."

It isn't often that the usual run of people have the same interests that kings of foreign countries have. But the hobby world is one which knows no royalty. Here is the King of Siam, many miles away, collecting match boxes manufactured in different lands, while Peter Travers, 14-year-old Kansasite, does the very same thing. And probably gets more joy out of it because his attention isn't distracted by official and diplomatic affairs. Victor Emmanuel of Italy is noted for his enormous collection of coins, but in the Hobby Club so is Roger Downs, 23-year-old Chicago mechanic.

Hobbies of all sorts by people of all ages! Old-age ones like collecting stamps, postmarks, hooked rugs, batiks, patchwork quilts. Recent ones like collecting pewter porringers, woodcuts, line engravings, local family genealogies and early surveyors' maps. Women with families who have searched about everywhere for different recipes for making distinctive and tasty chocolate cakes, now exchange their findings through the Hobby Club with other women who are likewise interested.

One boy wrote in to say that his collection of fossils, started in childhood, has helped him enormously in the study of geology that he is now taking up in college. Another tells the Hobby Club that he started when young in his own group, made up of youngsters intensely interested in radio, to study radio apparatus, wave lengths, &c. Now the hobby has developed into a small corporation, which the members put on a business basis and which is paying well. All of those boys are making a life profession of a hobby whose interests had developed far beyond their childish expectations.

Sometimes very valuable additions are made to public collections and museums because the hobbyist has a nose for ferreting out pieces that had long been thought extinct. For instance, there's the story about the collector who for the small sum of $22.50 bought up a valuable Ming vase—a piece that had been missing for years. It is a rare specimen valued at thousands of dollars.

There is the case of the middle-aged woman who had been thwarted in the expression of her love and maternal urge. She made a hobby of breeding race horses, but she realized that she was sublimating her desires and therefore her actions were sane and normal, according to Dr. Pratt.

"Children do not, of course, sublimate when they take up a hobby," said Dr. Pratt. "They are usually motivated by a childhood fixation which arises from the old opposition angle—parents versus children. The youngsters are driven by an unconscious force to withhold something from the mother or father—something that they may identify with themselves alone and thereby show they aren't under complete dominance. But this is true only of the hoarding or collecting hobby.

"Hobbies like golf or tennis are for the most part beneficial," said Dr. Pratt. "They're based on the old axiom that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy. But even here, one may go too far with the hobby if he desires nothing more than to build up his body to become big and strong in order to compensate for the lack of average mentality or because—and this is usually the case—the individual has been thwarted in his sex life and wants compensation for his lack of virility.

"If the child is leading a perfectly normal life it is certainly all right for the parents to encourage him in taking up a hobby. But they should never force the child to become interested in the same hobby that they may be pursuing, for then they are trying to live the child's own life and withholding from him his independence and initiative.

"But," says Dr. Pratt, "grown-ups should be careful. If they realize how much their hobbies mean to them, how much of their energy they are expending upon them, well and good. As long as their eyes are open and they know enough not to let the hobby take an abnormal grip upon their lives, it is in all probability a good thing."

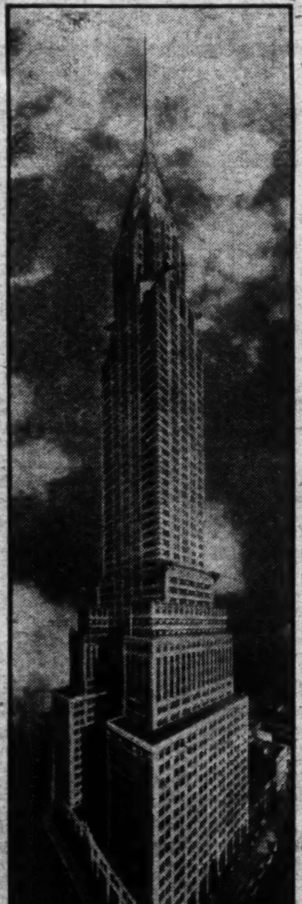
A PHOTOGRAPHIC FEAT



Hall Walton.

The Chrysler Building, 1,040 feet high.

FOR the first time in the history of photography, the principle so successfully used in aerial camera work of compositing into a single illustration a series of pictures covering one subject has been applied to a vertical object over 1,000 feet in height. Hal Walton, widely known New York photographer, has produced this unusual illustration of the 1,040 foot Chrysler Building at Lexington avenue and Forty-second street in New York Perspectives had to be scaled and rescaled and control points accurately established before the actual work of taking pictures could begin.

Inability to get far enough away from the Chrysler Building to obtain a single picture of the entire building front from sidewalk to spire made the question of correct perspective in the production of this work a very disconcerting factor. Structures of various heights surrounding the building stood in the way of securing one photograph that would show the elevation of the building, which is on Lexington avenue.

To make a series of pictures which when composited would bring out the natural perspective of a single picture taken from one point distant enough to include the entire building, it was necessary to establish two fixer controls or focal points, one at a ground point and the other at a point on the spire.

Definitely to locate the spire point of control, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. placed its blimp, the Mayflower, at the disposal of Mr. Walton and his associates. After a series of reconnoitering flights around the building the control point was established and the necessary photographs made from the blimp while poised in mid-air at various levels below the top of the spire of the building. The ground point of control was determined with much less difficulty and the numerous photos made from neighboring buildings at carefully calculated angles extended from the sidewalk to the lowest level of the blimp-made pictures.

After such a perfect first effort at pioneering a brand new style of photography doubtless there will be many occasions to use it as a means of obtaining heretofore impossible actual illustrations of many of the new skyscrapers which are too completely hidden by other buildings to be photographed by a single exposure.

Secrets of Hopi Dancers Died With High Priest

PHOENIX, Ariz., April 25 (U.P.).—Maybe rattlesnakes won't notice the difference, but other participants in the Hopi Indian snake dance will miss Harry Shu-pela, noted high priest, when the autumnal ceremony of the Walpai snake clan is held in August.

For 25 years Shu-pela directed the snake dances at Walpai, an isolated Hopi village on the high Mesa land of Northern Arizona. He died last spring and broke a traditional chain by failing to leave a successor.

Tribal tradition stipulates that the dance director's successor shall be his blood brother. Chief Harry had no brother and because of that fact many of the ritualistic secrets of the ceremony died with him.

The dance will be held as usual as sub-priests will carry on. But it will be different, tribesmen insist. Many of the special touches given the dance by Shu-pela came from knowledge possessed by no other man.

Through the summer rattlesnakes will be collected and in the fall, when rain is needed the ceremony will start. The dance, in reality, is a prayer for rain. The snakes serve as special messengers to the gods.

A thrilling climax to the dance is when Indian Braves whirl madly while a rattlesnake dangles from their mouths.

Although the desert rattlers are extremely poisonous, no one ever heard of a snake dance participant being bitten.

Shall Wives Be Permitted to Work?

THE vast majority of working wives and mothers, however, have little or no choice in the matter. They labor because they must.

It is better to keep the children warm and well fed, even though they have to shift for themselves outside of school hours or go to a day nursery, than it is for the mother to remain at home and let them either shiver or starve.

A woman needs love and marriage and children whether she must work or not. And these are not achieved so easily as in a time when a wife was an economic necessity.

When one group in society challenges a married woman's right to work regardless of her need it plants a fear of marriage in the minds of many girls still unwed.

More and more, young women are not wanted as homemakers, for the men who court them and fall in love with them can not afford to supply them with homes.

Less and less they are desired as childbearers. The hazards of industry, being what they are, young men are afraid of fatherhood.

By Edith Johnson.

WITH governors, lawmakers, employers and other groups fighting over the question as to whether wives and mothers should be allowed to work for wages, especially in a time of unemployment, it draws tears, if not blood.

Legislators are besieged by men and women out of jobs who declare with heat that there ought to be a law against it. Employers of married women whose husbands could support them at a pinch are charged with favoritism of a conspiracy to keep down wages. Never were the American people so excited over this problem, no nearer solution now than it was a year ago.

That a minority of married women work, not because they need the money, but because they have no taste for housekeeping and because they crave association with men other than their own husbands, business giving them that opportunity, is true.

That certain wives whose husbands could support them in comfort; work in order to buy luxuries such as jewelry, fine furniture, smart clothing and motor cars, is also true.

The vast majority of working wives and mothers, however, have little or no choice in the matter. They labor because they must. Before they went into industry they were not suffering from a sense of stagnation, or a feeling that they were social parasites, nor did they feel that they had a further duty to society. Hunger, cold, unpaid bills or the immediate prospects of such disasters forced them into industry.

Seven, eight or nine o'clock finds them in factory, store or office that they may help buy food and clothing for themselves and children or in order to pay for fuel and rent. Most of them are making the best of a more or less difficult situation, for they know that they are neglecting their homes, husbands and children, that after a long day's work they are not what they should be as mothers and wives. Choosing the lesser of two evils, it seems better to help keep the home intact by outside effort than to let it break up. It is better to keep the children warm and well fed even though they have to shift for themselves outside of school hours or go to a day nursery than it is for the mother to remain at home and let them either shiver or starve.

There is another side to this question, the biological, which is generally overlooked. A woman needs love and marriage and children whether she must work or not. And these are not achieved so easily as in a time when a wife was an economic necessity. Girls whose families make few social contacts must go out into the world if they are to meet eligible men. Again and again, business is made the perfectly legitimate disguise of the impulse to mate and—found a home, and the desire for economic independence is offered as the excuse.

But who would criticize or ridicule this wholly natural feminine impulse, this little scheme to acquire a mate and a home?

If it serves a good, biological purpose and if it contributes to the happiness of two persons, what is wrong about it?

Too often, perhaps, a young wife who worked before she married, grows very restive under the unaccustomed domestic regime. She can not settle down to it, or she has too much time on her hands until children come. Her husband may not be the dependable protector and provider she thought she was getting. Or, if she and her mate have acquired a whole bird's-nest of little children, the father's income may not measure up. Worse still, the wife may have cause to fear that he is going to desert her.

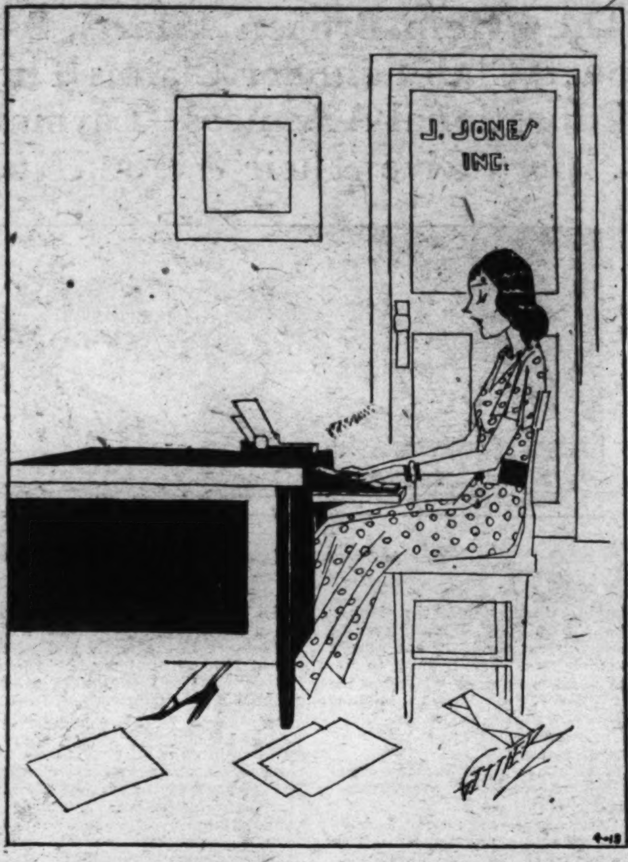
Would she not be a foolish woman if she did not take steps to secure a teaching position, get out her old short-hand book and brush up on stenography, revive her interest in interior decoration, or prepare to return to the factory or store?

When one group in society challenges a married woman's right to work regardless of her need, it plants a fear of marriage in the minds of many girls still unwed.

"I have a good job now," a candidate for marriage says to herself. "If I should marry and then if anything should go wrong so that I would have to go back to my job, I would probably have a hard time of it. Perhaps I had better stay on the safe side of a good living by remaining single, unsatisfactory as that is."

Before a governor asks a legislature to pass a law prohibiting work for all married women, or before legislators grant such a request, they would better consider all phases of this problem. Society, it is true, should encourage women with homes and families to devote themselves to their natural duties and mothers of young children should not go out to work except in emergency.

But before any group attempts to rule rigidly on this matter, it should face two questions: "Should the right to work deprive a woman of the right to love, or should the right to love rob her of the right to work?"



The vast majority of working wives and mothers, however, have little or no choice in the matter. They labor because they must.

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

Dear Miss Johnson: I am the father of three children, two girls and a boy. Left a widower a few years ago, I married a woman who seemed to love my children dearly. But it was not two months after our marriage until she told me that she would not tolerate one of them around the house. I am compelled to keep them away at school or in summer camps or with relatives. For no reason at all she has separated me from my children. I am broken-hearted over it. What should I do?

DISTRACTED FATHER.

Your duty, sir, is to your children. You had them before you took your second wife. In pretending to love them in order to induce you to marry her, she perpetrated an outrageous fraud upon you and them. If she can not be persuaded to really mother your children and welcome them to your home, your course is plain. Take them and let her go.

Should you, by neglecting your children and withholding your love from them, live to see them maladjusted or possibly delinquent, you would never forgive yourself. More than one man has been compelled to face this terrible alternative. If you possess reasonable courage and a proper sense of your paternal responsibility, you will act without delay.

Outdoor Living Room Wins Garden Contest Prize

THE charming outdoor living room created with plants and flowers by Mr. and Mrs. Gus Ehrenberg and family, South 1304 Cook street, Spokane, Wash., has won first prize in the national yard and garden contest.

The national winner was chosen from hundreds of beautiful gardens, each a first-prize winner in its own home town. Selection was made by photograph. All parts of the country were represented.

The Ehrenberg garden is striking proof that home grounds of surpassing beauty and charm can be developed on the average sized city place. The lot has but a 50-foot frontage.

In spite of its small area the Ehrenberg garden is a veritable fairyland of beautiful growing things. It is made colorful and interesting by almost every flower that blooms on the Pacific Coast. Perennial plants in exquisite variety, shrubs in healthy profusion, trim, stately evergreens, shade and orchard trees, fruiting and flowering vines and a velvety carpet of soft green turf are all features of this prize-winning yard.

The Ehrenberg place is maintained with the most extreme care. One of the reasons why this is so is because the two sons of the family, Elliott and Allen, 14 and 12 years old respectively, are enthusiastic garden helpers. These junior gardeners are also Boy Scouts, and they do their good turns daily in the yard, helping mother with her planting. They are healthy, stalwart lads, for they have been reared in the garden since infancy.

The father, a hotel man, prefers gardening to golf. He takes his "daily dozen" with the spade, right out in his own back yard. Were it not for the combined interest of every member of the family the Ehrenberg place would not be so well planted.

In spirit this prize winning garden is thoroughly modern. It was created in the first place because Mrs. Ehrenberg and her husband felt the need of beautiful home surroundings. Their comfortable and nicely furnished residence left them wanting more fresh air, greater freedom and more soul-satisfying beauty.

And so they set to work, planting some trees for shade. They placed shrubs in masses along the lot borders and about the house foundations. They made an excellent selection of evergreens, utilizing their year-round decorative effect to nice advantage. They did not stint in their planting of flowers, finding how well the perennial varieties served their purpose. They left a sufficient open lawn area which Master Allen finds sport in keeping neatly trimmed and edged. Appropriately furnished, these home grounds provided the Ehrenbergs with the desired outdoor room.

Into this garden are invited the intimate friends and guests of the Ehrenbergs. "The Lady of the Garden" frequently entertains there at tea. It is a charming setting for those social acts which families nowadays find indispensable to gracious living.

And for their own family life the Ehrenbergs use their beautifully planted yard daily during the outdoor season. The garden also furnishes on frequent occasions during the summer months a cool and refreshing luncheon table.

These beautiful home grounds were only selected as the representative of the Spokane community in the national yard and garden contest after they had won over several hundred other fine home gardens in the big local contest.

Wild Fowl Hunt Seasons Shortened

REGULATIONS increasing the protection of migratory birds, recommended recently by the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, will affect hunters in all parts of the United States. President Hoover on March 17 approved amendments to the migratory bird regulations adopted by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde to carry out the recommendations. The chief amendment that affects all parts of the country is one that shortens the open season fifteen days on ducks, geese (including brant), coots and jacksnipe. Hereafter, the seasons on these birds will start fifteen days later in the Northern parts of the country and close fifteen days earlier in the South. One effect of this amendment will be to prohibit the shooting of ducks, geese (including brant), coots, and jacksnipe in September in any State. The shortened seasons are prescribed because of the increased natural hazards the birds are experiencing in reduced breeding, feeding and resting areas, brought about in part as a result of unprecedented drought the last two seasons.

A further amendment of general effect regulates the hour at which hunters can begin shooting on the opening day of the season in each locality. Hereafter it will be illegal to hunt migratory game birds before noon on the opening day.

Other general provisions are concerned with decoys, baiting and bag limits. Not more than ten live goose decoys may hereafter be used or shot over at any one gunning stand, blind or floating device. Baiting for mourning doves with salt or with wheat or other grains will not be permitted, and it is illegal to take these birds on or over areas so baited. The bag limits on those geese for which open seasons are provided are changed by including brant with geese and limiting the total of all geese (including brant) to four a day and eight in possession.

The remaining amendments have to do with particular species or with seasons over specified areas.

The season on Ross' and cackling geese will be closed throughout the entire range of these species in this country and the close season on snow geese is established in all States bordering on the Atlantic Ocean.

In New York, the season on the woodcock is so drawn that in the southern part of the State, including Long Island, it will run from October 15 to November 14, and elsewhere in the State the season will be limited to the month of October.

Minor changes affect rails and gallinules (except coot) in the States of New York and Washington, where local adjustments are made to slightly reduce the seasons; and mourning doves in Florida, where the season will open on November 20, except in the three southernmost counties, where the season remains unchanged.

"HONOR"

By WILLIAM FAULKNER

We had washed the dishes then and were sitting in the firelight.

I WALKED right through the anteroom without stopping. Miss West says, "He's in conference now," but I didn't stop. I didn't knock, either. They were talking and he quit and looked up across the desk at me.

"How much notice do you want to write me off?" I asked.

"Write you off?" he said.

"I'm quitting," I said. "Will one day be notice enough?"

He looked at me, frog-eyed. "Isn't our car good enough for you to demonstrate?" he said. His hand lay on the desk, holding the cigar. He's got a ruby ring the size of a tail-light. "You've been with us three weeks," he says. "Not long enough to learn what that word on the door means."

He don't know it, but three weeks is pretty good; it's within two days of the record. And if three weeks is a record with him, he could have shaken hands with the new champion without moving.

The trouble is, I had never learned to do anything. You know how it was in those days, with even the college campuses full of British and French uniforms, and all of us all scared to death it would be over before we could get in and swank a pair of pilot's wings ourselves. And then to get in and find something that suited you right down to the ground, you see.

So after the armistice I stayed in for a couple of years as a test pilot. That was when I took up wing-walking, to relieve the monotony. A fellow named Waldrip and I used to hide out at about three thousand on a Nine while I muscled around on top of it. Because army life is pretty dull in peacetime; nothing to do but lay around and lie your head off all day and play poker all night. And isolation is bad for poker. You lose on tick, and on tick you always plunge.

There was a fellow named White lost a thousand one night. He kept on losing and I wanted to quit, but I was winner and he wanted to play on, plunging and losing every pot. He gave me a check and I told him it wasn't any rush, to forget it, because he had a wife out in California. Then the next night he wanted to play again. I tried to talk him out of it, but he got mad. Called me yellow. So he lost fifteen hundred more that night.

Then I said I'd cut him, double or quit, one time. He cut a queen So I said, "well, that beats me. I won't even cut." And I flipped his cut over and riffled them and we saw a gob of face cards and three of the aces. But he insisted, and I said, "What's the use? The percentage would be against me, even with a full deck." But he insisted. I cut the case ace. I would have paid to lose. I offered again to tear up the checks, but he sat there and cursed me. I left him sitting at the table, in his shirtsleeves and his collar open, looking at the ace.

The next day we had the job, the speed ship. I had done everything I could. I couldn't offer him the checks again. I will let a man who is worked up curse me once. But I won't let him twice. So we had the job, the speed ship. I wouldn't touch it. He took it up 5,000 feet and dived the wings off at 2,000 with a full gun.

So I was out again after four years a civ again. And while I was still drifting around—that was when I first tried selling automobiles—I met Jack, and he told me about a bird that wanted a wing-walker for his barn-storming circus. And that was how I met her.

II.

Jack—he gave me a note to Rogers—told me about what a good pilot Rogers was, and about her, how they said she was unhappy with him.

"So is your old man," I said.

"That's what they say," Jack said. So when I saw Rogers and handed him the note—he was one of these lean, quiet-looking birds—I said to myself he was just the kind that would marry one of these flighty, passionate, good-looking women they used to catch during the war with a set of wings, and have her run out on him the first chance. So I felt safe. I knew she'd not have had to wait any three years for one like me.

So I expected to find one of these long, dark, snake-like women surrounded by ostrich plumes and Woolworth incense, smoking cigarets on the divan while Rogers ran out to the corner delicatessen for sliced ham and potato salad on paper plates. But I was wrong. She came in with an apron on over one of these little pale squashy dresses, with flour or something on her arms, without apologizing or flurrying around or anything. She said Howard—that was Rogers—had told her about me and I said, "What did he tell you?" But she just said:

"I expect you'll find this pretty dull for spending the evening, having to help cook your own dinner. I imagine you'd rather go out to dance with a couple of bottles of gin."

"Why do you think that?" I said. "Don't I look like I could do anything else?"

"Oh, don't you?" she said.

We had washed the dishes then and we were sitting in the firelight, with the lights off, with her on a cushion on the floor, her back against Rogers' knees, smoking and talking, and she said, "I know you had a dull time. Howard suggested that we go out for dinner and to dance somewhere. But I told him you'd just have to take us as we are, first as well as later. Are you sorry?"

She could look about sixteen, especially in the apron. By that time she had bought one for me to wear, and the three of us would all go back to the kitchen and cook dinner. "We don't expect you to enjoy doing this any more than we do," she said. "It's because we are so poor. We're just an aviator."

"Well, Howard can fly well enough for two people," I said. "So that's all right, too."

"When he told me you were just a flyer too, I said, 'My Lord, a wing-walker? When you were choosing a family friend,' I said, why didn't you choose a man we could invite to dinner a week ahead and not only count on his being there, but on his taking us out and spending his money on us?' But he had to choose one that is as poor as we are." And once she said to Rogers: "We'll have to find Buck a girl, too. He's going to get tired of just us some day." You know how they say things like that: things that sound like they meant something until you look at them and find their eyes perfectly blank, until you wonder if they were even thinking about you, let alone talking about you.

Or maybe I'd have them out to dinner and a show. "Only I didn't mean that like it sounded," she said. "That wasn't a hint to take us out."

"Did you mean that about getting me a girl, too?" I said.

Then she looked at me with that wide, blank, innocent look. That was when I would take them by my place for a cocktail—Rogers didn't drink, himself—and when I would come in that night I'd find traces of powder on my dresser or maybe her handkerchief or something, and I'd go to bed with the room smelling like she was still there. She said: "Do you want us to find you one?" But nothing more was ever said about it, and after a while, when there was a high step or any of those little things which men do for women that means touching them, she'd turn to me like it was me was her husband and not him; and one night a storm caught us downtown and we went to my place and she and Rogers slept in my bed and I slept in a chair in the sitting-room.

One evening I was dressing to go out there when the phone rang. It was Rogers. "I am——" he said, then something cut him off. It was like somebody had put a hand on his mouth, and I could hear them talking, murmuring: her, rather. "Well, what——" Rogers says. Then I could hear her breathing into the mouthpiece, and she said my name.

"Don't forget you're to come out tonight," she said.

"I hadn't," I said. "Or did I get the date wrong? If this is not the night——"

"You come on out," she said. "Good-by."

When I got there he met me. His face looked like it always did, but I didn't go in. "Come on in," he said.

"Maybe I got the date wrong," I said. "So if you'll just——"

He swung the door back, "Come on in," he said.

She was lying on the divan, crying. I don't know what; something about money. "I just can't stick it," she said. "I've tried and I've tried, but I just can't stand it."

"You know why my insurance rates are," he said. "If something happened, where would you be?"

"Where am I, anyway? What tenement woman hasn't got more than I have?" She hadn't looked up, lying there on her face, with the apron twisted under her. "Why don't you quit and do something that you can get a decent insurance rate, like other men?"

"I must be getting along," I said. I didn't belong there. I just got out. He came down to the door with me, and then we were both looking back up the stairs toward the door where she was lying on her face on the couch.

"I've got a little stake," I said. "I guess because I've eaten so much of your grub I haven't had time to spend it. So if it's anything urgent. * * *" We stood there, he holding the door open. "Of course, I wouldn't try to muscle in where I don't——"

"I wouldn't, if I were you," he said. He opened the door. "See you at the field tomorrow."

"Sure," I said. "See you at the field."

I didn't see her for almost a week, didn't hear from her. I saw him every day, and at last I said, "How's Mildred these days?"

"She's on a visit," he said. "At her mother's."

For the next two weeks I was with him every day. When I was out on top I'd look back at his face behind the goggles. But we never mentioned her name, until one day he told me she was home again and that I was invited out to dinner that night.

It was in the afternoon. He was busy all that day hopping passengers, so I was doing nothing, just killing time waiting for evening and thinking about her, wondering some, but mostly just thinking about her being home again, breathing the same smoke and soot I was breathing, when all of a sudden I decided to go out there. It was plain as a voice saying, "Go out there. Now, at once." So I went. I didn't even wait to change. She was alone, reading before the fire. It was like gasoline from a broken line blazing up around you.

III

It was funny. When I'd be out on top I'd look back at his face behind the windscreen, wondering what he knew. He must have known almost at once. Why, say, she didn't have any discretion at all. She'd say and do things, you know; insist on sitting close to me; touching me in that different way from when you hold an umbrella or a raincoat over them, and such that any man can tell at one look, when she thought he might not see; not when she knew he couldn't, but when she thought maybe he wouldn't. And when I'd unfasten my belt and crawl out I'd look back at his face and wonder what he was thinking, how much he knew or suspected.

I'd go out there in the afternoon when he was busy. I'd stall around until I saw that he would be lined up for the rest of the day, then I'd give some excuse and beat it. One afternoon I was all ready to go, waiting for him to take off, when he cut the gun and leaned out and beckoned me. "Don't go off," he said, "I want to see you."

So I knew he knew then, and I waited until he made the last hop and was taking off his monkey suit in the office. He looked at me and I looked at him. "Come out to dinner," he said.

When I came in they were waiting. She had on one of those little squashy dresses and she came and put her arms around me and kissed me with him watching.

"I'm going with you," she said. "We've talked it over and have both agreed that we couldn't love one another any more after this and that this is the only sensible thing to do. Then he can find a woman he can love, a woman that's not bad like I am."

He was looking at me, and she running her hands over my face and making a little moaning sound against my neck, and me like a stone or something. Do you know what I was thinking? I wasn't thinking about her at all. I was thinking that he and I were upstairs and me out on top and I had just found that he had thrown the stick away and was flying her on the rudder alone and that he knew that I knew the stick was gone and so it was all right now, whatever happened. So it was like a piece of wood with another piece of wood leaning against it, and she held back and looked at my face.

"Don't you love me any more?" she said, watching my face. "If you love me, say so. I have told him everything."

I wanted to be out of there. I wanted to run. I wasn't scared. It was because it was all kind of Divested Selves of Clothes to Put Garments on Others to Keep Them Warm; Parents May Lead Clubs in Summer.

WHAT a fine lot of knights, men and women of America, are revealed in the essays sent in by members of the Knighthood of Youth in the "Knights of Today" contest. Our boys and girls seem to enjoy the chance to tell about their favorite knights.

How the list is growing.

Some of our girls have written about Helen Keller, that wonderful woman who, deaf and dumb and blind since birth, has risen above these obstacles and won a real place for herself in the world. Surely if any person is entitled to the name of "Knight of Today," it is Helen Keller, who, by sheer pluck, has brought herself from darkness into the light of normal living.

Others name Mme. Curie as a knight of today. When one remembers how much suffering she has saved others through her great discovery of radium, no one will fail to give her this honor.

Mme. Curie studied many years before she found the secret of radium. It took hard work to do it but she stuck to her job and won out in it, too.

Post's Knights of Today.

If the Junior Post editor were asked to name some knights of today, I think I should name Bryan and Clara, the hero and heroine of the blizzard disaster in Colorado. It took true heroism to do what they did, to strip themselves of their clothes and give the younger children in the snowbound bus a chance for life. Just thinking about being brave is one thing but being it is quite another and this boy and girl if properly trained will grow up to be useful citizens.

The success of the Knighthood of Youth program in the home depends so much on the interest of parents that The Washington Post has decided to devote a part of each week's Junior Post to ways parents have found to make Knighthood clubs successful. These will be published and other parents can gain from your experience.

Now that school will soon be dismissed many Knighthood of Youth Clubs will be without the guiding help of the teacher. There are many able parents who could very well assume this same leadership and thus keep the clubs continuing during the summer. If your child belongs to a club at school would you be willing to call the members of the club together once a week and help them continue with their activities during the summer vacation? Other mothers of the same group may be glad to help you share this responsibility.

Stories of Two Mothers.

The following letters, reprinted from an issue of "Childhood and Character," a magazine published by the National Child Welfare Association, give the stories of two mothers whose children joined the club through a Western newspaper. These mothers became so interested in the good resulting from the Knighthood of Youth that they took it upon themselves to organize their children's playmates into clubs.

"I have always been interested in child welfare. We have had a problem in our neighborhood. There are about ten boys within a block. They differ in age from 6 to 10 years. Some of the older ones are at times inclined to bully the younger ones. So I have taken it upon myself to organize a club. We meet each Monday evening from 7 to 8 o'clock. I surely have an enthusiastic crowd. Each Saturday we plan to take a trip. We are going to the bakery, to the fish hatchery, to the nursery and such places. The boys write up their trips. We have yells, songs, mottos, colors. They are making a banner now. To remind them they have bad habits to overcome they are going to have a dragon on the banner. The boys hold all the offices in the club.

"There is a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, &c. The other day they found a new boy who wanted to join. They thought he should have some office so one suggested that they make him chairman: "He can come a little earlier and set the chairs around the table for us." They conduct their own meetings and are learning, very rapidly, to obey the rules. I think it is going to have the desired effect. They seem more united already. If you have any plans or suggestions that will help us we will appreciate them."

Mother of Twins.

"My first introduction to motherhood was a double one, for my first and only children are twins, a boy and a girl. Being the mother of twins, with no previous experience in child training is a job which only those who have experienced it can appreciate.

"As Della and Dale grew, the task of their training grew with them, until it seemed that every hour presented some new problem. A vast difference in sex and dispositions made my responsibilities all the heavier.

"By the time they had reached school age I had just about decided that I knew nothing of the child-training game and was drifting into the habit of leaving it up to their teacher as so many of us do (I wonder why we expect a teacher to do so much for our children when we ourselves are such failures.)

"At this point I was attracted by the announcement in the Salt Lake Tribune of the Knighthood of Youth Club. After reading it I felt sure that it was the very help I needed to accomplish the things I had dreamed of for my children.

Two Pages Eager to Start.

"I sent in their applications for membership and in a few days we had two happy little "Pages" eager to start on the Quest of Character.

"It is now just a year since they enrolled in this wonderful character building club but the miracle has been wrought. I no longer have to urge them to attend to health habits or scold them for their untidiness or bad manners. Our home is one of order and peace, instead of the former turmoil and confusion of strewn books and toys.

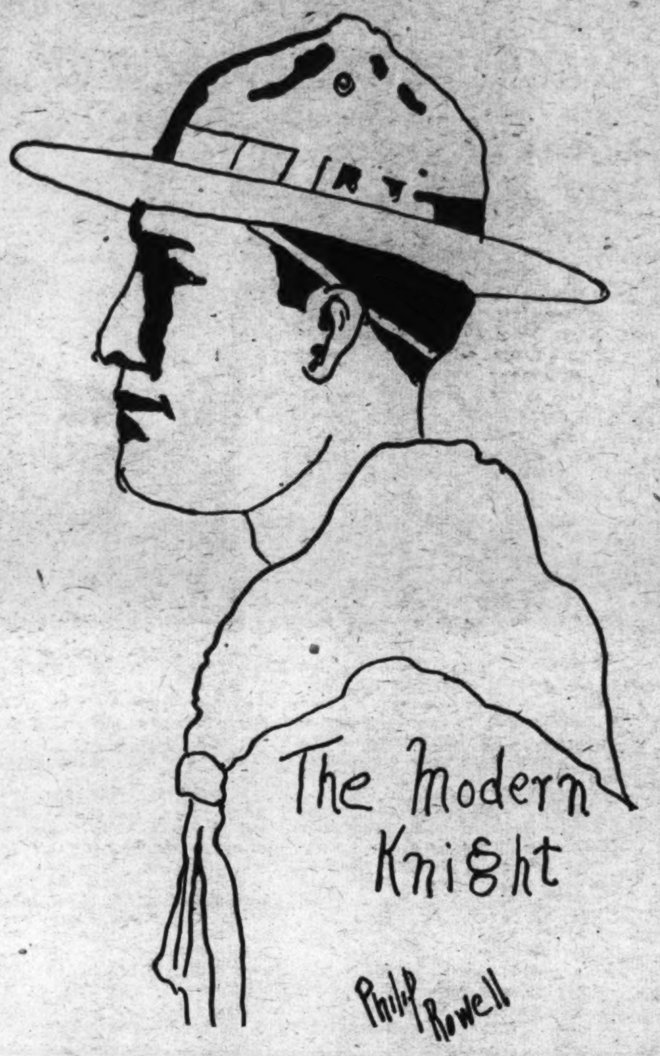
"Della and Dale were just 6 years old when they became pages in the Knighthood of Youth. They were a little too young to grasp its meaning readily. It took time and patience to bring about the desired results, but I was persistent in helping them and they soon became so interested in the game of marking their charts that it grew as important as eating their meals.

"At first I aroused their enthusiasm in the Quest of Character by playing the game with them. I made myself a chart as a reminder of my own bad habits. The children would work hard to beat their mother in the family game. Their daddy gave them each a bank and at the end of each week he would drop a quarter in their bank for each bad habit they had overcome during the week. This stimulated the thrift habit as well as helping to overcome bad habits. Once each month I would give them a party if their charts showed a clean record on the same question for a month. Children love parties, so the twins would work hard for this reward. Each would remind the other of their faults, for if either of them failed on the said question we did not have the party. In my experience I find that reward for good deeds is better than punishment for bad ones.

Organize Own Clubs.

"As the game of playing Knights progressed, Della and Dale wanted to organize a club of their own. So with the teacher's permission Della explained the Knighthood of Youth to her classmates. In a few days they had an enrollment of nine. We held the first two meetings at our home and I explained the work to the children. They were all very enthusiastic about it, so they organized their club under the name of 'Obedience Circle of Knighthood of Youth.' They chose their club motto and yells. They also have a cute little club song. They appointed their officers and began as earnestly as any club. It has been just two months since the 'Obedience Circle' was organized. They now have a total of twenty members.

"Each member takes his or her turn entertaining. They meet once a week, have their flag drill, discuss the work and compare charts. The host or hostess serves refreshments and they play games and read stories so that the work does not become monotonous. We have a Dragon Cemetery in our back yard for the 'Obedience Circle.' My only worry now is that we will have to buy another lot to make room for all the Dragon bones."



THE STORY BOOK LADY

"I HOPE we will be able to find some books about travel today," said Ned as he skated with Robert and Tom up the street to the place where the Story Book Lady and the members of the Knighthood of Youth and the Junior Post Writers' Club were waiting to start on their weekly pilgrimage to Story Book Land." Father says every one feels like traveling when spring is in the air.

"Well," said his sister, Dorothy, "I like to travel, too, and to read about travel, but I like to read about people, too."

"Travel and people," said the Story Book L[illegible], as the children joined her, "that is a very good idea to have in mind when selecting books."

"Indeed, it is; that is what I tell the boys," said the Gnome, who keeps the gate at the end of the Fairy Tale Bridge that leads to Story Book Land, as he took off his green hat with the scarlet feather on it. "Hurry up, Blick and Flick and Little Mick."

The grandchildren of Mr. Gnome hurried out of the little green house and took off their green hats with scarlet feathers on them and bowed and bowed to the Story Book Lady.

"They are so polite," Lenore whispered to Anne.

"We are polite, too," said Merry and Jolly, the Story Book Fairy Children who appeared just then, swimming about in a sunbeam, while the Story Book Fairy in a brand-new airplane made out of dogwood blossoms, parked her plane on a pink pebble which happened to be just the right size. The Story Book Fairy Children tied their golden parachutes to tendrils of a vine running up a Story Book Tree and hopped on the shoulders of Anne and Lenore. There they stood bowing and bowing just as the Gnome children bowed.

"Well, I always tried to be polite myself," said a youth standing near, 'and I tried to make the world beautiful for others.'

"Oh," asked Annabel, "are you in a book? What is your name?"

"Ha, ha!" laughed Merry and Jolly, dancing up and down on Lenore's and Ann's shoulders. "Why, this is our old friend Siegfried. You surely know the story."

"I am not sure I do," said Annabel, "or perhaps it is not the same story nurse told me."

"Of course it is; of course it is," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses, "for it is 'The Story of Siegfried,' a retelling of the old story your nurse told you, and Wagner, the great composer, used for the ideas for his opera. This book has been arranged by Anegal Diller, and is just full of Wagner's opera and full of illustrations by Lynd Ward, and it is published by Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith, in cooperation with G. Schirmer, Inc."

"Oh, the music is coming right out of the book," exclaimed Mary, who loved music.

"Yes, I know, dear," said the Story Book Lady. "I expected that, for there are 23 musical motives from Wagner's opera."

"Oh, here we are, right in the midst of travel," shouted Tom. "See that winter camp and the reindeer and all the ice and snow."

"Oh, let us hurry," said Ned. "Tell us about this, please, Story Book Lady."

"Well," said the Story Book Lady, taking her glasses away from Jolly, who was using them to slide on, "The book is called 'Turi's Book of Lapland,' and it has been edited and translated from the Danish by E. Gee Nash, and has been published for us by Harper & Bros."

'Who is Turi?" asked Alice. "Does he live in Lapland?"

"Of course, he does," said the Story Book Fairy," the Queen knows him well. He is a Lapp hunter, and he has lots and lots of beautiful reindeer and he learned to write after he had grown up. And he has written this book about himself."

"Oh, how nice and warm it is and what beautiful flowers and trees," said Maud, as they rounded another book street.

"Of course," laughed the Story Book Fairy, "for we are now in California, where they say they have a climate as good as that in fairyland."

"Perhaps they have," said the Story Book Lady. "Any way this is 'The Secret of Bancho Del Sol; A Story of Old California.' "

"Just like in the movie," said Jim, his round brown eyes shining.

"Well, not exactly," said the Story Book Lady, "but look down the street and see all the people and background Hildegrade Hawthorne and Leslie Thomas have drawn and D. Appleton & Co., New York, have put into such a nice book."

So they wandered through the picturesque story and atmosphere of Old California with Merry and Jolly rushing about from flower to flower and all the children admiring and exclaiming and being so interested in the story all the time.

"Here is another interesting street," shouted Susan, who had run ahead of the others. "It is all full of people and myths and so many of them are telling the most interesting tales."

"Of course, they are dear," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses, "for it is all about 'How It Happened; Myths Folk Tales Retold,' by Rhoda Power, line cuts by Agnes Miller and published by Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston."

THE JUNIOR

"I HAVE been sightseeing all day," said the pilot as he shot his plane with the Current Events Editor in the cockpit up high over Washington. "Two aunts of mine have come to Washington for the D. A. R. Congress and I have been sightseeing with them."

"The D. A. R. is in session, I see, today," said the editor as they flew over the handsome marble groups of buildings below the White House built by the Daughters of the American Revolution. "I saw them as I came along and—look, down there are hundreds of them, all wearing new spring clothes and nice ribbons and badges."

"They are a splendid group of women," said the pilot, and my aunts were telling me how much work they do in patriotic education and preserving the history of this country. They are so patriotic."

"Yes, they are," said the editor, as they circled the Washington Monument and flew across country to see San Francisco, where they were celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the great San Francisco earthquake, which laid the city in waste. They flew over the noble city, which had been rebuilt so well in a quarter of a century and is one of the most prosperous cities of the country.

"There is the Langley, the United States Navy airplane carrier, full speed ahead," the pilot said as they glided over the majestic craft on another circle of their tour of inspection.

"I should say she is full speed ahead," laughed the editor, "for she is on her way to Nicaragua to protect Americans there whose lives are in danger."

"Well, I guess the American flag will be safe on that ship with all those pilots and airplanes on the carrier to protect them," said the pilot.

"Speaking of aircraft, let us take another look to see how the Akron, the new Navy dirigible, is getting on as we go over Akron," said the editor. And so they did, and from the air the huge airship seemed to be about completed, but they had both read that it will be over a month or two before it is ready to "take to the skies."

Then on to New York, where they saw Helen Keller going into a broadcasting station to send a message of cheer over the radio to the blind. They turned in their own radio, and neither spoke until they had heard Miss Keller's message.

"What a wonderful woman she is," said the editor. "Born blind and deaf and dumb, and yet she has been able to get so much out of life; learned

"OH, I do hope that Paul can see this wonderful suspension bridge. He loves bridges so," said Paulina to Perfectly Fair and Smiley who had her hands as they ran across the suspension bridge made by the melting of the icy high and haughty glances of the Count of the Raised Eye Brow by the warmth and cheerful friendliness of the Elves of Good Cheer. The Suspension Bridge of melted frozen glances shone like a rainbow in the sun and the trees held it high in the air. But Paulina was afraid that never, never would they catch up with the Count of the Raised Eye Brow and her twin Paul who had come under the spell of the Raised Eye Brow and was rushing away across the Mount of the Raised Eye Brow with the Count, mounted on one of the Count's High Horses.

"He will be able to see it some time," said Smiley, the Boy Scout of the Elves of Good Cheer, cheerfully, "as soon as we catch up with him."

But they were coming to the end of the Suspension Bridge for it suddenly dipped, dipped down in a deep valley at the end of which was the fortress of the Raised Eye Brow made of ice. Many soldiers of the Raised Eye Brow were standing on the battle-

...to talk, and get an education, and do so much good for others afflicted."

"And she is always cheerful, too," said the pilot. "I have seen and heard her a number of times, and I think she has the most composed face and the happiest I have ever seen."

"Well," said the editor, "she has accomplished something in life and that is enough to make anybody happy. I saw something of the same look on the faces of Dorothy D. Skirm and Thomas J. Hayes two Western High School winners in the 'Envoy of Friendship' contest conducted by The Washington Post and the United States Flag Association when they were being congratulated by District Commissioner Luther H. Reichelderfer last week."

"Nice-looking boy and girl," said the pilot. "They will make a good impression in Europe and make Washington proud of them."

"Of course they will," the editor said. "They are as happy as a king or queen. "Happier, I should say," said the pilot as he turned his plane over the Atlantic Ocean. "Happier, I am sure than King Alfonso and Queen Victoria of Spain who have lost their thrones."

On they flew to Scotland where they saw the British Premier Ramsay McDonald on a vacation with his family, and Queen Mary opening a flower show in London. Then they went to Paris especially to try and get a glimpse of the dethroned Spanish king and his family in their Paris hotel. They did not see the Spanish former royal family but they saw Queen Elizabeth of Belgium and the Dowager Queen of Roumania, Queen Marie, drive up to pay a visit to Queen Victoria.

Just to cover all the ground of happenings of the week when they got back to this country instead of landing at once at their airfield in Washington they took a turn about the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia and got a glimpse of the Rapidan Camp of President and Mrs. Hoover and saw the very stream in which the President caught so many trout last week.

"There is the school President and Mrs. Hoover opened for the mountain children," exclaimed the pilot as a group of children ran out to play in the school yard, directed by a nice looking teacher.

"Yes. It is a wonderful thing to do," the editor said thoughtfully. "Some one of those boys may be President of the United States yet."

"They have their chance to be," said the pilot. "Every American boy has."

"Oh dear, dear, dear," sobbed Paulina, "Paul is in there and I am sure we will never get him out. I am so very cold," and she shivered in her warm red zipper suit. Paul always gets cold I am sure he is frozen in there although he has on his zipper suit."

Perfectly Fair, of the Elves of Fair Play, who had started out with Paul and Paulina on their pilgrimages to Elf Land in order to keep a perfectly fair record when they came to the Valley of Fair Play, was carefully writing down every shiver and every sob of Paulina.

Sir Always Cheerful and Lady Hilarity Good Cheer, Twinkle Eyes, the Girl Scout of the Elves of Good Cheer and High Spirits and High Delight, the Sunshine Brigade of the Elves of Good Cheer and all the ladies in waiting and gentlemen in waiting and pages of the Elves of the Raised Eyebrow who had become cheerful since their visit to the Valley of Good Cheer were singing and singing with the bluebirds of happiness. They led the onslaughts on the Icy unfriendly fortress.

Even Sir Always Cheerful and Lady Hilarity Good Cheer, who always kept up their cheerful high spirits, began to look a little worried despite their cheerfulness as they saw that their cheerful songs and happy, smiling glances and friendly looks did not thaw the ice of the fortress or stop the frozen shots from the haughty guns of the soldiers of the Raised Eyebrow on the battlements.

Plain Facts, the Girl Scout of the Elves of Fair Play, came up just then and saluted in the Girl Scout fashion.

"I bring a message of reinforcements," said Plain Facts, standing at attention in front of Sir Always Cheerful." The Lord High Honorable Honesty wishes to confer with you and invited you to the Valley of Fair Play so that we may decide what will be fair and honest and by what direct and honest means we may deal fairly with the Count of the Raised Eye Brow and show him the fairness of releasing Paul and returning him to the company of his twin. To be fair is to be happy, and to be fair is to be honest."

"But," said Paulina, forgetting that Sir Always Cheerful was a grown-up man even though he was an elf, "I don't want to leave here until I can get Paul."

"To be perfectly fair," said Perfectly Fair, "no matter how many times I add up our efforts and divide them by good intentions and friendliness and good cheer, I can not reach a sum as high as the haughty frozen glances of all the soldiers in the fortress, so we will have to get a little fair play in this in order to bring down the grand total sum of icy, haughty glances and put them on the wrong side of the ledger. This has to be done, according to the highest system of fair play, and we did need the help of Lord High Honorable Honesty with all his truth and faith and honor to add to the cheerful, friendly good cheer of the Elves of Good Cheer. Then on to battle with "Fair Play" as our motto and we will have Paul back with us again."

"Well——" said Paulina doubtfully," father always says that honesty and fair play pays and that cheerfulness and friendliness are great business assets."

"Oh, of course it is, of course it is," said Smiley cheerfully. "Here is the gate to the Valley of Fair Play and let us go to welcome the aid of Lord High Honorable Honesty."

Paulina let Perfectly Fair and Plain Facts pull her through the gate and even though she was so worried about Paul she could not help but notice that a sign on the gate said, "A square deal for every one who enters here." Pevhaps they would get her a square deal just like father always said he wanted when he was doing business with anybody. She had heard him say so many times and had wondered just what it looked like. GUESS THE FLAG CONTEST

Name ....

Age .... School ....

The flag entries have increased greatly in number since the cash prizes have been offered for the winners. That is all right, for many of our boys and girls use the money they win in Post prizes either to start savings accounts, for good books or for drawing and other materials with which to do more Junior Post work. The sense of having earned a cash prize by their own talents is a very precious idea for boys and girls as well as for men and women and that is the reason why The Junior Post offers cash prizes now and then for special achievement.

Read the rules printed here telling you how you can win these prizes. I will tell you a little secret about prize winning. I notice that the boys and girls who win are the ones usually who take the greatest pains in preparing their entries. Their work is neat, correctly spelled or drawn and always in ink and not in pencil which, of course, is not considered at all.

In the Flag Contest we consider first of all whether it has been colored in the proper hues of the original flag. Then we examine the entry more closely to see if it has been neatly done. If it has, then it has a chance to win the prize. Remember this when you send in your flags. Do not try to win a prize all in a minute, take time and do it right.

A beautiful tablet is being unveiled today in Washington to Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star-Spangled Banner." The tablet is the gift of the United States Daughters of 1812. So we will take for our flag poem today, the words of that deathless anthem of patriotism.

THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER.

Oh! Say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming—
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the clouds of the fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming?
And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there;
Oh! Say, does that Star-Spangled Banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On that shore dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes;
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, now conceals, now discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected now shines on the stream;
'Tis the Star-Spangled Banner! Oh! long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight, or the gloom of the grave;
And the Star-Spangled Banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Oh! Thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand
Between their loved ones and war's desolation!
Blest with victory and peace, may the Heav'n-rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us as a Nation.
Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just,
And this be our motto, "In God Is Our Trust;"
And the Star-Spangled Banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

There is a very special reason why the flag outline printed today is being used. The ruler of the country which the flag represents is visiting in America with his queen. Now that is a very broad hint and if you read the news events in the daily Post you will guess easily what I mean.

It is a country in distant Asia and it is a country where the elephant is greatly appreciated and admired and in former times was even worshiped. Now people are more enlightened and they know that the elephant is after all but an animal, but a very useful and intelligent one. This country has an ancient history but it is the first time its king has ever visited America. Watch closely next week and you may see the king and queen riding about the streets of Washington.

The field of the flag is a solid block of flame color, the elephant is in the color of purity while the sun in the upper right field is of the usual color of that inhabitant of the heavens. By the way, the saddle cloth worn by the elephant is of the same color as leaves in autumn. Now guess what flag it is.

Rules for Flag Coloring Contest

Rules and regulations for submitting drawings in the "Guess the Flag" contest.

Any boy or girl between the ages of 6 and 18 years may enter this contest.

All drawings must be submitted one week from the Monday following publication of the outline of the flag to be colored.

All drawings must be addressed to The Junior Post Editor, Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

Announcement of prize winners will be made each Sunday for the contest published two weeks previously. The prizes are $1 in cash.

Drawings may be colored with either crayons or water colors, and must be in the exact colors of the flag of the country represented in the outline drawing.

Winner of April 12 Contest

The flag was that of New Zealand, and the winners were:

First prize — Irving Reid, 2012 Monroe street northwest.

Second prize — Betty Freeman, 411 Frederick avenue, Gaithersburg, Md.

Sevier, Renowned Tennessee Knight, Subdued Indians

Was Extraordinarily Brave in Making Pioneer Country Safe.

The next time members of the Knighthood of Youth go to the United States Capitol we hope they will look at the brand-new statue of a knight which has been placed in Statuary Hall. This knight was a great hero because he gave to the people of his country and his State his best service and was always ready to defend the weak. This knight was Col. John Sevier, Revolutionary soldier and Indian fighter and one of the great builders of the republic in the days when it took real knighthood and courage to be a soldier and builder of America.

While Tennessee claims this great knight as her son, as the statue was presented to the Nation by the Governor of Tennessee and distinguished men from that State, he was born in Virginia and grew to young manhood there. Married and having ten children and with lots of other brave Americans determined to seek his fortune on the frontier, so in 1776 he and his family moved to Watauga, now near Elizabethtown, Tenn.

The settlements were always in danger from Indians and the British, but John Sevier sprang up as a great knight to protect them and to show the way toward the castle of safety and fight the dragons of all kinds that hovered about to kill the men and women and burn down their homes they had worked so hard to build.

For 40 years this great knight devoted his time in the service of his people and his country. His bravery made the men about him brave. They followed him in any quest.

He finally was appointed brigadier general for the territory south of Ohio and led in the keeping the dragons from the homes of the people in that part of the country. These dragons in those days were Indians, Cherokees and Creeks. But he also tried to find a way so that the people he was protecting would not always be threatened by the Indians. He was always trying to find ways to make the Indians and the whites more friendly and was often successful in obtaining treaties. But he was not afraid to go into battle when the Indians would not be friendly and it is a tradition that he led his men in 35 real battles and skirmishes. He always shouted as he waved his hand to his men to lead them forth, "Here they are! Come on, boys, come on." And the "boys would come on" because this knight had the great quality of leadership which all true knights have. This quality comes from being in earnest and being sure you are doing right and being willing to go into every danger into which you ask any one else to go.

Another reason John Sevier was a great knight and leader was because even in those days when they did not have running water in their houses and hotels or nice warm rooms to dress in in cold weather as we do now, he always considered his personal appearance and was neat and clean as an officer and a gentlemen as well as every good citizen always should be.

He was not afraid to look friend or foe in the eye either, and did not walk or sit with his shoulders humped up and his head hanging down. He carried his head proudly and his shoulders were always thrown back so that he could let every one know he had self-respect and could breathe freely and easily.

He always stopped to think what he wanted to do and then went fearlessly forth to do it. As governor of the State of Tennessee and as a member of the United States Congress he was always careful to find out both sides of every issue and then to go ahead and fight for the one in which he believed. He never kept silent when things he did not approve of were going on, but insisted that his opinion on them be heard.

Education.

Education is not vexation;
But is as important as multiplication;
It is needed each and every day,
Both in and every way.
No one is too poor,
For opportunities knock at every door.
There are schools for everyone
In which to get an education overrun,
Then you may say, "Other men have received an education and then
Had nothing to do.
But as Taylor has said "Other men's Failures can not save you."

The Circuit Writer's Wife—By OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

THERE wasn't no good reason why Sylvester Morris shouldn't of got a fan letter long before he did. He was a great big guy and he had long, flowing hair and broad shoulders and a nice grin and it was only after you got to know him that you would realize he wasn't exactly smart. In fact you might almost say he was very dumb.

He had come to us straight from the sandlots. In spring training he had shown that he was a fly hawk and could hit, and when Rollo Cassidy broke his leg during the exhibition season, Sylvester stepped into center field and stuck there. He wasn't no wonder. because he wasn't very addicted to brain, but at that he was a swell mechanical ball player.

But from the time he joined the club, he was fruit. They all picked on him, and especially Dink Jewell I'm free to admit that Sylvester was just a natural target for kidding, but Dink was the kind of a gimmick who didn't know where to stop. There was always something poisonous in Dink's kidding, whereas all the other guys was just looking for a good laugh.

Dink never had liked the big, rawboned rookie; or, anyway, he felt himself a heap better than Sylvester and he seemed to resent all the publicity Sylvester got. You see, the big guy was swell copy for the newspaper fellers. We had a one-two-three club and Sylvester gave us a real offensive punch. He took a good cut at the ball, and when he hit 'em they stayed hit. Besides, Dink was slipping and he knew it. He had been shortstopping in the majors for nine years and his legs wasn't as good as they used to be, so I reckon it was natural that he should get peeved at any youngster who was going good.

"Boys," yells Dink, "we have got a gay Lothari o in our midst. Hats off, everybody, to Mr. Sylvester Morris, while I rea d you a letter he has received."

Well, anyway, it was when the season was about six weeks old and Sylvester had won himself a regular berth that he busted into the locker room one day before the game looking like he had just received an inheritance or something. He was waving a letter and announcing that he had got it. Dink was slipping into his unie and happened to be standing nearest and he asked Sylvester could he see it. Sylvester blushed and said he could and the first thing you know Dink lets out a howl and mounts on the bench and says he has something to read us.

"Boys," he yells, "we have got a gay Lothario in our midst. Hats off, everybody, to Mister Sylvester Morris, the demon outfielder, while I read you a letter he has received."

Then he reads us off the following:

"My dear Mr. Morris:

"I was to the game yesterday and I think you was just grand. It must be wonderful to be a ball player and I bet you have got a lot of sweethearts. I think they (the ones you have got) are all very lucky. You probably would not look at me. I am 19 years of age and my friends say I have got a good figure and am pretty. But you could not care about meeting me so I will sign myself, with love— A LITTLE BLONDE."

Of course we all hollered. We crowded about Sylvester and made him believe that he was the only ball player in the major league which ever received a love letter from an unknown dame.

"Shuh, boys," he says—"that ain't nothin."

"What do you mean," demanded Dink Jewell, "it ain't nothin'?"

"I got lots of them kind of letters," lies Sylvester. "The girls is writing me all the time."

"You're a swell outfielder, Sylvester. They ought to be all chasing you. Now what I want to know is this: Why don't you follow up this lead? This here cluck might be a millionaire's daughter or something."

"She didn't give no name or address," gooms the big lad.

So far it was all good-natured. Sylvester was a natural target. and we enjoyed givin' him the razz. But he was a wholesouled kid and we really liked him even if two thoughts at the same time would have given his brain a blowout. But Dink Jewell wasn't content to let it rest there. He knew—just as we all did—that Sylvester was lying about getting a lot of letters.

"When are you gonna show us some of them other love letters you got Sylvester?"

Sylvester was plenty embarrassed. "I don't think that would be exactly right, Dink—showin' a girl's letters around to a bunch of roughneck ball-players thataway."

"Just the same, you ought to show us. You're doing us dirt if you don't, because, Sylvester—us guys are plain and homely and lots of us is married, and we don't get no love letters. We like to know what the latest love styles is, see?"

Dink's lips was smiling. but there was acid in his voice, and I edged forward.

"Lay off the kid, Dink. Just because he's full of the old S. A. and you are zero-minus aint no reason for you to ride him."

Dink gives me a dirty look. "I'm just trying to learn some thing about love," he says. "And I think if Sylvester is a good feller, he will let us read some more letters. Even—" his face brightens—"even if you cut off the skirt's names and addresses, Sylvester. How about that? You can do that, can't you?"

Sylvester don't promise nothing, and all through the game the fellers kid him. We was playing Chicago that day and Sylvester done awful good: picked one off his shoetops in the third inning that saved two runs; and in the ninth it was his long sacrifice fly to deep left that brought in our winning tally. And when we was under showers Dink started talking about how he bet Sylvester would get a hundred letters the next day, and he ought to, because how a woman could resist his handsome face and manly figure was more than Dink could understand.

Sylvester et that up, but I could see that he was worried.

The next day and the one after—and the one after that—Dink rode him good and plenty. He called him Lothario and Casanova and even Henry the Eighth, which was all monikers of loving guys which he borrowed from college fellers on the team. I could see that it was getting Sylvester's goat.

He didn't know he was being kidded; that was the real laugh. And he didn't know that we all knew it was the first fan letter he ever got from a female and probably the last. He would of been mighty glad to let the matter end there, but he had trapped himself by saying that he got letters all the time—and Dink was demanding results.

It was getting under Sylvester's skin, what I mean, and finely Lee Martin, our manager, spoke to Dink. Dink riz up on a high horse and inquired to know why Lee objected to a little good-natured kidding. Lee explained it wasn't that. He said we all knew Sylvester had tried to slip a fast one over, and that there wasn't no use riding him too hard, because then it would begin to hurt his ball playing.

"And," finishes Lee, "we can't afford to have our new blood slipping. Not on a club like this that has so many old-timers we will soon need a flock of wheel chairs."

That is a rap straight at Dink, and the gang snickers—which is what spelled curtains for Mister Sylvester Morris.

After that Dink rode him high, wide and handsome—and, believe me, there was carbolic in every word he said. Sylvester was slumping on the field and going around wearing a worried look. And just when I was making up my mind that I was gonna butt in, Sylvester storms the clubhouse one day, waving a sheet of pink note paper. He shoves this under Dink's schnozzle.

"Read it," sizzles Sylvester. "Ain't it hot?"

I could see that Dink was sad, but he made all the capital he could out of broadcasting it to the club. And it was a warm letter at that:

"My dear Mr. Morris:

"I think you are the swellest ball player and the handsomest man in the league. Are you married and if not would you consider a pretty girl who is a millionare's daughter? I am young and very loving. In fact, I could be specially loving with a big handsome man like you. Please be sure to write me."

"There ain't no name or address," howls Dink. "How can you answer her?"

Sylvester grins. "I tore the address off," he says.

"Are you going to write her?"

"Naw! What do I care for girls?"

Well, we all begin giving Dink the razzberry. He had demanded a letter and now he had got one; and how! It was Sylvester's afternoon and even though we kidded him a lot, it was all in fun, and he blossomed under it. Only Dink was kind of sore.

The next day Sylvester barges into the clubhouse with another letter, and, queer to state this is also from a millionaire's daughter and it happens that she misspells millionaire the same way. Says the letter:

"Dear Mr. Morris:

"I know you would not have nothing to do with no daughter of a poor millionare, but anyways you have got to know that I think you are a fine ball player and a verry handsome man. I am verry young but folks say I am pretty. I wish you would call me up some time."

"Say, listen," howls Dink—"Don't you never make no hit with nobody less than millionaires?"

"Sure I do," grins Sylvester, "but I don't pay no mind to their letters because they ain't wrote so good."

"How about knocking me down to this girl? You got so many rich ones on the string, you wouldn't miss one."

Sylvester shakes his head. "You are too much of a sheik, Dink. First thing you know, I wouldn't have no girls if I was to introduce you to all of them."

"That's right," snaps the little feller, "especially when they all got millionaire fathers who don't know there is an 'i' in the last syllable."

That was a dirty crack. Way we figured was this: It was great poking fun at the big goof with his phony love letters, but rotten to let him know that we knew they was phony. And that's what Dink wasn't content with. There was barbs in everything he said.

Things go on like that for a couple weeks. Every day Sylvester appears with a new letter. Sometimes they are from millionaire's daughters and sometimes the girls say that they are in high society. It was plain that Sylvester didn't have much more imagination than a blue point oyster, and I could see a worried look commencing to appear on his pan because even he must have known that he was running out of ideas. But the point is that he got a great wallop out of thinking that we was fooled, and even Dink's wise cracks went clear over his head.

That's what made Dink sore and give him a scheme. I heard him talking to Joe Nitchki and Rufe Smalling one evening in the hotel. We was playing bridge in one room and the door to Dink's adjoining room was open, so I couldn't help hearing.

"It's this way," Dink was saying, with his voice like ice. "Everybody knows that this big sap, Morris, has been writing those letters to himself. Now I got a scheme which will knock him for a goal, and give us a big holler."

"What is it?" inquires Joe. "Something good?"

"It's perfect. Sylvester never got but one real fan letter in his life, and that didn't have no name or address. It drove him nuts. Now what I propose is that he should get a warm letter from a hot mamma which would give her name and address and arrange to meet Sylvester."

"Yeh," says Rufe Smalling: "That is a good hunch, but how are you gonna arrange it?"

"Easy enough," chuckles Dink. "I got a girl over in Brooklyn which I will get to write Sylvester and also to meet him. And when she has him going around in circles, we will all get together and present Sylvester with the biggest razzberry that ever grew. We'll flatten that guy out so he'll wish Eve never had of been born."

They agree it is a fine scheme, and for a few hours I figure maybe I had better warn Sylvester what is coming.

But I am afraid to start something. I have been with the club a long time and me and Lee Martin, the manager, are good friends. Lee is fighting hard for a pennant, and his club ain't so strong that it can stand any bad breaks. Now, I figure, if I tip Sylvester off—he is a big strong guy with a hot temper, once it's roused—he is liable to take a crack at Dink or Joe or Rufe, and first thing you know the club would be all tore up with trouble and we wouldn't have a burglar's chance to finish better than third.

I finally decided I had better let Sylvester take it.

I'll hand Dink Jewell one thing: He didn't lose no time, and the letter that girl wrote was a darb. It got to Sylvester a couple days later and here is what it said:

"Dear Mr Morris: I don't know just how to start this letter because when a young girl writes to a famous and handsome man like you, she runs the risk of being thought unmaidenly and lacking in those qualities of pure American womanhood which honest ball players like. But I have seen you play so often that I must let you know what a change you have made in my life. I would love to meet you, but don't suppose you have time to waste on a poor little girl like me who isn't even a millionaire's daughter. Please either destroy this letter or telephone me at home for a date. Your fond admirer,

"LORAINE MARSHALL."

Sylvester like to et the lockers when he got that letter. It was real, you see, and it give an address on Bedford avenue, Brooklyn; and a telephone number. Dink read the letter out loud (except for the name, which Sylvester had left on but asked him not to mention) and he pretended like he was very much impressed.

"Ain't you even gonna follow this one up, Sylvester?"

"Oh! I dunno. * * *"

"I think you ought to. Remember, this ain't no millionaire's daughter, so if you don't give her a thrill, she would just think you was high-hat."

Sylvester thought that over. Then he got busy. And I'll say one thing for him: Once he got under way, he was a heavy swain. Every evening almost he was with that dame; Coney, the movies, harbor trips, dances and the theater.

I commenced to get worried, because it is plain to me that this Loraine has got him hooked, and only for the fact that Dink seems kind of sickish himself I would have told Sylvester something.

I know that things was all right between Sylvester and Loraine, because when a ball player is just mixed up with a skirt he talks about it. But when she is a nice girl and he is goofy about her—he don't talk much. And Sylvester had plumb quit talking.

Only once did I mention anything to anybody. I dropped in Lee Martin's room one night. Him and his wife was playing double canfield.

"Lee," I says, "did you ever happen to meet a girl of Dink Jewell's in Brooklyn?"

The wife looks up.

"Loraine Marshall, you mean?"

"Uh-huh. That's the one."

"Sure I know her—and she's one dandy girl. The only thing I have against her is that she runs around with Dink."

Is she all right for a dumb-bell like Sylvester?"

"She's fine," says Mrs. Martin, heartily. "Of course I know all about this little joke of Dink's, but you can bet that Loraine isn't going to make him suffer. She's A-Number-One. I've known her a long time and so have most of the players' wives. She's right."

"I hope so," I says, "but it just don't seem to gee—her being such a good scout and yet liking Dink."

"Who says she does? Dink?"

"Sure."

"Well, he's the sort of bird that thinks every woman who looks at him twice is wondering why he wasn't born twins so he could marry her twice. He only met her because she was friendly with some player's wife, and I guess she stands him because it makes her feel like one of the crowd, and also because Dink is kind of keen about her."

I see Loraine Marshall once a few days later. She is in the grandstand and Sylvester points her out to me.

She's right pretty, not too young, and has nice, honey-colored hair. Wholesome-looking girl, what I mean: and I felt better when I saw her. I got Sylvester to talk about her a little but it wasn't much. She was boarding in the same house where Chick Johnson and his frau was hanging out, and her and Mrs. Chick was good buddies.

One week later we start on our first Western trip. We are to swing around the circuit, and when the train leaves Sylvester don't look no happier than a fish being introduced to the frying pan.

I can see right away that this big bimbo has got it bad. I hope that Mrs. Martin had the straight dope when she said that Loraine wasn't cut in the head over Dink.

We open in St. Louis, and win. That night there is a big party, also the next night there is another party, and I might even say that there are lots of happy evenings during that series. I try to make Sylvester go along, but he will not do so. In fact, every night when I come home he is suffering from writer's cramp, having been decomposing love letters all night.

And it is them letters which was important. Of course Sylvester didn't offer to show them to me, and I never would of asked him. But after all the trouble started, I got a slant at them missives he was indicting night after night through the whole Western trip and I tell you that some of them was lulus. I will quote just a few of them, which I have since seen, so that you can get a hunch what was brewing back East where the lonely wives was wondering how their poor husbands was getting along without them. Here is one letter I seen later but which was written from St. Louis:

"Dear Girlie:

"I am sitting all alone in my room, wishing that I was with you and you was with me. I do not care for nothing no more except aforesaid being together. And that is not no lie because last night there was a big party and I would not go on it. Chick Johnson come in the room with a large, handsome blonde, and with him was Dink Jewell with a brunet, and Joe Nitchki had him a girl that was halfway between the two others, and they said they had another girl which either I or Mac could have. Mac got her. I did not have no desire to go on no party because I was thinking only of you and was not interested in these other wimmin which looked cheap and toddry to me. So I am sitting here alone thinking about you and when I finish this letter I shall read some magazine stories to improve my mind because I think it is a waist of time for a man to run around with a girl he has no idea of marrying, to say nothing of expenses which are unnecessary. I hope you are feeling well. I am too. I got two hits today but the empire robbed me of a homer which he said was foul when it wasent. Yrs. respectfully,

"SYLVESTER."

Just the outpouring of a dumb brute, that letter and all them which follered. Even his reference to Dink didn't mean nothing because of course he did not know then that Loraine was a good friend of Dink's.

Of course if I had known what Sylvester was writing Loraine I would have stopped him, but nobody knew about it until long afterwards.

As a matter of fact, I don't think Sylvester dreamed he was causing any trouble. All around the circuit he wrote them kind of letters. He wrote about the night Eddie Stevens lost a hundred and ninety bucks playing two-dollar stud; he wrote about the time Dink Jewell and Chick Johnson slugged a cop and had to pay a couple big fines. He wrote about parties and dances and all.

Well, we finally got back East and that afternoon when we gathered in the locker room mighty few of the married men looked very happy. In fact, they was kind of sullen.

You see, according to Loraine's story, she had left one of her letters lying open and Mrs. Chick Johnson had happened to walk in the room and see her husband's name. It was the letter which announced that Chick had been in the company of a large and handsome blonde.

Well, Mrs. Chick was plenty sore and didn't mind talking. She made Loraine show her all the other letters, and she told all the wifes about what their husbands was doing on the road to keep from getting homesick. Also, she made them promise they would not write nothing and would not even tell where they got their dope because Loraine insisted that she did not want to get Sylvester in bad.

So it seems that for several days the married men which had kept from being bored on the Western trip was catching plenty at home. Their wives would not tell what it was they knew or where they found out.

We was home for a long stay, barring an occasional short series in the East, and things got real bad. Lee Martin knew something was wrong, but he didn't know what it was. The team was playing ragged, and there wasn't no harmony whatsoever on the club.

And then the truth come out, and once again Mrs. Chick Johnson could be thanked for it. It seems that she had been lighting into Chick awful strong and finally he bust out and told her where to go. He said he was tired of her insinuations—and didn't care anyway.

With that she hands him a mess of facts and figures. It kind of put him down for the count and he was crazy enough to deny everything. That sent her higher than a kite and she told him how she had found out—by the letters which Sylvester had been writing to Loraine.

The next day in the clubhouse Chick called Sylvester a lot of mean names and explained to everybody why he was doing so. The wife learned that Mrs. Chick had let the cat out of the bag and right away all bets was off.

Family rows, and how! Every married man was taking it on the chin plenty. And that was when the wifes got together and decided that if things didn't improve they was going to travel with the team on its next Western trip.

That was a pretty how-dye do, because if Lee Martin has got one ironclad rule, it is against wifes traveling with the team.

Finally there was a big meeting of some of the ball players, some of their wifes and Manager Martin. As I am sort of Lee's assistant, I was there.

Well, the wifes laid down an ultimater that if they didn't go on the next long trip there wasn't gonna be no long trip. Lee listened, getting madder all the time. Finally he busted in:

"What do you think this is, anyway?" he demanded to know. "A bloomer girls' team?"

"We're going with our husbands," asserted Mrs. Chick.

"You ain't gonna do nothing of the kind. I got a rule on this club against wives traveling with the team, and that rule holds."

Well, they look at one another and realized that there ain't nothing doing.

Then Lee starts in and tells them to lay off nagging their husbands, because otherwise the ball team ain't got a chance.

"They have been playing like a bunch of bushers," he says. "And just when we was started for a pennant and a slice of the world series dough! Now I'll make you girls a proposition: Leave these boys alone and if they pull us into the world series, I will give each player's wife a six-hundred-dollar fur coat by the end of October."

Thus it was that the meeting busted up in smiles, because most women are fond of fur coats, even if they have got one already.

Except for Dink Jewell everybody was happy for the next week or so. Dink seemed kind of whipped. I got it from Joe Nitchki that Loraine was sore at Dink for starting something, and blamed everything on him. Also, Joe thinks that Dink had started to kid about Sylvester and Loraine had done everything short of tear him to pieces. I'll say one thing for the dame, she may not of had much sense being Dink's friend in the first place, but she was showing plenty of good judgment in falling for Sylvester.

I think everything is fine until one day I have a chat with Lee Martin. He ain't satisfied, and says so:

"These women are all okay now," he says, "but that is because their husbands are still here where they can be watched. Once we get on the road for a long trip things will be different."

"Didn't you promise to see that the boys stayed sweet, Lee?"

"Don't make me laugh. I got a swell chance of keeping a gang of hardboiled ball players from having a good time if they want. I can stop the real rough stuff, of course; but playing nursemaid ain't up my alley at all."

"You told them.* * *"

"I'd of told them anything to make 'em quit yawping. But that don't mean I ain't worried. This Complete Letter Writer we carry with us has got me cuckoo."

"Ain't there nothing we can do about it?" I inquire.

"Me and the Little Woman are thinking," he answers. "We're trying to cook up an idea."

The club starts winning again; maybe because them dames was thinking of the fur coats they would get out of the world series. And all this time Sylvester is giving Loraine a real rush. Seems like Dink Jewell has just been eliminated, which is what he deserved for starting the mix-up in the first place.

Then one night about a week before we are to leave on that next Western trip, Lee Martin wants to know won't I join him in a little party. His wife is gonna be there and also Sylvester and Loraine.

Lee rents an auto and we start toward Westchester. Mrs. Martin rides in front with Lee and I am parked in the back with Sylvester and Loraine.

We have a cozy little booth at a Westchester inn, way off from the crowd. It might just as good have been a private dining room. We drift through a swell dinner, and all the time Loraine and Sylvester are touching feet under the table and just looking at each other.

Along about 10 o'clock I see a newspaper boy I know and he calls me over. At the same time Lee and his wife get up to step a few and this leaves Sylvester and Loraine alone in the booth.

The dance ends, and I join Lee and the wife as they starts for the booth. We circle a potted palm, and all of us commence blushing.

Finally Lee's voice booms out, in his usual tactful way: "If you two ain't engaged," he announces, "you ought to be."

They break the clinch. Loraine looks happy but calm. Sylvester appears like he wishes he could sink through the floor. He takes a glance at Loraine.

"Are we?" he asks.

"We are," she answers. "And we would have been long ago if you had asked me."

The ice is then completely broke.

"When are you gonna get married?" inquires Lee.

"I—I don't know," says Loraine, in a funny little voice.

Lee Martin leans across the table. "Why not tonight?"

They look at each other—them two kids—and their eyes are most bursting from their sockets.

First thing you know we are in the car and off for the license at some place where the clerk happens to be a friend of Lee's. Inside of two hours we are saying nice things to Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Morris.

We are very happy after we leave the bride and groom, but Lee Martin seems a different kind of happy from the rest of us.

"Why the glee?" I ask him.

"Plenty reason," he answers. "My troubles are ended."

'How come?"

"Well," he says, "did you notice that this immediate marriage stuff was all my suggestion?"

"I sure did, Lee. I never before seen a couple get such a bum's rush to the altar."

"In ten days," says Mr. Martin, "we go on the road again for a long trip."

"But," I inquire, 'how does that end the club's troubles?"

"It's a cinch," retorts Lee. "When we start on that trip Sylvester's honeymoon will have worn off. And, my friend, I know from experience that there ain't a married man in the world who would write the truth to his wife about what really happens when the team is out of town."

Where the United States Began

of figures. But that gap between the Shenandoah iron works that never came to be, and the Pittsburgh or the Bethlehem of 1931, says a great deal. Somewhere in that gap lies the dividing line between two eras, ours and Washington's. And the difference between the two is so unthinkably great that we should certainly be total strangers if we could return to Washington's day, and it's a question whether even he could feel at home in ours.

Hardly had Washington rounded out a performance that represented realization of 400 years of human striving for liberty and the right of self-government, when another era was ushered in which will take its place as an even sharper shift in human destiny. A very few years after Washington was laid away in his vault at Mount Vernon, a man in Scotland presented to the world a contrivance which he called the steam-engine. His name was Isaac Watts. Now it will be a question which has played the greater part in shaping the story of mankind, Washington's sword or that little invention.

Not since stone age man discovered or invented the wheel itself has anything like it happened. As for the physical changes wrought by Watts and his immediates successors, Stephenson, Arkwright and the rest, we see and we enjoy them every day. We all know what they are—electric light and power, the automobile, the moving picture, the radio and aeronautics; things undreamed about in Washington's time. As for the meaning of these and their possible good, the wisest among us are not yet sure. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler contents himself with pointing the change, but not even he will risk a guess as to where it will lead.

He calls this introduction of machinery, this new method and vast extension of the production of wealth, a "shift in the center of gravity, from politics to economics, from the pursuit of liberty to the pursuit of wealth;" and he thinks we may be committed to this new passion for material gain for perhaps another 400 years. But this is beside the point. The point is not what the United States or the world is to be a hundred or 400 years from now, but what it is today, and what George Washington, if he returned in this year we mark out in his special honor, would have to say of it.

How much of what we do and what we are in this suddenly and utterly changed world would he approve? It is easy to toss the question aside as the idlest of speculation. But it had better be answered. In the mind of every good American it is sure to rise. To him, the 200th year since Washington's birth will seem an especially good time to cast about and reckon how far the country has been kept on the rails laid down by Washington. Different though the United States may be from the country he knew and the nation he had in mind, it was he who made it possible, and no one who bears him the slightest feeling of gratitude can escape a thought as to what we have done with the trust.

In one of his diaries Washington records the fact that after hauling his "seins" one day, he enjoyed an open-air dinner on the bank of the Potomac near the white house of Mr. Fairfax. On the spot where Washington dined is now one of the hatcheries maintained by the Bureau of Fisheries in a Department of Commerce unknown and unthought of by President George Washington. He fished his Potomac with no questioning that extensive future fishing would endanger the plenitude of that or any other of America's teeming rivers. Last year the Fishery Bureau's fish-cultural service stocked the country's streams with 7,570,000,000 fish and fish-eggs—millions of them for the sportsman's delight alone.

The Washington who left such a complete portrait of himself in his own handwriting would approve that and everything like it that we do. It will wrench no American's sense of the fitness of things to think of electric lights, the telephone, the radio, refrigeration, and all the gimcracks in every American house, doing their appointed work in Mount Vernon, the home of a man who delighted to establish there the newest oil lamps of the time. Everything we make or do on the colossal scale would be comprehensible to a man who visioned and began a canal to bind the new Ohio region to the East—for political even more than for economic reasons. The airplane, all our science and invention, would suit him. Only on coming to the social, and perhaps the political structure, might he shake his head.

But here is a world literally and thickly populated by machinery. As a new and enormously more productive means of creating wealth developed, as one prospering factory provided the capital for more factories, as jobs accordingly multiplied, nature filled in the vacuum and provided the workers by the million. Now the intricate system, victim of its own complexities, is slowed or stopped, and so are these, the most dependent upon it and the least able to fend for themselves. What Washington would think of this does lead away into speculation. But again we have his written word for a guide. To lick his rank and file into military shape, he laid the lash across their backs with as little stint as mercy. Yet to feed and clothe them and see to their comfort, he fought with Congress and with the country whenever their hardships themselves fell on his heart like a lash.

In this we may find no practical hint in handling a modern problem that might baffle Washington himself, but he has set us an example of the spirit in which it should be attacked.

When Washington rose in that historic Virginia meeting and ended a day of oratory with the calm announcement that he would organize a regiment at his own expense and in person lead it to the defense of Boston, he knew that he placed in immediate jeopardy his neck along with his property. Throughout the revolution the issue was in doubt, but the jeopardy was not. In the end his life, his goods, and his country were saved; but throughout the eight years of risk and suspense, he never by a breath regretted that he had placed the good of his country first, his personal interests second.

In 1932 it should not be necessary for Washington's return, when the mere recollection of this conduct of his should awaken thought as to whether, in this day of the rapid accumulation of wealth, a little more attention might be paid to the public good and a little less to private gain. On the part of some, at least, this thought is apt to enter in, as we celebrate the birth of this man, two centuries back.

He won independence for his country with a little nucleus of steadfast men, in his army and in civilian ranks. While moral defection whittled away at the faith of the people, while the rest of his army melted away in constant desertions, these others stuck. They stuck through Valley Forge, through an empty treasury, a debased money, and a ruined country. Nothing was left them but their faith in Gen. Washington. With that faith in him, he and they won the war. And they left behind them more than an established land. They left descendants, millions strong.

These are the people who still do most in keeping the country true to its course, as their forbears did before them. Some of them may be poor in riches of money, but none are poor in force of character or faith in country. Beyond the sphere of their daily lives their names may never be known, but wherever they are the quiet example does its constant part in molding opinion and shaping the lives of those about them.

In the past few years one community after the other, especially in the Eastern United States, has celebrated the 200th, the 250th, the 300th anniversary of its settling, in evidence that we are acquiring a new historic sense, a new pride in our age, a new instinct to turn back and be refreshed at the original founts of political principle and social motive. In 1932 something of this may prompt, not scattered communities, but the great community of us all to turn back and ask, not in one pious expression but in a constant inquiry, whether George Washington has been left merely our greatest historic figure, past and gone, or whether he and his teachings are still a living force among us; whether, in these days of merger and radio, there still is meaning, caution and guidance in the words which historians dispute but which, at least on the authority of Livingston, Washington spoke as president of the Constitutional convention:

"Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest may repair; the rest is in the hands of God."

UNCLE SAM and the HOME-MAKER

PEACE is kept in American homes not only by the guardianship of the Army and Navy over the rights of citizens to live peacefully, but by the activities of the Department of State as well in keeping the relations of this country properly adjusted with those of other nations as well.

The ancient boast, "I am a Roman," meant that a citizen of that historic city would be respected and have his rights protected no matter where he traveled. That meant the peace and security of Roman homes just as today the agents of the Department of State in many countries mean that American citizens traveling in them are accorded every possible protection and right.

That is one of the reasons that treaties are made with other countries. If the people of every nation stayed at home there would not be so much work for the Department of State, perhaps. Still the American flag should be a guarantee of safety the world around.

Many American homes are agitated just now because of the work of the bandits in Nicaragua. It is such situations that our Department of State is always trying to prevent. It is as old as the Republic itself and many distinguished men have served as American diplomats, including several Presidents.

At the Department of State are kept the treaties and other important diplomatic papers which have accumulaed since the days of George Washington.

Persons who plan to travel abroad this year should get familiar with the Department of State and its plans for caring for American citizens in other lands. In nearly every city of any size an American counsul, vice consul or consular agent may be found. They have been called "the guides, philosophers and friends of traveling Americans everywhere." There is a great deal of truth in this as many an American can testify who has had occasion to use their services while traveling abroad.

Just as the Department of State is the friend of the American homemaker far from her lares and penates, so the Uncle Sam and the Homemaker Page of The Washington Sunday Post hopes to be regarded as the friend and guide of the homemaker in the problems of the home. In order to do this the vast resources of the Government in helping to solve these problems can be called into action.

The various Government agencies and bureaus are ever active in their search for ways to solve domestic problems. If you wish more detail on any item published on this page today or have a problem that Uncle Sam might be able to solve write to "Uncle Sam and the Homemaker, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.," and send with it a self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply and an answer will be found.

Front and rear view of a boy's sun suit.

Modern Overalls For a Small Boy.

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

THE small boy should come in for his share of attention in the summer sewing. He will have need for just as many sun suits, rompers and other washable garments as his sister, and many of these can easily be made at home at moderate cost. Here is a sun suit which might be called a "modern overall." The old type of overall used to be made of coarse thick drilling with trousers reaching to the ankles. It not only made a child's legs hot, but made them dirty by fanning dust and grit up from the ground. It was clumsy and difficult to launder and unattractive when worn. The modern version of the overall serves the same purpose—a comfortable, practical play suit for warm days—but it is cool and light and planned for the greatest possible freedom of movement and exposure of skin surface to the health-giving rays of the sun. It is gay and bright in color, appealing to any child, especially to a boy, and easily washed and ironed.

The Bureau of Home Economics has designed a number of sun suits for children, including this one of cretonne, which is particularly intended to meet youthfully masculine ideas. It has straight short trousers, bound with plain material matching one of the colors in the cretonne, and a very comfortable one-piece back, which buttons onto the trousers, with ample allowance for letting out as the boy grows. The side buttonholes on this sun suit have been placed on the front section so they will be easier for small fingers to reach. Shoulder straps crossing in the back might be used to carry out the overall effect, still further, but they should be cut wide at the shoulder and fit close to the neck so that they will not pull down the middle of the shoulder, nor cause poor posture. As much as possible of the child's skin surface—beneath the arms, at the neck and legs, is left exposed to the sun's rays. If the small boy has a tendency to batter his knees the legs of the trousers can be lengthened to protect them.

The Bureau of Home Economics has no patterns to distribute. This little suit can be easily adapted from a plain romper pattern.

Ultra-Violet Light.

Ultra-violet light, which recently was employed in the determination of fraudulent works of art, has been found to increase the production of reproductive bodies in certain lower forms of plants. Mrs. Alice A. Bailey, assistant pathologist of the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, discovered that a certain bulb-rotting organism, which had never been known to produce the "seeds" by which the proper classification of the organism might be made, would form these bodies after irradiation with ultra-violet light. Since the ultra-violet light has some extremely dangerous components—such as those that cause sunburn—Mrs. Bailey found it necessary to filter out the deleterious rays by using certain types of glass filters.

Plain Window Curtains Best When Wallpaper Is Figured

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

THE choice of curtains for any room is determined by its use, the character of the wall, and the other furnishings. If the wallpaper is figured there is already much color and design in the room. To add more pattern, usually of a different kind, in the window hangings would produce confusion and restlessness. However, an interesting contrast may be secured, according to the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, by using plain curtains when the wallpaper is figured. They may repeat the background color of the paper or one of the dominant hues in the design.

The illustration shows a successful window treatment for a room of this kind. The ceiling is rather low and the divisions in the wall space tend to make the window seem shorter than it really is. For this reason simple curtains were selected and made to emphasize the straight vertical lines. The side draperies were finished at the top with a French heading which divided the fullness into well-defined pleats. Shaped tie-backs were used to hold them in soft, graceful folds. French heading hooks, such as are described in Farmers' Bulletin 1633-F, on window curtaining, were sewn to the back of each pleat and used to attach the curtains to the rod.

The tan cotton poplin chosen for the draperies is slightly darker than the deep creamy background of the paper and blends with the lower part of the wall and the woodwork. Deep ecru dotted filet net was used for the glass curtains. They were finished at the top with an inch heading and a small casing through which the rod was run. The lower edge was finished with a 2-inch double hem.

When planning curtains, an allowance for shrinkage should always be made. An extra 2 inches may be added when cutting them, and after the curtains are hemmed an incouspicuous tuck may be basted to the wrong side just below the casing. It provides a practical means of having the curtains the proper length at all times, and can be quickly and easily ripped out before they are laundered.

Timely Tested Recipes from The Bureau of Home Economics

Department of Agriculture.

Interesting Seasonings Distinguish Good Cook

The difference between an interesting and an indifferent meal often lies in the skill with which seasonings have been used. In the preparation of meat dishes, gravies, soups and salads, the homemaker can produce results that compare favorably with those of the restaurant chef if she keeps on hand a variety of condiments and seasonings and changes from one to another according to what she is serving. The Bureau of Home Economics makes a number of suggestions as to good seasonings that are available everywhere.

In addition to flavors that keep well over an indefinite period, such as celery seed, peppercorns, curry powder, cloves and poultry seasoning, parsley, mint and celery tops may be dried and kept in air-tight jars. Chili sauce, pepper or tabasco sauce and various bottled meat sauces are also valuable in giving piquancy and change of taste to different meat gravies and soups. Capers, pickles and olives have their places in gravies as well as in salads, and so have vinegar, lemon juice and tart jellies. Of these all but lemon juice can be stored for some time.

The skillful use of garlic in cooking is what distinguishes many French dishes. The initiated may know that the chicken has been stewed with one tiny garlic button in the broth; others merely wonder why Mrs. A's fricassee or creamed chicken is always so delicious, while Mrs. B's is merely flat. When garlic can not be obtained a small onion may be used. What is wanted is just a "suspicion" of the garlic or onion flavor, as the French say. A good salad maker rubs a clove of garlic around the salad bowl before she mixes her dressing; another good cook drops a small piece in the soup or stew and soon removes it.

Many of the flavors just mentioned can be grouped on a special handy shelf and used as need arises. Use most of them sparingly. A minute amount of curry powder improves a brown gravy even when you do not wish to make a curry sauce. Many people like a little curry with lima beans. Curry is the distinctive flavor in mulligatawney soup. Again, half a bay leaf will be sufficient to flavor three quarts of soup made from meat stock. A single mint leaf is sometimes cooked with fresh peas. A few capers add much to chicken salad or to gravy for lamb.

The flavor of stews, soups, braised meats and pot roasts is much improved if the vegetables which are cooked and served with them, such as onion, carrots, green peppers, turnips, celery, tomatoes and others, are fried in a little fat before being cooked with the meat. Many of these vegetables can be kept on hand for several days until wanted. Onion juice may be extracted by using a lemon squeezer. Parsley may be grown in the house all winter. Or it will keep a week or more if stored in a closed mason jar in the refrigerator. Lemon juice improves the flavor of some meats, especially veal.

Fruit Punch.

About 50 people can be served with punch made from the following recipe. While strawberries are in season it is a splendid beverage for May festivals, school and church sociables, June graduation parties or even a June wedding. The proportions have been tested by the Bureau of Home Economics and found to result in a very satisfactory blend of fruit flavor. One secret of making any punch evenly sweet is to prepare a sirup from the sugar and water instead of using plain sugar, which often remains undissolved at the bottom of the punch bowl.

4 cups sugar.
3 cups water.
2 dozen lemons.
1 dozen oranges.
2 quarts strawberry juice, bottled, or 2 quarts crushed fresh fruit.
2 quarts freshly made strong tea.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
1 quart ginger ale or carbonated water.

Boil the sugar and water together to make a heavy sirup, and cool. Scrub the oranges and lemons and squeeze out the juice. Barely cover the fruit skins with water, let stand for an hour or longer, pour off the water and add to the fruit juice. Add the other fruits and the tea. Just before serving, add chopped ice, the ginger ale or carbonated water, and if the punch is too strong, ice water in small quantities until the punch is the flavor desired.

Rhubarb Pie With Crisp Under-Crust.

People who have lived in the country think of rhubarb pie almost the minute spring is really under way. A good many of them know the secret of a perfect rhubarb pie, which will always have a crisp undercrust. There are, in fact, two little secrets about a really good rhubarb pie. The crust should be prebaked before the filling is put in, and the juice should be slightly thickened with cornstarch. Then the pie won't be soggy, nor will the juice leak out. The Bureau has been giving the following recipes for rhubarb pie every spring for several years:

4 cups raw sliced unskinned rhubarb.
1 tablespoon water.
2 tablespoons cornstarch.
1 cup sugar.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
2 tablespoons butter.
Pastry.

Simmer the rhubarb and water for a few minutes and drain. When the juice has cooled add the cornstarch, which has been mixed with the sugar and salt, and cook until thickened. Add the rhubarb and butter and mix thoroughly. Pour the hot fruit mixture into a baked pastry shell, add the top sheet of dough and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees to 400 degrees F.) for 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown.

Furniture Now Treated To Guard Against Moths

Leading manufacturers of mohair fabrics for covering upholstered furniture are now treating their products with solutions said to render the treated fabric immune to attack of moths. Although in its laboratory work the United States Department of Agriculture has found no solution that will make any fabric permanently and absolutely moth proof, the results of its investigations indicate that the better solutions now available can, if properly applied, impart a resistance that is of practical importance. It is possible when buying furniture upholstered in wool tapestries and mohairs to select pieces that have been treated at the factory. Some of these carry guaranties of immunity for several years.

Some retail furniture dealers and household goods warehousemen have fumigating rooms and vaults, where, for a moderate consideration, they will fumigate furniture to kill moths before a purchase is sent to its new home or at any time thereafter. No fumigant is known that will render the treated piece immune to future infestations. The best that can be done is to treat the fumigated piece with a moth-proofing solution. The most effective of these at present available are the fluoride and cinchona alkaloid solutions. Those containing arsenic in any form are not advocated. Mothproofing services are now available in all large cities through storage warehouses for household goods, dry-cleaning establishments, or special agencies. As the solutions are only of value if the covers are thoroughly saturated, applications made at home with small hand sprayers are not likely to be effective. If reliance is to be placed on moth-proofing solutions it is wise to have the solution applied by a power outfit, as discussed in Farmers' Bulletin 1655-F, the Control of Clothes Moths in Upholstered Furniture.

An American Novelist

By WILLIAM LYON PHELPS

A RECENT issue of the London Mercury called attention to an American novelist, Harry Leon Wilson. The Englishman who wrote that article in an English magazine and for the benefit of English readers said that it was astonishing so few English people knew the work of Mr. Wilson. He rebuked them sharply for their ignorance, and reminded them that if they wished to know what American life and American men and women really were, they should read the novels of Harry Leon Wilson. They would find in these books humor and wit and wisdom and literary art. Thus he sounded a trumpet, announcing to Great Britain and Ireland that there was an American novelist now living whom they ought to read.

Well, two years ago in an issue of Scribner's Magazine, I sounded with all my might the praises of this very man and his works. I called attention not only to his novels but to the strange and almost unaccountable fact that he was practically neglected by the professional critics. A very popular reference book on contemporary American literature, giving the names with brief biographies of more than a hundred living American writers, made no mention of Wilson. Since every person of good taste and thousands of others enjoy Wilson when they do read him, why is it that apparently he is not taken seriously as a novelist?

This question is not easy to answer; but I suspect one reason for this neglect is Wilson's spontaneous and gorgeous humor. The only survival of Puritanism in many minds today consists in this they suspect that every book they enjoy with all their hearts can not really be good literature. They suspect that every writer who makes them laugh can not be important.

The astounding instance of Mark Twain should not be forgotten. In 1876 Mark Twain published "Tom Sawyer." In 1884 he published "Huckleberry Finn." We know now that these two books are not merely entertaining American stories; we know that they belong to the masterpieces of the world. Yet it was not until after 1900 that their author was treated with respect by American literary historians and professional critics. Many writers who are now entirely forgotten were given more serious consideration than he. One of the best critics in America said that it would be ridiculous to compare Mark Twain with Oliver Wendell Holmes.

There is no accounting for such blindness except by the fact that "humorists" were supposed to be nothing but jokesmiths.

For many years Harry Leon Wilson was editor of Puck, a famous comic periodical. And his own novels abound in comedy—the comedy of situation and the comedy of character and the comedy of dialogue.

His novels are works of art. They are just as dignified and eminent works of art as if they were dull; as if they dealt only with the sordid and degenerate phases of humanity; as if they contained not a single character that a rational person would ever wish to know.

Furthermore, in their setting, in their men and women, in their conversations, they are truly representative of American life in the twentieth century. Those who wish to read novels that will combine diversion with intelligence will make no mistake if they will read "The Boss of Little Arcady," 1905; "Bunker Bean," 1912; "Ruggles of Red Gap," 1915; "Lone Tree," 1929.

For there is in these stories invariably a good plot, a good fable, a good yarn, which, even if it were badly written, and spotted with unreal characters, would still command interest by its very nature and structure. But there is also an acute though kindly criticism of American life and customs and speech, which gives the reader plenty of material for serious and profitable reflection. And there is also a quality of illumination which especially in the latest novel, "Lone Tree," is something more spiritual.

In the novel "Lone Tree" there is literally not one dull page. From the first line to the last, the reader's interest is caught and held; and there are passages that are profoundly affecting, because they appeal to one's deepest feelings without a single trace of forced sentiment or shallow philosophy.

And there is that contrast between the sincerity of life in the open and the artificiality of life in confined areas, which makes every reader feel like opening the windows.

The hero of "Lone Tree" is not "nature's nobleman" or one of the "strong, silent men" of the plains that the movies have turned into a laughing-stock. He is simply a real man, whose reality appears all the more refreshing in contrast with his enforced environment.

I say that Harry Leon Wilson is a creative and purely American novelist, whom we can read with delight and whose subtle art is so unpretentious that many fail to see it at all.

I am glad that he has found a champion in the leading British literary periodical for all Americans should be glad to have him read by foreigners.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters.

A Mysterious Bracelet Defies Helen's Detective Technique

THE sedate hotel room vivid with flowers. Colorful vases flaming the dressing table, the desk, the stand between the beds.

Helen glancing over the ribbon-tied cards with their gracious greetings.

Always this floral welcome to Munich. A chivalrous tribute from Warren's many business friends.

Arrived last night, a whole joyous week before them. This evening beginning the dinner festivities.

What to wear? Dr. Weil, wouldn't take them to a too-formal place. Her silk suit with that corsage of gardenias.

A peremptory knock. Warren? No, a liveried boy with another long box. More flowers!

Wondering where to put them as she unwrapped the green tissue. A sheaf of crimson tulips.

Startled by the alien glitter of gold—

Around the stems—a bracelet! An antique gold bracelet!

A breathless search of the box. Shaking out the flowers.

No card!

Verifying the address. Yes, "Mrs. Warren E. Curtis, Hotel Marienbad."

In a romantic glow, slipping on the bracelet. Really old and fine, with a quaintly wrought clasp.

A thrill at the perfect present. Who could have sent it?

Dr. Weil? Courtly, scholarly—capable of this graceful European gesture.

Touching the "Zimmermadchen" bell at the door. The friendly Bavarian girl soon bringing another vase.

Still puzzling over the mysterious gift, Helen finished dressing.

Pinning on the waxen gardenias when the door banged open.

"Good grief, smells like a funeral!" Warren tossed his hat on a tapestried chair. "All the the florists in Munich must be sold out."

"Dear, look!" holding up her wrist. "This bracelet came around those tulips. And without a card. I can't imagine——"

"No card, eh?" ripping off his coat. "Now lay out my things. Meeting Dr. Weil at seven. Less'n half an hour."

As he splashed in the bathroom, Helen getting his linen from the trunk.

Perhaps the Hirsches? But no, already those roses from them.

"You don't suppose the card was left out on purpose?" when he swung back.

"What card?" intent on his vigorous hair brushing.

"This bracelet! I must thank whoever sent it. Dear, couldn't you help me find out?"

"No, I couldn't!" explosively. "Where's that blue tie? Do your own sleuthing. Always blowing about your detective stunts."

"Someone well off," looking through his ties. "This it? And rather sentimental——"

A disgusted snort from Warren as he snatched up his collar.

"Why, it was a charming thing to do!" defensively. "So continental. No American would've thought of it."

"Huh, lay off the psychology and get your lid. Come on, make it snappy."

"Dr. Weil knows I love antiques," speculatively. "And dining together——"

"If we ever get there," hustling her from the mirror. "Now you've no evidence the doctor sent it. Don't you start feeling him out! Darn awkward if he didn't."

Soon hurrying through the dignified old-world lounge to the dusky street.

A taxi whirling them down the light-twinkled avenue. Past tree-shaded squares and regal buildings. The majestic spaciousness of Munich.

"I always loved this fountain," Helen peering back at the great Wittelsbacher Brunnen with its spouting horses and roaring cascade.

Through the Promenade Platz into the old section of narrow haphazard streets.

Nearing the bulbous-towered cathedral. Almost under its shadow the quaint low building of Augustiner Strasse 1—their favorite old Weinhaus Kurtz.

Dr. Weil already there. A table reserved in the small dark-wooded room to the right.

The headwaiter's recognizing welcome. Rushing to bring the footstool essential to Helen's comfort.

Settling on the leathered wall bench with appreciative familiarity. The rich walnut-paneled walls and ceilings, the high-backed carved chairs.

How she loved these distinctive old German places! Their friendly comfort—the mellowness of age and tradition.

With Warren and the doctor scanning the leather-bound wine list, free to plan her strategy.

Make sure! Too awkward to thank him—then find he hadn't sent it!

But more awkward if he had, and she ignored the gift. So many ways for a card to be left out. And this bracelet too expensive for intentional anonymity.

"I thought to have the pleasure of introducing you to Kurtz's," regretted Dr. Weil, the ordering over. "But I see you know it—and they know you."

"Discovered this long ago. Whenever we're in Munich, at least one dinner here. Your oldest wine house, isn't it?"

"Yes, my grandfather also came here. You like it, too, Mrs. Curtis?"

"Oh, I love it! Not only the food, but the atmosphere. If we could afford it, I'd want to take back this old paneling for our library!"

"Have you bought many antiques this trip?"

"Very little so far. I always get the most in Munich. But I only buy small things—mostly for presents."

"Not all presents," snorted Warren. "Load up with a trunkful of junk——"

His usual nothing-bulky tirade interrupted by the advent of the iced wine.

Helen self-consciously twisting her bracelet. Had the doctor noticed it? Had he mentioned antiques purposely?

An opportunity missed. Now awkward to break in on their discussion of Moselle, Rhine, and Pfalzer vintages.

"Here, we can dispense with these," Warren moved the vase of carnations to the next table. "Give us more room."

"You've such wonderful flowers in Munich," snatching at this opening. "I receive so many here. But I never before found a bracelet around the stems!"

"A bracelet?" noncommittally polite. "The one who are wearing?"

"Isn't it a lovely old piece?" holding it under the roseate lamp. "But no card—I don't know whom to thank!"

"So?" his eyebrows lifted quizzically. "You have no idea?"

"I'm afraid the card dropped out. Such an ideal gift—and so charmingly sent. You Germans have the most gallant way of doing things!"

"For the nation I thank you, Mrs. Curtis," bowing over the table. "But do you know it was a German? Perhaps an American friend here."

"No, no, Americans don't do things like that! They're far too prosaic."

"But most generous! We hear so much of the generous American husband."

"Oh, they're generous! Mr. Curtis gives me everything in the world. But I must select it," laughingly. "He'd never dream of sending a gift so romantically."

"Now stop batting about that bracelet," grumped Warren. "Crime to pass up this salmon."

Helen obediently devoting herself to the Rheinlachs.

Convinced the doctor was the mysterious donor. That amused twinkle behind his pince-nez! But why didn't he want her to know?

Nothing more she could say. Tactless to press it further. At least he knew his gift was received—and appreciated.

Relaxed contentment as the doctor and Warren now talked shop. In this restful old-Munich atmosphere, a perfect dinner.

The roast their favorite German dish—young goose with Apfelmus. A mixed green salad, and for dessert a Salzburger Nockerl.

When the Mokka was finally served, planning the rest of the evening.

"Where would you like to go, Mrs. Curtis? One of the beer gardens?"

"Oh, it's Thursday! Concert night at the Hofbrahaus!" a joyous inspiration. "That great band and the singing——Nothing quite so wonderful!"

"Good, we go to the Hofbrau! But excuse me, please, one moment," rising with a bow. "I must first make a telephone call."

As he hurried off, Helen seized the alone-together chance.

"Dear, this bracelet—why shouldn't he want me to know? I'm sure he sent it!"

"Positive, eh?" a disconcerting grin.

"He didn't?" alertly. "Then you know who did?"

"I could make a darn good guess," unwrapping a cigar.

"Warren, you know!" excitedly. "Who? Tell me, quick—you must!"

"Must, eh?" exasperating nonchalance. "Well, suppose I say I sent it?"

"YOU!"

"Not very flattering," a grunt at her incredulity.

"Why, dear you'd give me a dozen bracelets—but you'd never think to go out and buy—Oh, you know you didn't!"

"Have it your own way," he shrugged. "Don't need to believe me."

"You DID?" breathlessly. "You really mean it? Then why—why didn't you——"

"Meant to tell you," pulling over the ash tray. "But when you sprang the European gallantry line, thought I'd let you puzzle it out."

"But the doctor—why did he act that way? As though he knew?"

"He did! Had him pick it. Knows more about that old stuff than I do."

"Oh, you might've told me!" shrinking back in mortified remembrance. "You let me say all that—what must he think?"

"Had it coming to you," blowing a callous smoke ring. "So darn cocksure no American would've done it."

"But I didn't dream—and with all those other flowers! Dear, why just today?"

Then at his grin—radiant comprehension.

Their anniversary!

Criticizing Warren for lack of sentiment—and she herself had forgotten—

"Oh, I—I don't know what to say," tremulously, fumbling with the bracelet. "I feel so ashamed. But I do appreciate it—dear, you know I do!"

"My surprise package made a hit, eh? Goal one on my sentimental score," tilting back his chair. "Well, hereafter go slow on tracking anonymous gifts. This time your detective bump and your phoney psychology both let you down!"

An Attic Salt-Shaker

By ORTON TEWSON

A CLUBMAN was endeavoring to sell his car to a fellow member. He talked eagerly for half an hour of its virtues, its climbing powers, arguing first that it was as good as new, and then that it was better.

"You say," remarked the friend presently, "that you gave $2,000 for it?"

"No more, and no less."

"Now, I'm going to give you the shock of your life. I am going to offer you $150 for that car."

"And I," said the other promptly, "am going to give you the shock of your life. I'm going to accept it."

Mrs. Arnold Bennett is a charming Frenchwoman. She was formerly Mlle. Marguerite Hebrard and first met the novelist in 1906, when he was living in Paris and doing himself very well.

"Arnold Bennett, the Englishman I had just met, struck me as being a man capable of appreciating a Parisienne at her true value," she relates in her little book about her husband.

They were married soon after.

Like many other distinguished men of letters, Arnold Bennett was not averse to trying his hand at composing "Limericks." Here is one he contributed to Langford Read's "The complete Limerick Book:"

There was a young man of Montrose
Who had pockets in none of his clothes.
When asked by his lass
Where he carried his brass,
He said, "Darling, I pay through the nose."

* * *

A glimpse at George Meredith, amusing himself at the end of his days and cheating infirmities by composing "Limericks" in the vain hope of winning one of the prizes offered by vendors of commodities for the best "Limericks" advertising their goods, is given us by Anthony Hope, author of "The Prisoner of Zenda," in "Memories and Notes."

* * *

Hope Israel Zangwill and Herbert Trench were appointed a deputation representing the Society of Authors to go down to Box Hill and congratulate Meredith, president of the society, on his eightieth birthday in 1908. The prevailing "Limerick" craze was mentioned during conversation and Hope confessed that he had tried his hand at writing them without success.

"I've sent in some, too," said Meredith, unexpectedly. "I send them in in my nurse's name. But I've never got a prize either."

Pierre Loti, the French writer, was, strangely enough for a Frenchman and a sailor, a stanch teetotaler. A Paris newspaper, some years ago, organized an inquiry into the beverages of "the philosophers, the authors and the artists," and in this Loti was persuaded to take part. "I am three-part Mussulman," he wrote. "I never drink any form of alcohol, and never have drunk any. I do not even drink wine or beer."

Zola, too replied that he abstained from alcohol. "I drink nothing but water, and find that I can work best in the early morning, before I have had anything to eat or drink," he replied.

Camille Flammarion's reply was in very different terms: "You are good enough to ask me what I drink, and if pure water agrees with me as a beverage. In reply to the latter query I can only say that I have never drunk water, regarding it as suitable only for external usage. I drink wine—burgundy, Bordeaux, champagne du bleu, du rouge, du rose du gris—any brand so long as it is good, a point on which I am rather particular."

During one of her visits to Rome, Marie Dressler, the actress, went for a walk with Richard Washburn Child, then American Ambassador in the Eternal City. Presently they came upon some gates in the baths of Caracalla. They were locked. Whereupon the influence of Mr. Child reenacted "open sesame," and the two wandered through ancient hanging gardens and amid Roman ruins until they were tired.

* * *

As they were leaving, Mr. Child said to an attendant:

"Why do they try to keep people out of that nice, restful spot?"

"Because," was the respectful answer, "we are expecting them to cave in at any moment."

* * *

For real wit his gem among legal stories takes a lot of beating:

Counsel: I would like to put it this way, your honor. Supposing I were to see your honor going into a saloon. . . .

"Coming in," corrected the judge.

T. M. ("Tim") Healy, first governor general of the Irish Free State, possessed a native Irish wit that was at once the envy and dismay of his political opponents during the many years he sat in the British House of Commons as an Irish member. It was devastating. For instance, when an English member asked how many horses were sent to South Africa during the Boer War, Healy interjected:

"And how many asses?"

* * * *

During a lively Irish Home Rule debate in the Commons, it was reported in the American newspapers that Tim Healy had his silk hat battered during a mix-up. As a matter of fact it wasn't his hat. But next day he received a cable from the mayor of Alexandria, La., declaring that the city council had voted him a new silk hat and asking him to cable the size hat he wore.

* * * *

Healy cabled the information and his thanks at the cost of several silk hats, and received in due course an elegant "topper"—alas! too small—from the mayor and council of Alexandria.

"In token of my gratitude," relates Tim (in his memoirs "Letters and Leaders of My Day"), "I crushed it on my head, and for the next 20 years wore it until my resignation from the House of Commons in October, 1918."

This Henry Ward Beecher story is told by Joseph Bucklin Bishop in his reminiscences:

At a Friday evening prayer meeting in Brooklyn—Mr. Bishop was present—a man arose and with an air of "watch me now and see me put him a poser," asked Mr. Beecher a question—it being question time.

* * * *

"I should like to suppose," he said, "the case of a man who lives an upright and moral life; who is a faithful husband, a kind and generous father, a good citizen, taking part in all good works, gives freely to charity; in short, leads a life above reproach. Yet he is a pronounced disbeliever in Christianity, never goes to church and is nothing less than an atheist.

"Now, Mr. Beecher, I should like to ask you: "Where does that man go when he dies?"

Without changing his position, Mr. Beecher, with an engaging smile, replied:

"He would have my best wishes wherever he went."

* * *

At one meeting presided over by Henry Ward Beecher, a woman arose and entered upon a tiresome harangue on the rights of women, lasting half an hour. The audience evinced unmistakable signs of weariness, but Mr. Beecher sat calm and undisturbed. When she finished, he moved slightly in his chair and with a quiet smile said:

"Nevertheless, brethren, I believe in women speaking in meetings."

Crossing from France to England on one occasion with the prospect of a rough voyage, Maj. Cornwallis-West had as fellow passengers, a Cockney with a very fat wife.

"From their conversation," he chuckles in "Edwardian Hey-Days," "I appreciated, for the first time, the truth about a ginger nut."

She—I s'y dearie, it is goin' ter be rough. I know I shall be sick.

He—Yer'd better 'ave somefink, won't yer? How about a drop of champagne and a ginger nut?

She—I don't mind if I do—but not a ginger nut; they do 'ang about the gums so!

Gadshill Place, for thirteen years the home of Charles Dickens, has a beautiful garden and some fine old cedars. Gadshill formed the desire of Dickens' heart from the days when his age was reckoned in one figure. His father encouraged the fancy and excited the ambition of the child. At 44 he became owner of Gadshill, and one loves to remember that he had "not the heart" to turn out the old rector who had lived there for 26 years, in spite of his own desire to settle in.

D'Annunzio dedicated one of his novels to Anatole France, describing him in the dedication as "one to whom all the faces of truth and error smile alike." On reading this, M. France exclaimed: "It's a back stroke, but very skillfully given," and retaliated by telling this story of d'Annunzio.

When the Italian poet's play "La Pisanella" was being rehearsed at a Paris theater a reporter called on the author. As he was taking his departure the interviewer noticed a cameo ring the poet was wearing. "What an admirable stone!" he exclaimed.

"If you admire it, it is yours," replied d'Annunzio. And immediately removing the ring, he slipped it on to the visitor's finger.

The reporter determined to keep this precious memento, but nevertheless wished to know its monetary value. On his way home he entered a lapidary's shop and showed it to the proprietor, who, without troubling to pick up his magnifying glass, remarked: "A piece of glass; worth about four sous."

"From which I gather," added M. France, "that Gabriel d'Annunzio is an excellent dramatic author."

The Latest Books Reviewed

By ELISABETH E. POE.

A SURVEY of the incoming books shows that modern publishers believe in the dictum of Alexander Pope—borrowed by him from the Grecian sage Lycurgus, "Know thyself. The proper study of mankind is man."

For many of these books discuss the mental state of humanity in some form or other. The problem of human behavior appears to have a unique fascination for the average reader and due to his insistence in learning more about this much mooted question some popular books on mental science get into the best seller class.

Strange to say, summertime shows an increase in this type of reading. The old theory that only fiction can be sold for summer reading has long since been discarded. Nowadays the book shelf at country home is as erudite as the permanent book case in one's town library. In fact, there is a satisfaction in reading some great scientific work in the midst of blossoms, sunshine and the benison of the out of doors.

Will Alfonso XIII of Spain, driven from his throne over night and enjoying a vacation from rulership as the Duke of Toledo, turn to the modern refuge for dethroned monarchs and begin a literary career? His memoirs should have a huge sale and no doubt agents of American publishers are dangling tempting contracts under the royal nose, already. The exile of Doorn has been rather chary with his pen—at least for present publication. There are rumors, however, that he has written exhaustively of his views on what caused the great war, to be published after his death.

If the Duke of Toledo is wise, he will publish his writings now and reap the enjoyment of having furnished a best seller for a world which has grown to look upon kings more or less as museum pieces but is still interested in what they are thinking about.

FATAL INTERVIEW. By Edna St. Vincent Millay. (Harper & Bros., New York City, N. Y.)

A new volume of poems by Edna St. Vincent Millay is always an event in the literary world and it is no surprise to learn that this edition of "Fatal Interview" was oversubscribed before its publication. Miss Millay may claim the proud title of poet without any fear of contradiction. For her poetry contains the essence of poesy, its soul and beauty and art are other ingredients in its charm. The spirit of the master singers of humanity lives anew in her. One feels this instinctively as he reads on and on through this latest evidence of her abiding genius. Far more engrossing than fiction ever could be to the true lover of poetry, it is a "compact box of poetic sweets," to paraphrase Rupert Brooke, that sweet singer of war yesterdays.

Miss Millay finds few difficulties in that most difficult of poetic forms—the sonnet. Undismayed by the fact that only a very few times in literature has it been adequately used, she goes ahead with unerring touch and a sureness that only literary inspiration can give to write in this book an amazing sonnet—sequence.

"The Fatal Interview" is not a book to be read and then forgotten. You will find yourself returning to it again and again, to discover new beauties, to pick at random another diamond of poetic thought or to confirm a poetic impulse of your own. To Washington there must be a particular fitness in the dedication to Elinor Wylie, that major poet whose song was stilled in its full bloom. How potent is Miss Millay's protest against the inevitableness of loss in the lines she inscribes to Elinor Wylie. Simple, indeed, but poetry itself.

To Eleanor Wylie.

When I think of you,
I die, too.
In my throat, bereft
Like yours, of air,
No sound is left,
Nothing is there
To make a word of grief.

It would be cheating the readers of this literary page in The Washington Post not to print at least one of the sonnets in "The Fatal Interview." It is hard to choose from such a glittering pile of gems, but here is one which appealed to the reviewer.

If in the years to come you should recall,
When faint at heart or fallen on hungry days,
Or full of griefs and little if at all
From them distracted by delights or praise;
When failing powers or good opinion lost
Have bowed your neck, should you recall to mind
How of all men I honored you the most,
Holding you noblest among mortal-kind,
Might not my love—although the curving blade
From whose wide mowing none may hope to hide,
Me long ago below the frosts had laid—
Restore you somewhat to your former pride?
Indeed I think this memory, even then,
Must raise you high among the run of men.

FAMOUS EDITIONS OF ENGLISH POETS. By John O. Beaty and John W. Bowyer. (Richard R. Smith, Inc., New York.)

No lover of poesy and of beautiful books could resist the abiding charm of this book. The publishers in bringing it out have conferred a lasting favor upon those who love the poets of Albion, a glorious band of nightingales whose songs were not confined to any one century, although the 20th century is not keeping up to the record in this regard.

Just think of it, eighteen volumes of immortal verse compress into one volume presenting the most famous editions of twelve major poets! At least one page of each original edition is reproduced in photographic facsimile. All ornamental letters, head pieces and original illustrations are reproduced in facsimile. The poets included are Shakespeare, Milton, Dryden, Pope, Gray, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Tennyson and Browning.

The text is accurate and beautifully printed and the volume is attractively bound. This is a book which no true booklover can afford to be without. Once possessing it, it will while away many a gray hour and win a cherished place on the shelf of one's best beloved books.

STRANGE THOROUGHFARE. By Sonia Ruthele Novak. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

This is a book of life and love and endeavor, of wideness of view and an awareness of the small importance an individual has in the scheme of things.

Mme. Novak has written with a clear understanding and tender realization of the emotions of the human heart and brain. This, combined with a rare skill in diction and facility of expression, gives this book a place in the most outstanding of recent fiction.

It is an April kind of girl, Mme. Novak has put in this book, a human girl whose laughter turns to tears and who smiles through her tears.

There is a real courage and strength to the character of Esther, however, which makes her a real factor in the strife of the other human beings around her. She can not be daunted and goes on even when she thinks her vision of success has faded.

THE VINTAGE OF YON YEE. By Louise Jordan Miln. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

A rare vintage of the noblest Chinese blood and the aristocratic English variety is the fate of Yon Yee who, although a mixture of races, is yet a thoroughbred. But marriage with Chinese or with English is a problem which she must face. She is offered love and marriage by a splendid Chinese gentleman and an English scion of a noble race.

Mrs. Miln has etched this story of Oriental and Occidental romance against a new fascinating Chinese background. There is a high note of sacrifice in the Chinese mother's love for her daughter. This book will be sure to have a universal appeal to mothers and daughters in the West and the East alike.

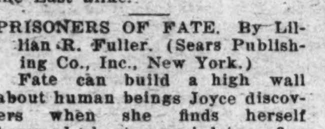
PRISONERS OF FATE. By Lillian R. Fuller. (Sears Publishing Co., Inc., New York.)

Fate can build a high wall about human beings Joyce discovers when she finds herself hemmed about, married to a fine young man and yet in love with another man—a minister of the Gospel.

This is a story of human love, of self-respect and of temptations to break the moral code the characters have set up in their minds.

In Joyce the author has created a very real and very human person who fights with splendid courage but is ruled rather by her heart than by her brain.

The man, with the minister the third of the eternal triangle, also fights a brave fight. These two according to the best rules of fiction, "carry on" the fight and win their battles because of character and integrity. And, of course, all comes right in the end.



"HONOR"

By WILLIAM FAULKNER

hot and dirty. I wanted to be away from her a little while, for Rogers and me to be out where it was cold and hard and quiet, to settle things.

"What do you want to do?" I said. "Will you give her a divorce?"

She was watching my face very closely. Then she let me go and she ran to the mantel and put her face into the bend of her arm, crying.

"You were lying to me," she said. "You didn't mean what you said. Oh, God, what have I done?"

You know how it is. Like there is a right time for everything. Like nobody is anything in himself; like a woman, even when you love her, is a woman to you just a part of the time and the rest of the time she is just a person that don't look at things the same way a man has learned to. Don't have the same ideas about what is decent and what is not. So I went over and stood with my arms about her, thinking, "God damn it, if you'll just keep out of this for a little while! We're both trying our best to take care of you, so it won't hurt you."

Because I loved her, you see. Nothing can marry two people closer than a mutual sin in the world's eyes. And he had had his chance. If it had been me that knew her first and married her and he had been me, I would have had my chance. But it was him that had had it, so when she said, "Then say what you tell me when we are alone. I tell you I have told him everything," I said:

"Everything? Have you told him everything?" He was watching us. "Has she told you everything?" I said

"It doesn't matter," he said. "Do you want her?" Then before I could speak he said, "Do you love her? Will you be good to her?"

His face was gray-looking, like when you see a man again after a long time and you say, "Good God, is that Rogers?" When I finally got away, the divorce was all settled.

IV.

So the next morning when I reached the field, Harris, the man who owned the flying circus, told me about the special job. I had forgotten it, I suppose. Anyway, he said he had told me about it. Finally I said I wouldn't fly with Rogers.

"Why not?" Harris said.

"Ask him," I said.

"If he agrees to fly you, will you go up?"

So I said yes. And then Rogers came out. He said that he would fly me. And so I believed that he had known about the job all the time and had laid for me—sucked me in. We waited until Harris went out. "So this is why you were so mealy-mouthed last night," I said. I cursed him. "You've got me now, haven't you?"

"Take the stick yourself," he said. "I'll do your trick."

"Have you ever done any work like this before?"

"No; but I can, as long as you fly her properly."

I cursed him. "You feel good," I said. "You've got me. Come on, grin on the outside of your face. Come on!"

He turned and went to the crate and began to get into the front seat. I went and caught his shoulder and jerked him back. We looked at one another.

"I won't hit you now," he said, "if that's what you want; wait till we get down again."

"No," I said, "because I want to hit back once."

We looked at one another; Harris was watching us from the office.

"All right," Rogers said; "let me have your shoes, will you? I haven't got any rubber soles out here."

"Take your seat," I said. "What the hell does it matter? I guess I'd do the same thing in your place."

The job was over an amusement park, a carnival. There must have been 25,000 of them down there, like colored ants. I took chances that day that I had never taken, chances you can't see from the ground. But every time the ship was right under me, balancing me against side pressure and all, like he and I were using the same mind. I thought he was playing with me to see. I'd look back at his face, yelling at him: "Come on; now you've got me. Where are your guts?"

I was a little crazy, I guess. Anyway, when I think of the two of us up there, yelling back and forth at one another, and all the little bugs watching and waiting for the big show, the loop. He could hear me, but I couldn't hear him; I could just see his lips moving. "Come on," I'd yell; "shake the wing a little; I'll go off easy, see?"

I was a little crazy. You know how it is, how you want to rush into something you know is going to happen, no matter what it is. I guess lovers and suicides both know that feeling. I'd yell back at him: "You want it to look all right, eh? And to lose me off the level ship wouldn't look so good, would it? All right," I yelled, "Let's go." I went back to the center section and cast the rope loose where it loops around the forward jury struts and I got set against it and looked back at him and gave him the signal.

I was a little crazy. I was still yelling at him; I don't know what I was yelling. I thought maybe I had already fallen off and was dead and didn't know it. The wires began to whine and I was looking straight down at the ground and the little colored dots. Then the wires were whistling proper and he gunned her and the ground began to slide back under the nose. I waited until it was gone and the horizon had slid back under too and I couldn't see anything but sky. Then I let go one end of the rope and jerked it out and threw it back at his head and held my arms out as she zoomed into the loop.

I wasn't trying to kill myself. I wasn't thinking about myself. I was thinking about him. Trying to show him up like he had shown me up. Give him something he must fail at like he had given me something I failed at. I was trying to break him.

We were over the loop before he lost me. The ground had come back, with the little colored dots, and then the pressure went off my soles and I was falling. I made a half somersault and was just going into the first turn of a flat spin, with my face to the sky, when something banged me in the back. It knocked the wind out of me, and for a second I must have been completely out. Then I opened my eyes and I was lying on my back on the top wing, with my head hanging over the back edge.

I was too far down the slope of the camber to bend my knees over the leading edge, and I could feel the wing creeping under me. I didn't dare move. I knew that if I tried to sit up against the slip stream, I would go off backward. I could see by the tail and the horizon that we were upside now, in a shallow dive, and I could see Rogers standing up in his cockpit, unfastening his belt, and I could turn my head a little more and see that when I went off I would miss the fuselage altogether, or maybe hit it with my shoulder.

So I lay there with the wing creeping under me, feeling my shoulders beginning to hang over space, counting my backbones as they crept over the edge, watching Rogers crawl forward along the fuselage toward the front seat. I watched him for a long time, inching himself along against the pressure, his trouser-legs whipping. After a while I saw hs legs slide into the front cockpit and then I felt his hands on me.

There was a fellow in my squadron. I didn't like him and he hated my guts. All right. One day he got me out of a tight jam when I was caught ten miles over the lines with a blowing valve. When we were down he said, "Don't think I was just digging you out. I was getting a Hun, and I got him." He cursed me, with his goggles cocked up and his hands on his hips, cursing me like he was smiling. But that's all right. You're each on a Camel; if you go out, that's too bad; if he goes out, it's just too bad. Not like when you're on the center section and he's at the stick, and just by stalling her for a second or ruddering her a little at the top of the loop.

But I was young, then. Good Lord, I used to be young! I remember Armistice night in '18, and me chasing all over Amiens with a lousy prisoner we had brought down that morning on an Albatross, trying to keep the frog M.P.'s from getting him. He was a good guy, and those damned infantrymen wanting to stick him in a pen full of S. O. S. and ginned-up cooks and such. I felt sorry for the fellow, being so far from home and licked and all: I was sure young.

We were all young. I remember an Indian, a prince, an Oxford man, with his turban and his trick major's pips, that said we were all dead that fought in the war. "You will not know it," he said, "but you are all dead. With this difference: those out there"—jerking his arm toward where the front was—"do not care, and you do not know it." And something else he said, about breathing for a long time yet, some kind of walking funerals; catafalques and tombs and epitaphs of men that died on August 4, 1914, without knowing that they had died, he said. He was a card, queer. A good little guy, too.

But I wasn't quite dead while I was lying on the top wing of that Standard and counting my backbones as they crawled over the edge like a string of ants, until Rogers grabbed me. And when he came to the station that night to say good-by, he brought me a letter from her, the first I ever had. The handwriting looked exactly like her; I could almost smell the scent she used and feel her hands touching me. I tore it in two without opening it and threw the pieces down. But he picked them up and gave them back to me. "Don't be a fool," he said.

And that's all. They've got a kid now, a boy of 6. Rogers wrote me; about six months afterward the letter caught up with me. I'm his godfather. Funny to have a godfather that's never seen you and that you'll never see, isn't it?

V

So I said to Reinhardt: "Will one day be enough notice?"

"One minute will be enough," he said. He pressed the buzzer. Miss West came in. She is a good kid. Now and then, when I'd just have to blow off some steam, she and I would have lunch at the dairy place across the street, and I could tell her about them, about the women. They are the worst. You know; you get a call for a demonstration, and there'll be a whole car full of them waiting on the porch and we'd pile in and all go shopping. Me dodging around in the traffic hunting a place to park, and her saying, "John insisted that I try this car. But what I tell him, it's foolish to buy a car that is as difficult to find parking place for as this one appears to be."

And then watching the back of my head with that bright, hard suspicious way. God knows what they thought we had; maybe one that would fold up like a deck chair and lean against a fire plug.

So Miss West comes in; she is a good kid, only somebody told her I had had three or four other jobs in a year without sticking, and that I used to be a war pilot, and she'd keep on after me about why I quit flying and why I didn't go back to it, now that crates were more general, since I wasn't much good selling automobiles or at anything else, like women will. You know how urgent and sympathetic, and you can't shut them up like you could a man; she came in and Reinhardt says, "We are letting Mr. Monaghan go. Send him to the cashier."

"Don't bother," I said. "Keep it to buy yourself a hoop with."

An Art That Is Really American

table colors, spin it finely by hand, weave it carefully, tightly, to an original design, no two blankets alike. The result is beautiful and fairly expensive jewelry; harmonious, striking, and fairly expensive rugs. To a connoisseur the products are remarkably good value; to the souvenir hunter, impossibly high priced.

Two methods have been found of meeting the souvenir demand. One is to manufacture outright machine-made fakes; the other is to organize the Indians into literal sweatshops, giving them standardized material, designs prepared by white men and repeated ad nauseam. The result is that we are flooded with "Indian curios" which justify one's worst prejudices. What is even more serious, the real Indian artist is having a hard time to earn a livelihood in the face of this competition and is constantly tempted to fall into sweatshop, cheap-jack methods.

We have wasted a good part of our Indian artistic heritage, and in doing so have robbed ourselves. Now there is danger that we shall lose the remainder. Yet within the last few years, through the initiative partly of the Indians, partly of a few white people, important and encouraging developments have taken place. Of these the latest and perhaps the most significant is a movement by the Exposition of Indian Tribal Arts, Inc., to hold a first-rate and comprehensive art exhibition in the Grand Central Galleries of New York next fall. Artists, scientists and friends of the Indians have combined to give him a chance to show himself as an artist to an appreciative and intelligent public and to prove that he is something more than a mere maker of curios.

Such a movement would have been impossible 20 years ago; it is possible today in large measure through the broadening of our artistic ideas, due to modern art. To borrow a Navajo phrase, we have been traveling along different trails of beauty, but now out paths are meeting. Today the Indian artist, the aboriginal, primitive American, stands ready to demonstrate, if we will let him, that out of his ancient tradition and present aspiration he has an important contribution to make to the richness of our modern life.

DUMM and DUMMER

On Bobby Jones and Golf—The Senator Is Sore at Golf Instructors Because Slow Motion Movies Show the Perfect Golfer Doesn't Do Anything as the Teachers Say It Should Be Done.

By H. I. Phillips.

"WHY so agitated?" demanded Representative Dummer, as he found Senator Dumm pacing the living room in high dudgeon and muttering savagely.

"I'm sore," declared the Senator. "Good and sore!"

"Over what?" demanded Dummer.

"Over those slow motion pictures of Bobby Jones," barked the Senator.

"What about 'em?" asked Dummer.

"Don't you read the papers?" replied Senator Dumm. "The slow motion movies of the greatest golfer of all time show that all the dope the professional golf instructors have been giving us duffers all these years is baloney."

"I don't see why anybody needed the Jones pictures to prove that," insisted Dummer. "All you had to do to appreciate that golf lessons were 90 per cent bunk was to watch the brand of golf played by the golfers who took lots of lessons."

"Well, to tell the truth, I always thought golf lessons were applesauce," sighed the Senator, "but these slow motion pictures of Bobby remove all doubt. It'll be a long time before the golfing public recovers from the blow."

"Just what do the views show?" asked Dummer.

"For years Bobby Jones has been considered the perfect golfer," replied the Senator. "It was generally conceded that he had the perfect form. Everybody agreed that his swing was the answer to the duffer's prayer. Whenever a golfer went to the club pro to get a little instruction the pro would charge him from $2 to $5 to emphasize certain supposedly cardinal points of form. Several million golf nuts have spent years trying to master certain movements emphasized by golf teachers, only to discover just now that Bobby Jones, the perfect golfer, doesn't do anything of the kind."

"I'm not surprised," said Dummer. "Nothing I ever got from a teacher did anything but make me play worse golf."

"If there's anything the golf teachers have harped on it's been that little trick known as breaking the wrist," continued the Senator, still excited.

"A lot of golfers would get results if the teachers advised 'em to break a leg," suggested Dummer.

"No question about that," agreed the Senator, "but these Jones pictures prove what I have suspected right along."

"What is that?"

"That the terrible brand of golf seen on American courses is due very largely to the golf instructors," shouted the Senator. "When they threw those slow motion pictures of Jones demonstrating the perfect swing a coupla dozen experts swooned on the spot. The pictures showed them wrong on at least three points they'd been shouting about for years. First of all, Bobby didn't break his wrist on the back swing until the club head had traveled back more than a third of the way. In the second place, he hesitated at the top of his swing to shift his body and get planted before he brought the club head back again. In the third place, he didn't break his wrist at the point of impact, a thing the teachers have been emphasizing as a major requirement of successful driving."

"How about the slow motions of Joyce Wethered?" asked Dummer.

"They showed the same things," said the Senator. "Every golf teacher you ever heard of has taught that the first action at the top of a correct swing was made with the hands to start the club back. Jones and Miss Wethered, on the contrary, are shown to pause at the top of the swing and switch their hips around. In plain words, they are the greatest golfers in the world through not doing what the golf instructors teach."

"The experts will spend most of the next two years establishing alibis," went on Senator Dumm. "Already a lot of them have denied they ever taught the stuff they've been teaching all their lives. They're saying the golfers misunderstood 'em."

"That's one big advantage a golf teacher has over every type of instructor," mused Dummer. "When the pupil turns out to be a rotten golfer, he can always shrug his shoulders and say the feller doesn't do what he's been taught. Now if a teacher of singing turned out a couple of thousand pupils who couldn't sing a note, the professor would be pretty thoroughly shown up. If a teacher of piano went on year after year turning out pianists who never got so they could play the scale without a sour note, he'd have a tough time making explanations. But in golf an instructor never has to give a whoop whether his pupils are good, bad or horrible, so long as they dress right and own a good leather bag."

"He never seems embarrassed or hurt even if his pupils practically spend their lives trying to break 100," put in Dummer.

"He gives a lesson and just lets nature take its course," argued the Senator. "The average golf instructor knows no shame. He can stand on the sidelines and watch one of his oldest pupils take nine putts to a green and never shed a tear."

"I don't see how the golf instructors can take a casual glance at their pupils out there digging up the turf without feeling guilty as hell," said Dummer.

"Did you ever hear of a golf instructor expressing any feeling of chagrin over a pupil's performance?" demanded the Senator.

"I never did," said Dummer.

"And you never will," declared the Senator. "They take the attitude that whatever happens to a golfer, once he leaves the teacher and goes out to play golf with some friends, is his own fault. And the funny thing about it all is that the golfer takes it all uncomplainingly and goes on taking lessons long after he ought to know that they're making his game worse and worse."

"It's the only field of instruction in which a pupil won't demand results or quit," said Dummer.

"The worse his game gets the more lessons he takes," continued the Senator. "It's just one of life's major mysteries."

"But don't you think that this showing up of teachers by the Jones movies will bring a change?" asked Dummer, naively.

"It may, but I doubt it," said the Senator. "The thing about golf that distinguishes it from all other pastimes is that the worse golf a man plays the more he keeps at it. In any other sport he would quit as soon as it became perfectly clear to him and everybody else that he never would be much good at it and would only slow up the game generally."

"They'll all be studying these Jones pictures and trying to imitate his every motion," mused Dummer.

"Exactly," agreed the Senator, "and do you know what it will result in?"

"No. Some of the worst golf ever played in the history of the game," declared Senator Dumm. "Expecting the average golfer to play good golf is bunk. It's a very tricky game, calling for unusual skill. Only one man ever mastered it. The millions of duffers who go out each year and try to excel at the game are just wasting their time. A man either has an instinct for golf or he hasn't, and the more the duffer tries to imitate Jones the more pathetic his game will be. There's only one Bobby Jones and the slow-motion movies won't make any just as good."

"Why not?" asked Dummer.

"Because," concluded Senator Dumm, "golfers are born, not made. And they're made, least of all, by golf instructors and Hollywood cameramen."

Lets Follow the Conestoga Wagon

the car, it depends upon where the tourist stops. If he registers at one of the larger hotels in the congested area of a city he will have to store his car for the night. If, on the other hand, he stops at one of the cozy, smaller places in the outskirts of a municipality, his locked car will suffer none for remaining out overnight.

Free garage storage, or shelter, is provided by many of the tourist lodging houses at no extra cost.

In the main, then, the garage question is settled largely by the character of overnight stopping place selected. Storage is a virtual necessity only in the case of those who stop at the more expensive hostelries and such travelers are the ones best able to meet this additional cost.

Thousands of miles of motor touring in the North, South, East and West provide a personal experience that removes these figures from the realm of theory into the category of established fact. The sole exception, and it is insignificant, relates to the transportation cost figures. The writer's car just happens to be one of the kind mentioned in the third-typical tour, a machine whose fuel consumption is among the highest. But the figures on the other types of cars are not open to doubt.

As to the meals whose costs are set forth, all have been tried. A tour diary whose contents make its writer sound like much more of a gourmet than he is, clearly sustains that fact. It recalls an interlude in New England when food was the immediate palliative for the irritation of the writer and his good wife.

One of those dining cars so popular in the section was at hand. The travelers entered it, not without misgivings. They climbed up on stools and, from soup through a choice of meats and vegetables to a dessert of homemade pudding far better than mother ever made, they enjoyed a meal as tasty, clean and wholesome as any one could ask. And the price was 50 cents apiece. It was made clear that tips were not expected.

Then there were those unforgettable ham sandwiches, piece of apple pie and a glass of cold milk from the cellar of a Tennessee mountain cottage. Asheville and North Carolina's magnificent "land of the sky" has just been left behind a few hours before. Two gasoline pumps outside the cottage were the first reason for the stop. The obvious cleanliness of the place and the hospitality of its owners drew one in, and the food, which cost 25 cents, was a reward that any one would claim.

A 60-cent dinner at a farmhouse in Missouri, another diary entry recalls, produced the highlight of a career devoted to fondness for mashed potatoes and chicken gravy.

Then there are the more formal but quite as delightful table d'hote meals in the finest hotels.

An equal variety of stopping places has been tried. The atavistic instinct for camping out has taken the writer and his wife to tourist camp cottages that were clean and cool and fitted with comfortable beds. These travelers have looked out on quiet moonlit countrysides from windows of farmhouses scattered from New Hampshire to Colorado. Then, again, only the luxury of the large city hotel has seemed a possible release from that end-of-the-day tiredness. At other times, at the $1.50 nightly rate mentioned in the first typical tour, the writer and his wife have enjoyed participating in the home life of many of those fine families who augment their income by opening their homes to motor travelers.

So, everything mentioned in the three typical tours with which this article started has been tried, with some discrimination, of course. From thousands of miles of touring experience the writer knows that this kind of travel broadens one without flattening him financially. That, and because it has so many delights, is why so many millions join the tourist army every summer.

Run o' th' Mine

The Vanished Town.

IN the southwest corner of Bradford County, Congressman L. T. McFadden's bailiwick, a creek known as Cabin Run heads, and if you follow toward its mouth you will come to Barclay. Its streets are choked with berry bushes. Beech trees are growing from the basement of what was Odd Fellows Hall; an oak lifts its branches, trying to fill the sky space once occupied by the spire of the Catholic Church; stores, school house, the smithy's shop and homes of the 2,000 who once made town's bustling life, all have rotted and fallen.

Barclay died 30 or more years ago and the most definite evidence that it once lived and prospered is, paradoxical as it seems, the cemetery.

On a little hillside lie the citizens who long ago ceased from troubling. Some came to thei rest by disease and some were carried into the sunlight from the mouth of the mine, which was the town's life, bereft of their lives. But there was iron in the blood of those Celtic miners; Welch, Scots and Irish, and the calloused hands of the quick gripped the pick which had dropped from the lax fingers of the dead.

From 1856 until 1890 Barclay's life mounted from the whimper of infancy, when coal was first found in quantity, to the full lusty shout of maturity in the '80s and then dwindled and shrunk to the querulous complaint of age to breathe itself out in a tired sigh at the age of 34. But the years between whimper and sigh! They were years!

In those days there were Ryans, Ruttys, Rileys and Bradys no "ind" to use their own word, in Barclay. Bighearted, generous, quick with sympathy and just as quick to fight until "The Father" came to "straighten 'em out a bit." Mass of a Sunday morning filled the little church and sometimes, "thanks be," the altar was covered with mountain honeysuckle, sweeter by far than any bloom whose sun ar wind have been tempered by glass. And "th' childer," man they wer iverywhere, the town seemr "fair bubble wid 'em."

The farmers from the bottoms along the Lycoming and Towanda Creeks made regular pilgrimages to Barclay with garden truck. It was not so much a matter of merchandising as it was friendly visits. "A cup av tea here" and "a drap av th' crathchure there."

Maybe it was an old Scot sunning himself in a yard who invited the peddlers to stop. He was, "sair grupped wi' th' ache in th' bones," he said. "No linimint gives ease an' no flannel, next to the hide of a mon, keeps it ou' that ache in th' bones th' min gives an ould body. Soon or la it comes an' then ye'll swing th' pick no more. Ye're done an' left to dander about i' th' sun, thinkin' o' th' days when ye was a mo an' not an auld stick." He nod his head and looks at the mountains through eyes over which age has dropped its dimming film. He is living in the past.

Suddenly he rouses himself. "Wud ye care to see a grand wild cat, stuffed an' set up wi' glass eyes, glarin' fierce, an' enough like life to scare a wee yin to greetin'?" Inside the house the mounted cat has a place of honor on the center table in the parlor. It is a wild looking creature to be sure, enough to frighten any child to tears. And Angus tells how he tracked and killed it on the mountain side ten years before.

Then came the word: "They're robbin' th' mines." Barclay's day was done. The pillars of coal which had been left to support the roof of the mines were taken out and the families began lea ing. By twos and threes t' went at first and then more more until all were gone. F the little brown rabbits cam live in the town, the squirrel plored through empty cupbo Grouse nested in the thic which sprung up in the stre The descendants of Angus' wi cat came prowling, bears follow and in the morning, when the dew is on, the deer, stepping daintily, feed along the streets. Now these creatures are the only tenants of the town which disappeared, and the Pennsylvania game commission is going to take it ov nd make it a sanctuary for Nature has reclaimed wha took from her the full span life ago.

FOR THE WASHINGTON POST BOYS AND GIRLS

The Junior Post.

SECTION OF THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON, D. C., APRIL 26, 1931.

DEWEY PRIZE WINNERS TO BE SIGNALLY HONORED

They Will Take Part in Services At Tomb of Hero of Manila Bay

WHAT a wonderful place Washington is to live in just now! For a boy or girl with his or her eyes wide open may see passing before them royalties of the Far East, princes of Belgium, American women from all over the country attending the patriotic conventions in the city and at the Corcoran Art Gallery last week boys and girls from all the States attending the annual Congress of the Children of the American Revolution. I wish all the boys and girls who read the Junior Post could see these great sights and especially the Japanese cherry trees which are blossoming around the Speedway. Spring is the loveliest season of all in this world capital and it is as interesting as a play or fairy tale.

This week the Festival of Nations at Constitution Hall under the auspices of the Girl Scouts will bring many of our young people into this beautiful pageantry affair. It is a fine thing for our boys and girls to participate in such affairs.

The Dewey contest winners, announced in today's Junior Post, are Leo Wall and Anna Y. Mahin. The contest winners have been invited by the Woman's Naval Service of Washington to participate in a pilgrimage it is making on Friday, May 1, to the tomb of Admiral Dewey in Bethlehem Chapel in Washington Cathedral. There the Post contest winners will join with children of naval families here to lay flowers on the tomb of the great hero of Manila Bay.

This picturesque pilgrimage has been arranged because the widow of Admiral Dewey who died recently and who is buried beside her husband in Bethlehem Chapel once wrote that she wanted her distinguished husband's burial place to be where children could walk to it easily and "perhaps lay a flower there, and with innocent aspirations try to imitate his simplicity, integrity and valor."

The Woman's Naval Service arranged this pilgrimage to carry out Mrs. Dewey's wishes in this regard and the Junior Post editor is proud of the fact that the Dewey contest winners have been invited to join in it. They will be sent instructions by mail when and where to meet for this purpose.

Our Nation should cherish the memory of its heroes and try to keep the lessons taught in their lives fresh in the minds of its young people. Our boys and girls reading the life of Admiral Dewey today in the winning essays should remember his bravery in sailing into Manila Bay at dawn on May 1, 1898, when he knew it was mined and that every moment might see the destruction of his ships and men. But Dewey took the high risk because he knew it was right and his duty to his country.

Think of that on Friday when the Nation remembers "Manila Day" and why it is called that.

May 1 also marks the close of the Silver Cup contest. So many entries have come in for this contest that it has been impossible to print the tabulated list of the standing of the contestants yet. We now expect to print them up to April 15 next Sunday and then in a week or two the final returns will be printed and the name of the winner of the cup will be announced.

One of the finest things about this Silver Cup contest has been the many new writers and artists it has brought into The Junior Post big family. That is the way we want to grow and we can do it, too, if every present member of The Junior Post Writer's Club invites some other boy or girl to send in a story, poem or picture and in this way join this largest organization for boys and girls in the world where membership is won by writing or drawing something that is good enough for publication.

Our Hero of Manila Bay.

(Awarded $1 Special Prize.)

George Dewey was born in Montpelier, Vt., in 1837. In 1854 he was appointed to the Naval Academy, graduating in 1858 as a midshipman. He was in Farragut's squadron, which forced the passage of Port St. Philip and Fort Jackson, in April of 1862. He was on several vessels in the North Atlantic blockading squadron, then in European squadrons. He was promoted to commander in 1872, to captain in 1884, and to commodore in 1896. In January, 1898, he assumed command of the Asiatic squadron.

George Dewey is noted for his splendid victory at Manila Bay. He began to mobilize the vessels of the American fleet at Hongkong when it became plain that war with Spain was inevitable. Every one thought that Manila Bay had been planted with torpedoes, but, without fear of this thought, Dewey entered the bay on the night of April 31. The next morning he opened fire. The Spanish fleet was under the command of Admiral Montojo. There were two engagements, which lasted less than two hours. Dewey destroyed eleven and captured all other vessels and all land batteries. The Spanish ships Reina Christina and the Castilla were burned, while the Don Juan de Austria was blown up, and the entire Spanish fleet destroyed. Dewey then destroyed the water battery at Cavite and anchored off Manila City, sending word to the governor general that if a shot was fired at his fleet from the city he would lay Manila in ashes.

The Spanish lost about 2,000 officers and men and their entire fleet, including their land batteries, while the Americans lost neither a man nor a ship.

When word came of his victory Dewey was promoted to rear admiral and thanked by Congress. In 1899 he was again promoted, this time to admiral.

This brave heroic man died in 1917.

Clouds.

The clouds that float across the sky
Are driven by the wind which makes the trees sigh;
Many shapes they form while on their flight,
But they seem to vanish with the light.

The clouds bring fresh showers
For the coming pretty flowers;
I cross mountains so very tall,
Some I do not like at all.

Over seas and dales
I have followed trails,
But I love the lakes, which look so cool,
Sometimes I wish I were just a pool.

Flying high, I make so many shapes,
Sometimes I make the women draw their capes;
But I would just like to make a pretty design and die,
As I seem to fly across that long and blue-lit sky.

Red Riding Hood and Little Boy Blue
March along with Marjorie Daw;
The Queen of Hearts, who made some

Is the prettiest that you ever saw.

Old Mother Hubbard walks stately
With her little dog by her side,
And Old King Cole, the merry old soul,
Wears a smile that is very wide.

Little Miss Muffett and Jack and Jill
And old Humpty-Dumpty soon
Take their parts, and they go along
With the cow that jumped over the moon.

Wynken, Blynken and Nod
Sail by in their wooden shoe,
With the three little kittens and Mr.

And Little Jack Horner, too.

They all go by with a wave to us;
Each part is very well played,
And then Mary and Her Little Lamb
End the Mother Goose parade.

Duties of a Citizen.

Every citizen of the United States has certain duties to perform. It is the duty of every citizen to obey the laws and to assist in their enforcement.

It is his duty to know the laws that affect him and his profession. It is his duty to know the important events in the history of his country and be able to uphold its traditions.

It is the duty of every American citizen to serve his community by participating and giving support to its civic and welfare organizations. The greatest duty of a citizen is to prepare to earn a living for himself and those who are dependent upon him for support. These are the most important duties of a good citizen.

Words.

I hear it in the tree tops,
In the swamps and in the dale,
I hear those loving words,
Words which we ought to hail.

They bring back lovely memories
Of the past long ago
When I was just a little boy,
Oh, I can't tell you, 'cause I know, you know.

All those kind and loving words
I can not tell you why—
They'll always live forever more;
Those words could never die.

Just those words, those little words,
Will bring to every one—whether glad or sad—
A loving, tender, priceless thought,
Whether good or bad.

And now when I get lonely
Those very words will come to me,
And I will think and think about them;
How wonderful they seem to be.

And now just tell me other words
That could take their place—mother
Could take the sweet place of these words
And in person, "my mother."

Spring Is Here.

Spring is here! Spring is here!
Hasn't it brought us heaps of cheer?
To hear the birds sing again
And see flowers along the lane.

Spring is here! Spring is here!
Warm weather is so near.
Don't you hear the birds chirp with glee,
And see the grass o'er meadow and lea?

Spring is here! Spring is here-
Everybody shout with cheer,
Because the best season of the year is here,
And summer time is drawing near.

Violets.

Spring has come! I'm quite sure now,
I saw a robin in a tree
He showed his flaming breast to me
And twittered gaily on a bough.

Spring has come! 'Tis really true,
A cardinal flashed his plumage red,
He seemed not in the least afraid,
"Cheer up, cheer up, for skies are blue."

But these are signs that might be wrong,
For Robin oft stays all year round,
Is here when snow is on the ground,
And Cardinal ever sings his song.

But still I'm sure, and well may be—
I searched in hidden nooks and vales,
And lo, I found on scented trails
Spring's messengers, her violets wee!

The Little Brook.

Little brook, little brook, where do you go?
You move along, along so very slow;
You seem contented to sing your song
As you merely ripple and gurgle along.
In the winter with ice you're frozen over,
For the ice is to be your winter
cover;
But when spring comes, you're rippling as ever
As if the end of your life will be never!
Do you ever grow impatient or tired,
Or do you think you are admired
For your beauty and your little song,
As you continuously ripple along?

And drop
and drop
and drop.

SPRING PLANTING. Drawing by Hazel Robey, Washington, D. C

When a Rainy Day Counts.

The sun was rolling its usual course across the sky, and over the green hills, sparkling brooks, and in particular over an unusual bright green, valley. Here the rows of green vegetables were as evenly planted as if some master-hand had done it.

In a cool grove of trees nestled a quaint, picturesque, dwelling with the most beauiful garden one would ever wich to see. In a fine old rocker by the bird fountain dozed a dear old lady. She certainly looked comfortable as she reclined in the soft sofa pillows arranged by loving hands.

Somewhere could be heard the whistle of a boy approaching the old lady awakened suddenly and glanced over her shoulder just in time to see her 15-year-old grandson coming The boy in blue overalls smiled merrily as he seated himself at her feet.

"Well grandma," he said, as he looked through the trees at the even rows of cultivated land basking in the afternoon sun. "If it doesn't rain soon it looks like dad will have to give up the farm."

The old lady sighed. Then said cheerfully.

"Don't worry dear. God will be sure to send us rain. He just wouldn't see us give up the house and land after working all of these years."

Bob tossed the light, wavy hair from his forehead and looked at his grandmother with bright blue eyes.

"You are right, granny, God wouldn't do such a thing. But the leaves are beginning to turn brown and fall off. But, yet, there is still time. It isn't too late."

He arose, bid his grandmother good-by and disappeared among the trees.

Late that afternoon Bob was busy putting the horses away for the night when Dorothy, Bob's nearest neighbor, appeared coming down the road.

"Hello Dot!" he greeted as she approached. Dorothy smiled and waved to him. After he had finished they walked toward the garden. Bob was saying:

"You know Dot, grandma will be 70 in a couple of months. Winter is coming and she is not as spry as she used to be. She has been awfully good to me I had planned from what money I will receive from my part of the crops and with a little help from dad, to get her a radio. It would be lots of company for her during the long winter days when I'm at school.

After he had finished, Dot exclaimed:

"Oh Bob! That's a fine idea I know she would love it. I hope it rains.

At this moment they came upon the old lady rocking back and forth in the rocker. She smiled gently upon them as they seated themselves at her feet. Here they spent a happy hour talking to the grandmother.

Weeks passed. The crops grew worse and worse. Then one night Bob awoke to hear a strange noise on the roof. He listened for a long minute before he sprang from the bed and reached his hand out of the window to make sure he wasn't dreaming. He felt the cool, wet, drops upon the back of his hand. It was a long time before he went to sleep again that night.

That was only the first shower. A few days later it really rained. Bob spent the afternoon at Dorothy's house looking over a radio catalogue and discussing with her which one would be the nicest. He did not forget to make her promise to go with him when he went to buy it.

The grandmother's birhday drew near. The crops were sold and ones for fall planted. Last but not least the day to purchase the radio arrived.

Dot's big brother drove them to town early on the grandmother's birthday. They spent some time in the store and finally decided on the one they wanted.

Late that afternoon Dot returned to Bob's place in time to find him assisting his grandmother into the house. After they entered they found many friends in the living room. The old lady expressed her surprise and found a seat between Dot and Bob on the sofa.

Yes the radio had been delivered that afternoon and the men had fixed it up. Everything was in readiness.

Bob's dad arose and stood in front of the fire place while he gave a pleasant talk to those around. He told them how glad he was for them to be there on his mother's birthday and now he wanted them to hear the first radio in that section. He stepped over to it and turned the knob. Instantly a low stream of music flowed forth. Every one held their breath, and presently a beautiful voice sang a lovely song. Everybody listened intently and when it was finished they all smiled happily.

I am sure, in the days that followed, the grandmother was never lonely.

The Life of a Doll.

I am a very beautiful doll in a large department store. Many other dolls surround me. A beautiful lady is picking me up. She is fondling me She smiles at me. "What an adorable doll! I'm sure Jean will like his for her birthday," she says.

The clerk has wrapped me in some thick paper. The lady is walking with me a long distance. Now she unwraps me. I am in a very elaborately furnished room. A little girl is runing toward me. "Oh, you beautiful little creature," she says as she picks me up in her little, plump arms

"Jean, this is your birthday gift from me," her mother said.

Little Jean ran over to her mother and gave her a kiss and said, "Mother, I'll name her Joyce, after you."

Jean and I had lovely times together. She bought me many things. I believed the little blue bed she bought me was the nicest, it is so soft and pretty. I love to sleep in it.

Ah! Years have sped by swiftly. I am now very old and ragged. Jean never plays with me any more.

I wonder why Jean is bringing that little girl in the house.

"Mary, I want to give you this little doll. I am too old to play with Joyce any more," Jean said.

My little mistress took me away. I lived with Mary for a year.

William Shakespeare.

William Shakespeare was born in the village of Stratford, beside the Avon River, on the 24th of April, 1564. He was the third child of John Shakespeare and Mary Arden. Shakespeare went to the Stratford Grammar School, where he learned a little Latin and less Greek. When he was 14 years old Shakespeare had to leave school to help his father.

When he was 18 years old he married Anne Hathaway, a peasant girl 8 years older than himself. Three years after this he went to London. Soon after arriving in London he became connected with a theatrical company, which was headed by the famous actor, James Burbage. A few years later Burbage and his company moved into a new theater called the Globe, and here Shakespeare wrote nearly all the plays which have made him famous. He became shareholder, or part owner, in the Globe Theater and made a comfortable fortune out of the theatrical business When he was 50 years old he retired to Stratford and lived in a house called New Place, which he had bought some years before, and wrote no more plays. He died there in 1616 at the age of 52 and was buried in the old church beside the quiet Avon.

Admiral Dewey.

(Awarded $1 Special Prize.)

On a quiet morning in the town of Montpelier, Vt., there was born a man that would stand out in American history everlastingly. This fine example of a robust American boy, playing among the healthy mountains of Vermont, bettering himself physically and mentally, was born in 1837. At this time Vermont was a nature-loving State, having many animals, wild life and undeveloped land. In this splendid environment George Dewey could hunt or play, but always he developed his character until he was a commanding officer in the United States Navy.

Admiral Dewey was appointed to the Naval Academy on September 23, 1854. After a few years of hard training and studying he graduated. Thus Admiral Dewey was started on his great career. He was a past midshipman and in 1858 he was with Farragut's squadron which forced the passage of Fort St. Philip and Fort Jackson, April, 1862.

Admiral Dewey was afterward on several vessels in North Atlantic blockading squadron, and then in European squadron. Later on he was on various duties and at different stations. He was promoted to the rank of commander in 1872. In 1884 Dewey was appointed captain, a rather high position, and at length he was appointed commodore in 1896.

In January, 1898, Admiral Dewey assumed command of the Asiatic squadron, and on May 1 of the same year he entered Manila Bay, destroyed the Spanish Asiatic squadron, completely destroying it, and further showing his naval ability, he captured all other vessels and land batteries without the loss of a single American on his side.

Immediately upon the receipt of the official news of victory he was promoted to rear admiral and thanked by resolution of Congress. He was promoted to admiral, a title which he retained until his death in 1917.

SPRINGTIME JOYS. Awarded $1. Drawing by Frances Marshall.

The Pets' Corner

Edited by Ding-How of Hydegree (Mascot of The Junior Post).

WE have been very busy all week in the Pets' Corner office because so many boys and girls who belong to this corner have been bringing in their stories so that they can look at my typewriter, my scissors and my paste pot and my big blue pencil. They liked my eyeglasses, too. Bow, wow, wow, wow!

Many of the boys and girls of the Pets' Corner belong to the Children of the American Revolution and they attended the convention this week to tell all about what their ancestors did to help to win the Revolutionary War and to help the Nation ever since. They talked a lot about being brave. Of course I did not say much but the Pekingese family, which is my family, were members of the early Lion family and they were as brave as brave as could be.

Our family is also related to the Dog family, which has had many noble heroes in it ever since the beginning of history. If you do not believe it, just look up your history. Bow, wow wow. I told those children of the American Revolution all about the noble members of the family of Dog and how they stood on guard day and night to keep the enemies away from the homes of the Nation in war and peace.

Mr. Tweet says he comes from a family of heroes, too, for he is related to the Eagle family, always great fighters. From the days of Cleopatra his cousins, members of the Pigeon family, carried messages through dangerous countries for the good of their country.

He has made up a song about the Pigeons who served in the World War and the many brave acts they did. They did, but Mr. Tweet brags quite a little and sings and sings songs all day long about himself. He is singing about spring, too, and every time the spring sun shines, he jumps up to the upper story of his golden cage bungalow and tells everybody that he made the sunshine.

Dear little Mme. Queen Pekingese, who lived with Mrs. Ernest Daniel, ran out in the middle of the street the other day and along came a big truck and ran over her and she died. I was so sad for days, but I hope that the boys and girls and pets of this Pets' Corner will profit by her sad fate and not run in the street.

The two nice boys who play ball all the time with Johnny Bulldog down the street were playing right in the middle of the street the other day and machines were coming from both sides and nearly ran over them. Johnny Bulldog stood it as long as he could and then he just firmly gripped those boys by the stockings and brought them out of the street and made them play on the sidewalk.

Beauty Suydam came back last week with Little Henry and had a lot to say about spring coming in the country. But she can not write a poem about spring because she can not use the typewriter and is not an editor!

Murphy Aitchison has just been around here, singing some new songs. He sings and dances very well, but of course, is not as clever as an editor!

Mrs. Black Cat and her children just went by on their way to a picnic in the big magnolia tree in bloom around the corner. Little Furry wants to know if Pussy Willow is any relation to them, but Mrs. Black Cat looks wise and does not answer.

Dear Ding-How: My mistress reads The Junior Post every Sunday and she shows me the pets' corner. Then I thought I'd write you myself.

First I ought to introduce myself. I am Simon, a little black scottie. Last Sunday my mistress took me out to a big park where she let me loose. Goodbye Ding-How.

Martha Bacon, 1801 F street.

My Dear Ding-How: After having won first prize at the pet show I of course went around telling all my friends. Oh, I wish you could see that beautiful ribbon with its gold seal, Ding-How. Well, sir, while going around the alleys I somehow got twisted up and couldn't find my way out. I started to whimper when I saw a big dog. I stopped crying and told him about the show.

For some time I wandered about sore and lonely. My nose picked up a familiar scent and following it I came to a stately mansion. A young lady was sitting on the porch reading. It was one of the judges at the pet show. On seeing me in my sorry state she exclaimed, "Why its Jerry, the prize-winner. What's happened to you? Lost?" She took me into her house and she herself gave me a bath and dressed my sores. Later she gave me some food. In what seemed years of time Peggy and her father arrived. Ah, how glad I was to see them and I vowed never again would I wander away or let pride get the best of me.

With love, your pal, Jerry.

Margaret Pallansch, (Age 11) 1842 North Capitol street.

Dear Ding How: Bow, wow, wow! I am a Boston bulldog, named Buddy. I am a black dog with a touch of white on my head, and a short, stiff tail. I hate to brag, but I do think I am rather cute. My mistress says I am, anyway. I love to play with balls. I make my mistress angry sometimes when she has on a clean dress and I lay my dirty ball on it. I hate to hurt my mistress' feelings, but I think it is great fun. The consequence is I have to take a lonely trip to the cellar with no one to play with.

By the way, my mistress is going to buy me a collar with my name carved on it. She's a little late in buying it because Easter Sunday has passed, but I don't care because I'll be all dressed up next Sunday.

I'll have to be closing now as I am ready to eat a ham bone. M-m-m! Sounds good, doesn't it? Bow-wow (Good-by) till we meet again. Your old pal, BUDDY.

P. S. My little mistress is Annette McCarty (age 10). 2019 North Capitol street northeast.

Dear Ding-How: Well, here I am again. To refresh your memory I am a poodle with large black eyes and fuzzy white fur.

I suppose my mistress is right when she says I am always getting into some kind of mischief. I got punished the other day for digging up some flowers and chewing on the roots. Whenever my mistress hangs stockings on the line I have a lot of fun pulling them, but when she finds it out it's just too bad for me. Well, Ding How, I advise you not to try any of these sports (if you haven't already) because you may get into trouble. I did, anyway.

My mistress always reads the pets' corner to me and I enjoy it very much. I can do lots of tricks and my mistress is always trying to teach me a new one. Well, I will sign off. Toodlelo. LINDY.

P. S. My mistress is Ellen Beatty (age 13), Savage, Md.

Spring.

The fairy-like buds have lifted their heads,
They have all donned their gowns of blues, yellows and reds.
The sunshine seems brighter and no
days seem dreary;
All hearts seem much lighter—all creatures seem cheery

Our thoughts wander heavenward to
God in our praise,
And we thank Him for sending such beautiful days.
The birds join in chorus as loudly
they sing.
Praise God in Heaven—all hail to good spring.

ARCHITECTURAL BEAUTY.
Drawing by Augustine Trois, Washington, D. C.

Girl Scouts Are a Great Asset to the Nation.

Girl scouting comes to a girl at a time in her life when she may become a great asset to her country by giving her constructive work and training without which she may be a great drawback by wasting her time on frivolous things.

Girl scouting teaches the girls of today the fundamentals of life which the girls of pioneer days had to learn through necessity. It teaches them things concerning the home, health, nature, sports, foreign countries, first-aid, care of children, outdoor activities, clothes, crafts, dancing, astronomy, the use of musical instruments, nursing, and electricity. It also teaches a girl how to be handy in almost anything.

I wonder how many girls today who are not scouts would know what to do if they suddenly found themselves or someone else in deep water; or if they found someone in a gas-filled room, or saw a small child run over; or if they were lost in the middle of a forest and someone was badly injured? I will wager that not many girls would be prepared for one of these emergencies. Girl Scouts are always prepared, not only for these emergencies which I have mentioned, for example, but for any and every emergency which occurs.

The Girl Scout Promise, which every girl pledges to keep upon becoming a Tenderfoot is:

"On my honor I will try to do my duty to God and my country, to help other people at all times, to obey the Girl Scout laws."

Each girl makes this promise voluntarily, which, of course, helps to bind the girls together.

The Girl Scout laws:

1. "A Girl Scout's honor is to be trusted." Any one may rely upon a Girl Scout to do anything and do it honestly and promptly.

2. "A Girl Scout is loyal." She is loyal not only to her friends but to herself, her family, her country, her city, her church, her school and to every one and everything. When she says she will do a thing she will not stop until she has succeeded, no matter how many before her have failed.

3. "A Girl Scout's duty is to be useful and to help others." A Girl Scout does at least one good turn daily, and she does it without boasting. She never gets in anybody's way. She is always ready and willing to help others.

4. "A Girl Scout is a friend to all and a sister to every other Girl Scout." This means that no matter who you are, you are never friendless as long as there is a single Girl Scout left in the world. Each Girl Scout is like a sister to every other Girl Scout.

5. "A Girl Scout is courteous." When a Girl Scout does her good turn, she does it in a polite and pleasant way. She is never rude nor talks back to her elders.

6. "A Girl Scout is a friend to animals." Whenever a Girl Scout finds some one mistreating any kind of an animal she always persuades that person that he or she is doing the wrong and unkind thing. A Girl Scout, of course, is never found mistreating an animal.

7. "A Girl Scout obeys orders." A Girl Scout obeys any order, and she does it promptly, cheerfully and willingly.

8. "A Girl Scout is cheerful." Everything a Girl Scout does she does with a smile, even if she is annoyed.

9. "A Girl Scout is thrifty." Not only her money is spent wisely, but also her time. She plans ahead and saves money for a time when she might need it more or when she may be able to help some one else with it. She does not waste her precious moments.

10. "A Girl Scout is clean in thought, word and deed." Although this is the last law, it is never forgotten. A Girl Scout thinks, says, does and reads only nice things. Whatever is worth doing at all to a Girl Scout is worth doing well.

If all the girls in the Nation obey these laws and keep the promise, motto and slogan, the Nation will be much better. Of course, there are reasons other than those I have mentioned, but as I have a limited time I will conclude, hoping I have convinced every one that Girl Scouts are a great asset to the Nation.

Spring.

Happy is Spring,
With birds on the wing.
Every place she walks
She seems to talk;
Here comes Spring.

Within her gown she fills,
With golden daffodils.
Her lovely towering trees,
That sway in the breeze;
They seem to say,
"Here comes Spring."

INTERNATIONAL BEAUTIES. Drawing by Ruth Thompson, Washington, D. C.

In The Editor's Letter Box

Dear Editor: Inclosed is a short description of the Monument for the corner on Our City. I hope that it is good enough to be printed.

Early this morning I went to see the cherry blossoms before it was very crowded and I sincerely enjoyed their beauty and faint fragrance. I am sure that everyone who has already seen them enjoyed them as much as I did, even if it was a little cool.

The Washington Monument.

The Washington Monument located in Washington, D. C., is 555 feet high. It covers 55 feet square at the bottom and 34 feet square at the top. The material of which it is made is granite and the monument terminates in a pyramid of pure aluminum.

During some parts of the year this aluminum cap can be seen from different parts of the city. The foundation of rock and cement is 36 feet deep and 126 feet square. The corner stone was laid in 1848 and the Monument is a memorial to George Washington, our first President. It was finished in 1885, 37 years after the corner stone was laid and is known to be the highest piece of masonry in the world.

Dear Editor: Thank you very much for publishing Lindy's letter and mine. I am inclosing another letter from Lindy and a poem. The reason my poem is on spring is because it is such a beautiful season and one can't help writing about it. I hope you publish my poem and my pet's letter.

Dear Editor: I enjoy writing poems very much. If you are so kind as to put one or even all of the poems in your paper at some time I shall be happy. Your constant reader.

JAMES LAMPE.

Dear Editor: Thank you very much for printing my story and my letters. The 300 points I gained are very much appreciated.

I am sending in a little poem called "The Mother Goose Parade" and I hope you find it good enough to put in our little paper.

Hasn't this weather been lovely? It may be the kind that gives some people "spring fever" but I can't stay indoors on such beautiful warm sunny days. If you'll pardon the slang, it makes me want to be "on the go" all the time. I know most of our readers agree with me.

I was surprised to see a letter all the way from Brazil in our last paper. We certainly are growing, aren't we?

We have only two and one-half months to go to school. I'm going to try to make them count more than I did the others.

We had an informal debate in history class last week. Our topic was, "Resolved, That the Mexican War was a credit to the United States." The side I was on took the negative, and we won by a very close margin. The debate was practically demanded by the whole class, after constant discussion on the topic. We still argue about it. Sincerely,

MILDRED MILLER (age 15).

Spring.

Spring is here
Bright and clear,

And nod their heads in glee;
This too, is a sign that Spring is here.

(Awarded $1 Special Prize.)

Admiral Dewey was born on December 26, 1837, in Montpelier, Vt. He was youngest of three brothers. When Dewey was 5 years old his mother died. George by nature and disposition was always wanting something to happen wherever he was. One of his favorite deeds of bravado was that of descending blindfolded the Statehouse steps. While the onlookers wondered whether he would slip the rest of the way or take the flight head first.

One time when a river nearby was swollen, George took his father's horse and wagon and started to drive across the stream. The wagon was submerged. George crawled to the horse's back and rode to the shore, wet to the skin. When he was safe, George thought of the reckoning that was to come with his father. When the latter returned he found George in bed shivering anticipating the punishment. George cried, "You ought to be glad you are alive." His father most likely though the same, for George was not punished, though his parent lost a good wagon.

When he was 14 years of age his father sent him to the Naval Academy at Annapolis. George entered in 1854. As they were parting, his father said: "George I've done all I can for you. The rest you must do for yourself." George kept this advice in his mind.

He graduated in 1858, fifth in class. He saw service in the Civil War as executive officer of the Mississippi, under Farragut, during the battle of New Orleans and Port Hudson. He also took part in the battle of Fort Fisher.

On December 7, 1897, Dewey sailed from San Francisco to take command of the Asiatic Squadron. On February 25, 1898, orders were sent to the American squadron to be ready for war. Dewey asked for ammunition and coal, and spent much of his time collecting provisions. At 12:15 p. m., on the 25th, this cable came from Secretary Long:

"War has commenced between the United States and Spain. Proceed at once to Philippine Islands. Commence operations particularly against the Spanish fleet. You must capture vessels or destroy. Use utmost endeavor."

Dewey delayed till the 27th for Consul Williams, who had important information. In the morning of April 30 the Boston and Concord were sent ahead to scout. Some said they had heard firing in the direction which the scouts had taken, and the Baltimore was sent to support these scouts if necessary. At 12:30 p. m. the squadron started through the entrance of the bay. About 10 minutes after midnight, when the fleet was half-way through, the El Faile battery opened fire. The fleet passed safely. At 5 a. m. the next morning the enemy opened fire at long range. When 5,000 yards of water separated the fleets, Dewey turned to Capt. Gridley and said, "You may fire when you are ready, Gridley." At 5:06 a. m. two mines exploded near the American squadron. Then shot and shell went whistling through the air. The American bullets found their mark and did fearful damage to the Spanish vessels, but the Spanish guns struck the American vessels only a few times. At 7:35 a. m. a report came to Dewey that the ammunition was low. He withdrew then for redistribution of ammunition and for breakfast. When Dewey returned there remained only the shore batteries and the gallant Ulloa. The battle was won for the Americans.

A French officer who had witnessed the battle said that the American fire was terrific because of the rapidity and accuracy. Dewey received this telegram from Assistant Secretary of the Navy:

"Every American is your debtor.
"ROOSEVELT."

He was also made rear admiral and then admiral. A sword was presented to Dewey from Congress when he returned to the United States.

Cherry Blossoms.

Cherry blossoms bright and gay,
Sent from a land that's far away,
Casting your reflections pink and bright,

Ruffling the dainty, tiny pink flowers,
Nodding and shaking your pretty bright heads,
Telling us "Spring is here, winter is dead."

You are such a fickle lady
Of moods so versatile,
Whether skies are bright or shady
You change them all the while.

In the midst of cheery laughter
You often change to tears;
No one knows what will come after
Your mischievous self appears.

You keep us guessing, all upset,
And tease us every day;
Yet we still love you and regret
The time you go away.

WHEN IT'S SO EASY TO BE RID OF MR. WATER-THIN...
WHY TAKE THE LOAFER ALONG?

"MR. WATER-THIN" is the quart or more of non-lubricating waste oil that ordinary refining leaves in every gallon of motor oil.

But there's no "water-thin" in Quaker State Motor Oil. Quaker State removes this useless stuff by an extra refining step developed by Quaker State—removes it by the most modern refining in the industry! And Quaker State replaces this waste with rich, full-bodied lubricant.

So when you buy Quaker State you get four full quarts of lubricant to the gallon of Quaker State—not three quarts of lubricant and one of waste. You get an extra quart of lubricant. You get a bargain in oil that has made Quaker State the largest selling Pennsylvania Oil in the world!

Quaker State is convenient to buy. One dealer in every four sells it—and displays the familiar green and white service station sign.

Quaker State costs 35c per quart (a bit more in Canada and at some points in the West) and it's the shrewdest oil buy you can make. Start saving your car—and your money—with Quaker State Motor Oil.

Hard ways to end FAT

No Longer Necessary

Under old ideas, the ways of fighting excess fat were hard and slow, and very often harmful. Abnormal exercise and diet were required.

But science discovered, a few years ago, that a certain gland largely controlled nutrition. Its chief function is to help change food into fuel and energy. When it is defective—weak—too much food goes to fat.

So modern doctors, the world over, are now combating that condition. They are feeding to the over-fat what that weak gland is failing to supply.

The results are now seen in every circle. Excess fat has been fast disappearing. Youthful figures, new vitality take its place, as you see everywhere.

A Convenient Form

Marmola prescription tablets offer this modern method in a convenient form. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory to fit the average case. People have used them for 24 years—millions of boxes of them. Users have told others. Now most of you have friends who can show and tell you what Marmola does.

Go try this method, which presents the utmost in its ideal form. It supplies what your thyroid gland is failing to supply.

Watch your weight come down. Watch the new health and vigor which appear. Stop when you are satisfied. After that, use Marmola only as you need it to keep a normal figure.

Do this now, because of what this method has done for millions everywhere. Cease the hard and harmful methods, and the false. Do what modern doctors do with such remarkable success. Order a box today.

A Remarkable Test

$5675.00 WILL BE PAID IN 50 PRIZES

The great Niagara, rushing over the rocks, leaping over the precipice, falling over one hundred feet, is one of the Seven Wonders of the World. As the heavy mist lifts, queer forms are created, some of which look very much like the faces of beautiful girls.

CAN YOU FIND 4 OR MORE FACES HIDDEN IN THE MIST? It requires sharp eyes, as most of the faces are dim. As a test of your patience and your skill to qualify for the opportunity to win the Big First Prize of $2250.00, we ask you to FIND 4 FACES. It may be necessary to turn the page around or even upside down, but search carefully. Make no mistake.

$5675.00 will positively be paid in 50 Grand Prizes including 5 automobiles, or cash in place of automobiles if preferred.

AS A SPECIAL REWARD for promptness, $750.00 will be paid to the First Prize Winner for quick action.

IF YOU WANT TO WIN FIRST PRIZE, find at least 4 faces, mark a circle around each, and rush your answer to me at once to qualify for this Grand Opportunity to win. Someone will positively win $2250.00. It may be you.

Duplicate prizes will be paid in case of ties. This offer is only to persons living in the 48 United States, but excludes persons living in Chicago, Ill. and Louisville, Ky. There is no obligation on your part. IT'S NOT NECESSARY TO SPEND ONE PENNY to win a big cash prize.

The clock which tells simultaneously the time in all parts of the world, stands in front of J. Jessop & Sons' Jewelry Store, in San Diego. It is equipped with 20 dials, each of which denotes the time in a different section of the globe. The huge timepiece stands 21 feet high and is 27 years old. It is jeweled with real tourmaline, topaz, agate and jade, and was made entirely by hand. It is automatically wound by electricity.

The "world's youngest giant," Robert Wadlow, 13-year-old schoolboy, is 7 feet 4 inches tall. At ten, little Robert was only 6 feet 6½ inches tall, and weighed but 196 pounds. At eleven, he had sprouted to an even 7 feet, and in two years has added 4 more inches to that stupendous height, and increased his weight to 272 pounds. If Wadlow continues to grow at this rate, he will be the tallest man that ever lived. Incidentally, Robert's feet have kept pace with the rest of his body, for he wears a size 25 shoe.

Mary Bevan prizes as her greatest asset, what most women would feel like covering with a veil. She considers herself the homeliest of all women and stands ready to defend her title. After joining a circus, she faced life with a brighter outlook, for people pay money to see her. What other homely woman is there that can accomplish as much?
